

GETS DATA FOR NOVEL IN DESERT ON HONEYMOON

Leaving behind him the glad, green hills of Oregon just before the Lewis and Clark fair in 1905, Paul De Laney, newspaper writer and adventurer, accompanied by his bride, headed for the arid regions of Death Valley, where he spent his honeymoon.

De Laney has just returned to Portland an author. The color for the novel he has written was obtained in the treeless sections where gold hunters trudged and perished, swore and loved, in all the picturesque scenes that such an untamed district possessed.

OREGON AUTHOR VISITS OLD PORTLAND FRIENDS

Paul De Laney

"The Toll of the Sands" reflects a part of De Laney's life in that God-forsaken country.

Shortly after his arrival on the border of Death Valley, De Laney utilized his legal knowledge to advantage and he was made a deputy prosecutor for Nye county, Nevada. He sent one man "over the road" for 99 years while filling this position.

It was De Laney's rare experience to cross Death Valley. The arduous journey was made in three nights of travel with the thermometer never under 110 degrees between sunup and sundown. Travel by day was impossible, the heat registering as high as 127 degrees in the shade.

De Laney and his companions rode on burros, poked their water (and every time one took a swig from the precious container the other fellow would cast a glowering glance at him), dodged rattlesnakes, and felt kind of uncanny at the sight of human skeletons which occasionally lined the way.

De Laney was formerly in the employ of The Journal and in this capacity toured Oregon in a "prairie schooner." He was at one time managing editor of the East Oregonian at Pendleton. At present he is making his home at Denver, Colo.

EMBASSIES IN WASHINGTON TO STAY WET

Washington, March 12.—(I. N. S.)—Diplomats will be allowed to bring in all the liquors they need here to their own residences, which are now held to be strictly "foreign territory" and not within the "dry" law.

This declaration of the state department, it became known today, relieves a delicate situation on the issue, which clears the way for diplomats sorely perplexed to know how their diminishing "wet" stocks are to be replenished.

N. McArthur and Henry Waldo of Oregon, former Governor Frank R. Gooding of Idaho and Senator Miles Polinder of Washington are named among the incorporators.

Mosquitoes Ate Up $5000 Worth of His Leg, Plaintiff Says

New York, March 12.—(U. P.)—It may not be written in the log of the Gulf Refining company's tanker Gulf Coast but, nevertheless, it is true—according to Hendricus de Raay, 31, of Brooklyn.

De Raay came into court today with a tale of the sea that made even old Atlantic sailors attentive ears and shiver their chills to the windward. While a member of the crew of the Gulf Coast, De Raay said, the vessel ran into a host of mosquitoes of voracious appetites.

The mosquitoes, he said, ate up $5,000 worth of his leg. De Raay asserted—at least that's what he asked for damages from their bites, when he filed suit against the refining company in Brooklyn today.

The company filed a general denial.

Chamberlain Gives Senate Suggestions On Houser Inquiry

Washington, March 12.—(WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE JOURNAL)—Senator Chamberlain in discussing the resolution for an investigation by the senate committee of the grain corporation and Max H. Houser's grain connections, read from the floor of the senate a portion of Houser's letter recently published in Portland. Chamberlain said it seemed to him that an investigation of the Houser matter should be left with the department of justice. He called attention to the failure of the Spokane grand jury to return any indictment, although it gave publicity to an attack upon him by Reed. The resolution was adopted without opposition.

Sentenced Socialists Obtain New Delay

Chicago, March 12.—(I. N. The five men are at liberty on bonds.

$125,000 Agreed on For the Protection Of Outside Forests

Washington, March 12.—(WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE JOURNAL)—The agricultural committee of the senate has finally agreed to place the appropriation under the Weeks law for protection of forests outside of the reserves at $125,000 instead of $75,000, carried by the bill as it came from the house.

This amendment was urged by Senator McNary and other western members of the committee. At first $100,000 was tentatively agreed on, but $25,000 was added on the plea that with increased costs this will be no more than equivalent to the $100,000 which was granted in the present fiscal year.
