

BRITISH LEGION IS PROPOSED TO FIGHT BOLSEVISM

London, March 22.—Major General Sir Edward Woodward, K.C. M.G., one of the notable personal forces in the world war, has launched a movement against Bolshevism and all other political and social theories that contemplate success through violence. He calls his movement the British Legion and its proposed scope is co-extensive with the British empire. In the main the principles of the British Legion are identical with those of the American Legion. The latter indeed, General Woodward announces, is his model.

"If democracy and Christian civilization are to hold their own," said General Woodward, "constructive methods must be devised for their defense. From a hundred different directions, the crowning possessions of mankind are menaced.

ANTI-SOCIAL MEN BUST
"Bolshevism menaces them. Direct action or the political strike menaces them. They are menaced by audacious minorities of many sorts—minorities bent more upon their own purposes than upon democratic fairness or Christian morality. Without exception these anti-democratic, anti-Christian minorities are organized and active. They never cease to think, preach and plot, biding their time until they think it safe to fall upon peaceful defenseless society.

"I am out to fight them. I am out to organize the good citizenship of the British empire for the preservation of its political and religious heritage. If public opinion can be aroused to the imminence of the danger I have no doubt of my ability to succeed.

"Humbly I submit that my experience at the war office, first as director of mobilization and later as director of organization is a measure of my fitness for my new task. As it stands British society would be helpless in the face of a determined outbreak of anarchy.

MINORITIES DANGEROUS
"A few thousand desperate men could play havoc with the existing order in our cities before any effective police or military resistance could be available. Two hundred desperadoes could take possession of a city of 200,000 more quickly almost than it takes to tell it. True they might eventually be thrown out, but not before they had done much upon the community a plague of bloodshed, outrage, robbery and arson. These are not the times when decent men, women and children may be exposed to such perils. The unrest, dissatisfaction and criminal instincts are too threatening in every country for the good-citizen to remain longer unprepared for its own defense.

"As more than 1,000,000 Americans are now organized to support the duly constituted authorities against extremism and lawlessness of whatever brand, so I purpose that the British empire shall be organized to safeguard its democratic order, its religious institutions and the sanity of its homes.

AGGRESSION NOT PROPOSED
"We shall take a voluntary roll call of the people as to whether they want a free government or an orgy of anarchy in this country. If they want freedom and law they will be asked to sign our declaration of faith. Thus enrolled they will be communicated with and told in detail what they are to do and how they are to do it if violence suddenly breaks upon them.

"There will be nothing aggressive about our organization. We shall simply stand firm upon our rights as democratic citizens equipped with the individual and collective knowledge of how to preserve those rights inviolate. Our work is not that of propaganda but of action. We are not going to stir up trouble for each town and village and hope to array on our side practically the whole womanhood of the country. To our women, so wonderful in the war, I am making a special appeal to rally to the support of the British Legion."

Police Hide in Fear Of Sinn Fein Anger

Cork, March 22.—In fear of reprisals by the Sinn Fein for the killing of Lord Mayor Mac Curtain, the police were withdrawn from the streets of the city last night, public buildings being left unguarded and without sentries.

BRITISH CIVIL AND PRISONERS OF WAR LEAVING MOSCOW

By Michael Farberman

Moscow, March 8.—(Delayed.)—I have just seen the British civil prisoners and prisoners of war start for England. It was a merry and inspiring occasion. The Rev. Mr. North with a few members of the British committee, came to see the prisoners, all of whom were in good spirits. I congratulated North on the realization of his efforts.

"I am very glad to see them liberated," he replied. "This is only the first batch of civil and war prisoners. There is one officer among them. About 300 civil prisoners are still in the country and they will leave as soon as I can collect them."

SOME WILL REMAIN
"Will any of them be left in Moscow?" I asked.

"Yes," he replied. "A number of officers and a few civil prisoners who are so well off here that they are not afraid to risk a new start in the old country, want to stay. I have sent a wireless about them and I rather expect they will be encouraged to come home."

