

RAPID TRANSIT TO JAIL REVEALS PECK OF TROUBLE

Man Who Had Dined in Style at Leading Hotel Finds Self in Jail Facing an Inquiry.

Novels couldn't well hold all the adventures and misadventures of Leon Camusula, now in jail awaiting deportation hearings, if the evidence said to have been collected by immigration inspectors here is a criterion.

"Poor Leon," sighs Immigration Inspector R. P. Bonham, "it certainly must have been a comedown to jump into the county jail when only the night before he had dined at the leading hotel." He had entertained four ladies at dinner at the Portland hotel.

SAYS HE IS ABUSED. And for answer Camusula, up in the county jail, is swearing by all that's good and holy that he has been abused and that in his incarceration the United States is taking a decidedly unfriendly attitude towards Canada.

For 'twas Canada when Leon came. That's just what brought about his arrest, for immigration authorities believe he entered the United States without proper inspection and further came here under contract, violating the contract labor law.

No piker was Camusula, according to evidence which is slowly being mosaiced.

CUTS BIG SWATH. He took apartments at the fashionable Nortonia hotel, worked for the Oregon Marine & Fisheries Supply company, 107 First street, and met a host of people who thought he was "there." He cut quite a swath, according to Immigration Inspector Bonham.

Even did he peck as to plight his troth with a charming Portland girl. The girl so declares, but Leon is obdurate. "It isn't so," he declares.

The girl didn't wear an engagement ring, she said, because Camusula was going to present it to her at a dinner party. However, she had seen the ring. It's all very well and nice to some engaged to a charming Portland man, rules Bonham, but not when one is said to have left a wife in Canada and has been co-resident in a divorce case.

BOOTLEGGING IS CHARGED. Battling 1,000 in society, Leon branched out in bootlegging, officials declare, only to be nipped before he got well under way.

His scheme was this, they declare: He represented that he had become a Scotch whiskey—real honest-to-goodness whiskey—stored in a bonded warehouse in British Columbia. Now, under the prohibition act in Canada, according to Camusula, liquor can be shipped from a bonded warehouse to any foreign port.

What handler, considering his connection with the Oregon Marine & Fisheries Supply company, than to meet his own liquor shipments as they arrived along the waterfront. He sold the whiskey, it is said, for slightly more than $15 a case, thus showing poor business judgment. He even issued receipts for money received.

SCHEME WORKS WELL. Approaching many business men, his scheme readily was backed by willing dollar holders, Camusula's plan seeming to be a dabr.

But Leon either spent the money or the ships scheduled to carry his liquor from British Columbia to Portland didn't come, declares Bonham. The immigration chief believes Camusula had real liquor and really meant to sell it, he says.

About $2000 had been collected from Portland business men who wanted liquor bad enough to disregard the prohibition laws. Now, one by one, they're explaining to Bonham, who holds evidence showing financial transactions with Camusula, he says.

And Camusula, up in the county jail, keeps sending out telegrams to high government officials in Canada. They'll stop this effort to his country, he believes, and get him free.

Benton County Joins Forces Working for Products of Oregon

All Benton county is cooperating in an educational campaign to enlighten its residents as to the meaning of Oregon products, and more especially to make Oregon Products week, commencing March 22, in Corvallis, an unqualified success, says A. G. Clark, secretary of the Associated Industries of Oregon. J. E. Snyder, president of the Ministerial association, has urged all the ministers in Corvallis to talk upon the value of Oregon products to their congregations. March 21, the associated industries have offered $90 in prizes for the best decorated window in the city during the week, and a wide variety of prizes are being put up for the best essays by school children on why we should buy Oregon products.

In the grades will be given a child's chair, a cap, a box of chocolates, a suit of clothes, dress, gloves; in the high school for the best essay will be given a sweater, a blanket and a suit case, while to college students the manufacturers are offering an Indiana robe, a trunk and a pair of hiking shoes.
