

Oregon Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER
G. B. JACKSON, Publisher
Published every week day and Sunday morning...

THE MONEY SCANDAL
A SCANDAL has already appeared in the presidential campaign...

THE MONEY SCANDAL
It is contemporaneous with the conviction of Newberry...

THE MONEY SCANDAL
It is notable in the latter case that among the convicted defendants...

THE MONEY SCANDAL
The allegations are that the money now in use in the presidential campaign...

THE MONEY SCANDAL
That is not at all unlikely. Once such elements had a powerful hold on the government of the United States...

THE MONEY SCANDAL
Perhaps the stage is being set now for the profiteers to come back...

THE MONEY SCANDAL
"Could not vote with a party if it were dominated by groups who seek to set aside our constitutional guarantees...

THE MONEY SCANDAL
With their loot in their arms, the war profiteers are now demanding that excess profit taxes be removed...

The mails are laden with it. Is it the plan to buy the presidency and congress...

Newberry bought his senatorship while hiding his corrupt operations under a slogan of "Americanism..."

Maybe Mayor Baker, now that the milk war has been put up to him for arbitration...

ITS GREAT SERVICE
Do you know that the Portland Young Women's Christian Association is a home of friendship...

ITS GREAT SERVICE
That 7479 girls were housed, 300 of them being without funds?

ITS GREAT SERVICE
That the Travelers' Aid secretary served 8857 men and women (elderly or sick) girls and children...

ITS GREAT SERVICE
That the cafeteria serves well cooked, wholesome food at a minimum cost?

ITS GREAT SERVICE
Y. W. C. A. girls are learning new meanings of friendliness and new ways of service and cooperation...

ITS GREAT SERVICE
Are preparing for a world-wide service in the time of national and world need?

ITS GREAT SERVICE
Are being helped to find the work best suited to them and to secure or better their positions?

ITS GREAT SERVICE
Are enjoying the swimming pool to the utmost and walking, jumping and diving into it by hundreds?

ITS GREAT SERVICE
Are working together on the broad basis of Christian womanhood to realize for all women the ideal of abundant life?

ITS GREAT SERVICE
Every organization must perform a useful service if it is to grow, for society will refuse to maintain it if it fails to be useful to society...

ITS GREAT SERVICE
That, in a word, explains the continued, ever increasing growth of the Young Women's Christian Association...

your community better dividend or a larger interest.
The drive for $40,000 which the Portland Y. W. C. A. is to conduct...

By eliminating certain Sunday features, five New York newspapers found that in the aggregate they saved more than 325 tons of newspaper paper each week...

CONSERVATIVE FIGURES
The conservative character of estimates made of the revenue to be derived from the gasoline tax for state highway improvement is shown in the report of the secretary of state for the past year...

CONSERVATIVE FIGURES
The same conditions will be found in the case of the motor vehicle licenses which are overrunning the estimates...

CONSERVATIVE FIGURES
These facts show that no mistake was made in the Oregon system of indirectly financing road construction out of the automobile revenues...

CONSERVATIVE FIGURES
Beyond 1929 there is an ultra conservatism in calculation, no allowance being made for any increase in the number of vehicles, which is kept at the 200,000 mark...

CONSERVATIVE FIGURES
Thus it is shown that without providing for an increase that may be reasonably expected a total issue of forty million dollars which will be the limit on a 4 per cent basis of assessed valuation, can be carried and a surplus of nearly four million dollars be left at the end of the bond period after the payment of interest and principal...

CONSERVATIVE FIGURES
If killings go on, present rates of speed in cities will have to be reduced. That will be demanded by the public unless fatal accidents become fewer...

CONSERVATIVE FIGURES
The milk and dairy business has been in a bad way, resultant from many causes. Abnormal feed costs, unusual labor costs, excessive machinery and machinery prices have run the prices up to the consumers of milk and milk products...

CONSERVATIVE FIGURES
SEATTLE, Tacoma and the Washington public service commission labor under the delusive conviction that to historicize is to canonize. The rail rate over the mountains between the Inland Empire and Puget sound is historical. Therefore it is sacred...

CONSERVATIVE FIGURES
Their briefs and the news reports from Puget sound and the national capital agree that the history of the rate structure which has been assailed by Inland Empire shippers and the upper ports of the Columbia will constitute the chief defense by Seattle and Tacoma, with the Washington public service commission, forgetful of its duty to Eastern and Southern Washington, chiming in on a "me, too" refrain...

CONSERVATIVE FIGURES
From times now historic, Seattle and Tacoma, despite the mountain wall that separates them from the interior, have enjoyed the same rates as the ports of the Columbia. What matter if such a parity was due in the beginning to violation of economic law and a transgression of every rule which declares that the charge for transportation service shall be proportionate to the cost of rendering that service?