When asked about the train accommodations for the prisoners the Rev. Mr. North said: "You can see for yourself how excellent they are." We passed through the long train of some 20 big coaches, including sleepers and hospital cars, "saloon cars," two dining cars, one kitchen car with four huge shining copper kettles already containing articles being prepared for the supper, one car stocked with bread and other provisions and two luxurious cars for the accommodation of the women and civil prisoners.

CARS WELL HEATED
"I saw plenty of wood on all the cars and the travelers will not suffer from cold during their last couple of days in Russia. If in the past they have gone hungry they will have plenty to eat on this trip."

While the train was being loaded with provisions from sleighs drawn up near it the prisoners were walking up and down the platform chatting with each other. The officer had a little Union Jack sewn on one of his sleeves and was also waving a big silk Union Jack. When I tried to speak to him he listened only for a moment, shook hands, shouted "I'm a lucky boy," and off he went joyfully waving his Union Jack.

TEAPOTS ARE CARRIED
The civil prisoners, married couples and whole families with children, were mostly busy inside the cars arranging comfortable seats. Many in a truly Russian fashion were carrying teapots

FRENCH PREMIER MAKES APOLOGIES IN SERBIA FOR POOR GOVERNMENT

By Constantine Brown

Belgrade, Serbia, March 5 (via Paris, France, March 22.—Premier Proudhon in parliament today explained the country's internal and foreign situation. He began by apologizing for the fact that the government had not been formed on a broader basis with representation of all the parties, but he added that it would be a parliamentary one.

CREDITORS ARE TROUBLED
The government, he said, would submit an election bill and ask for the approval of credits. It would also propose the formation of a special parliamentary committee made up of competent lawyers to work out the details of a permanent constitution. After voting these bills parliament would be dissolved and new elections called under the provisions of the constitution.

Passing to foreign affairs the premier said that the solution of the Adriatic problem had not been satisfactory so far, though he felt that in the end some just and adequate settlement would be arrived at which would protect the interests both of Serbia and Italy and insure peaceful relations in the future.

ADMITS MISTAKES
"Many errors have been committed," he said, "but we can say that they were not on our side. Unfortunately the normal and illegal situation created in Fiume by Gabriele d'Annunzio continues and is a menace to all concerned. The legal status there should be restored."

Referring to Albania the premier said that the best solution of that problem was to let the Albanians regulate their own affairs and their relations with their neighbors under the League of Nations. For centuries, he said, they had lived in peace with their neighbors and it was not until the arrival of the Turks in Europe that the troubles began.

Premier Proudhon's statement was received with satisfaction and the members of parliament cheered him for his moderation and firmness in defending the Serbian nation.

Partnership Outside Of Wedlock Needed, Authoress Believes

London, March 22.—"Open recognition of honorable partnership outside of marriage not necessarily permanent, with proper provisions for the future guardianship of women, who should be in all cases protected."

This is the solution for Britain's great social problem—surplus women—advocated by Mrs. C. Gasquet, Harley, prominent author and sociologist, in her new book, "Women's Wild Oats," just published.

"Marriage has ceased to be a discipline; it has become an experiment," she says in the introduction to her book. "The books is the subject of intense discussion already containing articles being prepared for the press, one car stocked with bread and other provisions and two luxurious cars for the accommodation of the women and civil prisoners."

Japanese Promise Chinese They Will Treat Them Fairly

Tokio, March 15.—(U. P.)—(Delayed.)—With regard to the Foo Chow affair, the cabinet has decided to grant China the utmost concessions compatible with the dignity of Japan, it was learned today.

Relations between China and Japan, none the best since Shantung was awarded to the latter, were further strained by a riot at Foo Chow, in which Japanese Formosans raided a Y. M. C. A. and killed several Chinese. An American was wounded. The trouble was an outgrowth of a Chinese boycott of Japanese goods.

Japanese destroyers were sent to Foo Chow, and reports from Tokio were that diplomatic relations might be severed.

King Rides in War Battered Omnibus

London, March 22.—(I. N. S.)—The king "reviewed" the B48, a battered old omnibus with a long overseas record. He then stepped aboard for a ride and remarked to a member of his suite that he had never been in a bus before. He had been in a tramcar, but that "wasn't quite the same thing." The prince aren't so new to the bus game. Prince Albert is a confirmed straphanger and moves about unrecognized.
