

SCHAFFER LEAVES U. FRIDAY FOR NEW EASTERN POSITION

Head of History Department for 20 Years; to Direct Wisconsin State Historical Society Work.

University of Oregon, Eugene, March 20.—"I am leaving the University of Oregon with a feeling of the deepest gratitude to all of my associates, to the president for his unflinching courtesy and kindness and his solicitude care for my interests and those of my family," said Dr. Joseph Schaffer, head of the department of history, Friday, March 20, after 20 years' service with the university, to take a position as superintendent of the Wisconsin State Historical Society.

Dr. Schaffer entered the University of Oregon in 1900 as instructor in the history department and has been associated with that department since that time.

HAS WIDE ACQUAINTANCE

"In my career here it has been my good fortune to travel considerably over the state, to have had wide acquaintance in various communities and in consequence my acquaintance with the people of this state is rather extensive. I was sorry to leave them, but I do so with regret, because in my opinion the people of this state constitute a society that will compare very favorably with that of any other state in the union. For one thing, the people of Oregon are more homogeneous in character than those of most of the other states. Besides, there is a high general average of intelligence and a prevalent idealism which is peculiarly grateful to one who is interested as I have always been in social improvement. I have been in thorough sympathy with the same efforts made in this state in the direction of progressive legislation for the amelioration of social conditions where these have been backward; and I sincerely hope that this progress is not to be followed with reaction, but to be continuous, though strictly evolutionary and not revolutionary.

CAME IN ON OREGON TRAIL

"I came to Oregon 20 years ago, entering the state through the line of the old Oregon trail, which Professor Young and I traversed partly on foot and partly on horseback. In consequence, I have from the first been deeply interested in the history of Oregon and the Pacific Northwest. Five years after my arrival, having devoted all my spare time and my summers in the mountains, I was afforded the opportunity of publishing the first edition of my book, 'A History of the Pacific Northwest.' This, however, was only the beginning of my study of the history of the region which has been carried on continually down to the present time. During the year 1907-08 I was given leave of absence for the purpose of study and research abroad. Most of my time was spent in London, where, through the courtesies of the British foreign office I was given access to the manuscript collection relating to the Oregon boundary question. This study enabled me to rewrite definitively the history of the Oregon boundary dispute which heretofore has been treated solely from the American point of view. The later edition, 1918, of my history of the Pacific Northwest therefore contains a wholly new treatment of the Oregon question.

SEEKS RESEARCH WORK

"But there is one opportunity which I crave above most others that is denied me in the circumstances of our university, namely, the opportunity to pursue lines of productive research in connection with my teaching. I have, indeed, done considerable research work since coming to Oregon, but this has been done at odd times during the school terms, in summers, and by taking an occasional year off on part salary.

Dr. Joseph Schaffer

to cut loose from my present associations in Oregon and establish myself at some point where abundant materials for historical research are accessible, and in a situation whose duties will permit some time, regularly, for research purposes.

"It may be a matter of interest to some readers to know something of the plans, hopes and expectations with which I return to Wisconsin in the capacity of superintendent of the Wisconsin Historical Society. I am looking forward to the development of the recent history of local societies on the basis of the schools, the accumulation of vast new masses of documentary material not hitherto considered of great historical value, the classification and editing of this material, and ultimately the writing of a comprehensive history of the state."