CONSERVATIVE FIGURES
The organization is four fifths self supporting. But there is another fifth. It is the girl, still wholesome and sound, who is without means and must be taken care of by some agency or somebody before she falls victim to the wolves of society...

CONSERVATIVE FIGURES
The more saved girls, the more of them that are met when they come to the city and taken into creches where they will be secure from the influences that ever pull down, the more wholesome is the life of a city, the better its social atmosphere and the stronger will be its next generation...

the O-W-R. & N. company an opportunity to perform an act of expected gratitude for the region and the communities that made it. The O-W-R. & N. has been appearing as a defendant. It could not better serve its own competitive interests now than to come in as a friend rather than an opponent of the recognition of the water grade.

By eliminating certain Sunday features, five New York newspapers found that in the aggregate they saved more than 325 tons of newspaper paper each week. Nor is it likely that the public missed the parts eliminated. It isn't the bulk, but the character of the contents that makes the paper.

THE ROGUE RIVER ARMISTICE
The message that amity has been restored between the commercial salmon fishermen and the anglers of Rogue river will affect Southern Oregon much as the armistice quieted the nations engaged in the world war. Since 1877 the controversy between the commercial interests and the sportsmen has waged. It has inflamed policies, and policies not only of the Rogue river section but of the entire state. It has divided towns. It has inspired unending flow of militant oratory at public meetings and legislative sessions. It has affected a great tourist and recreational asset as well as an important phase of the commercial fishing industry.

THE ROGUE RIVER ARMISTICE
The agreement reached by the sportsmen of Medford and Ashland with Roderick Macleay as chief of the commercial interests seems to have been signed and sealed by the parties at interest. It involves a shortening of the commercial fishing season so that the sportsmen will enjoy more of the silverside salmon as well as the steelhead fishing. All seines and set nets are to be eliminated and use is to be made exclusively of the drift nets. The area in which commercial fishermen will operate at the mouth of the Rogue will be shortened from 26 to 12 miles.

THE ROGUE RIVER ARMISTICE
Such a pleasant eventuation of a persistent controversy is, indeed, gratifying, and the acknowledgment from Southern Oregon that President Price of the Anglers' club and President Van Duzer of the Chamber of Commerce are entitled to much credit for the adjustment is an agreeable tribute to citizens who are customarily active in affairs of public interest.

FRIENDS OF THE COW
OREGON dairymen seem to be planning to get more cream for their bankbooks by charging less for the cream in their bottles. It will be a happy condition if it works out that way.

FRIENDS OF THE COW
The milk and dairy business has been in a bad way, resultant from many causes. Abnormal feed costs, unusual labor costs, excessive machinery and machinery prices have run the prices up to the consumers of milk and milk products while at the same time they have narrowed, and in many instances, wiped out the margin of profit to the producers. Dairy herds have been depleted and disposed of, supply has fallen off, dairymen have become discouraged, and so has the public when it has paid the monthly toll levied on baby's bottle and the butter roll.

FRIENDS OF THE COW
Now the dairymen intend, by organization and by systemization of their industry to take up the loose points in their business, eliminate the causes of waste and loss, and, as a result, reap added profit at a less cost to the consumer.

FRIENDS OF THE COW
The milk business, they tell us, is a "peak production" business without any present method adequate for the handling of the load, a condition which breeds waste and loss of output during a portion of the year with consequent average loss when the books are closed in January.

FRIENDS OF THE COW
Spring time brings abundant pastures and abundant milk supply which the average demand can not absorb. It results in wastage and loss. The dry months of summer and the barren days of winter demand big investments in feed and consequent increase in overhead and operating expenses, spelling loss.

FRIENDS OF THE COW
Dairymen are now planning to make provision by which the peak production can be absorbed by canneries, condensaries, and butter and cheese factories, thus taking care of the surplus over and above the normal and consistent demand for fresh milk and cream.

FRIENDS OF THE COW
The salvaging of this waste is expected to bridge the difference between profit and loss, and to make it possible at the same time to bring the consumer's cost down for the benefit of the general buying public.

FRIENDS OF THE COW
So far as Portland is concerned, however, there is still an angle to the business that the dairymen do not seem to have provided for, and that is the cost of distribution. If statistics previously gathered are correct, it costs more to distribute milk and cream to the consumers in Portland than it does to produce them. A multiplicity of delivery systems, each serving the same territory, cross and recross each other, where some systematized and cooperative plan of delivery would result in an enormous saving of overhead, equipment and operating cost which could well bring profit up and selling price down.

FRIENDS OF THE COW
If the dairymen who are serving Portland could evolve a plan that would eliminate that overcost it would go a long way towards closing the gap between prosperity for themselves and contentment for their patrons.

WORK IS A SAVIOR
"Devils of Sloth and Selfish Ease"
Therapy: Get Out, and There Are None Worse Than These

While a man has work to do he is not idle. He is busy. He fills the hours that might be worse than wasted. It is a distraction that, if not overdone, is remedial and useful. If he is not busy, he is idle. He prays for no better fate than to be busy. If he is good for anything, he is made utterly wretched by having nothing to do.

Work is a savior. Much pity is wasted on those who work hard. Hard work is not a curse, but a downright blessing. The work itself develops skill and science in his craft feels a creative joy in his being and his doing that is a supreme satisfaction. He finds new powers that he did not know he had. The old capacities expand and intensify. He learns to do by doing. He constantly surprises himself by an achievement of which he did not know he was capable.

Work is a savior. We have all seen the youthful pilgrim on the way of life who had not found himself. He was wandering. He had in some perhaps attained a slender proficiency. But nothing quite seemed to suit him. He seemed in danger of squandering his life in a speaking tour through Eastern Oregon cities. The dean is urging upon voters the necessity for the millage tax plan of support for the Oregon institutions of higher learning and in the meantime he has just conducted has found encouragement that leads him to declare that the measure will be approved by voters east of the mountains. In fact, there are some 700 students, as against the handful the school started with not so very many years ago.

Work is a savior. There is a growing demand in Oregon for the advanced branches of commerce, and the increasing importance of foreign trade makes this demand more than ever imperative. A great many graduates from the O. A. C. school of commerce have forged ahead in the commercial world and are not only to be found in all Pacific coast states, but in many other parts of the nation.

Work is a savior. A. B. Robertson of Condon, where he is heavily interested in the sheep and wool business, has returned from a trip to England that has occupied his time and attention for three months. He visited homeland scenes and friends abroad.

Work is a savior. Likely as not the telephone pole standing in front of your home came from Kerry, Or., and in that event it is probable that B. A. Eldred, who has Kerry had something to do with its production—or its transformation, at any rate, from the original state to the present condition. Eldred is a contractor specializing in the production of telephone poles. With Mrs. Eldred and a C. Burlington of Kerry, Eldred is a guest at the Perkins hotel.

Work is a savior. Walter L. Toose Jr., McMinnville attorney, is in the city again, this time stopping at the Imperial, where he has had opportunity to chat with C. A. Herberman, manager of the 31st street school of commerce, in which Toose is interested.

Work is a savior. In this the second installment of his sketch of the career of Mayor George Baker, the point where he makes and loses $34,000 in one year, and from it he speaks. Meanwhile, this present installment is not looking in record of outside of his own account.

Work is a savior. "A man can stand missing a few meals if he has to," says George Baker, who has been missing his meals recently, "but what gets his goat is to see his women folk having to go hungry. When I was a young man I was in Seattle. I had started a new stand and gone broke. I had tramped all over town trying to find a job. Without success. I had tackled a contractor several times for a job of sewer digging. He had been turned down hard. I watched my chance, picked up a shovel and, dropping into the ditch, I went to work. Presently a foreman came and said, 'Hey, you. Who hired you?' I said, 'Nobody,' and went on digging. He watched me for a while, and said, 'All right; you're hired. I'll put you on the payroll at $2.25 a day.'

Work is a savior. U. S. EMPLOYMENT SERVICE
Portland, March 25.—To the Editor of The Journal—Your issue of March 20 contained an editorial which commended the work of the United States employment service, stating that "the employment department is one of the government's most excellent features" and that "at a cost of $1.34 per job, paid by the government, the federal employment service found jobs for more than 6,000,000 men and women."

Work is a savior. To clear up a general misapprehension, it may be stated that the $1.34 includes the cost of installing the job. The actual cost of placing each person, excluding the original investment in equipment, would be nearer 34 cents. Had the service been allowed to continue under an economical personnel basis, the $1.34 would have been materially reduced, as the installation cost would be spread over a longer period.

Work is a savior. Owing to the coming of congress to provide funds, this necessary service has ceased active operations, though continuing to cooperate with state and municipal employment systems through one representative in each state and the use of its furniture, equipment and supplies.

Work is a savior. proper distribution of labor under conditions of surplus. L. F. Shinaman, Assistant Federal Director.

THIS COMPOST
By Walt Whitman

SOMETHING startles me where I thought I was safest;
I withdrew from the still woods I loved;
I will not go now on the pastures to walk;
I will not stir the clothes from my body to meet my lover the sea;
I will not touch my flesh to the earth, as to other flesh, to renew me.

How can it be that the ground itself does not sicken?
How can you be alive, you growths of spring?
Are they not continually putting distemper'd corpses within you?
Behold this compost! behold it well!
Perhaps every mite has once form'd part of a sick person—Yet behold!
The grass of spring covers the prairies,
The delicate spear of the onion pierces upward,
The apple-buds cluster together on the apple-branches,
The resurrection of the wheat appears with pale visage out of its graves,
The he-birds carol mornings and evenings, while the she-birds sit on their nests.

What chemistry!
That the winds are really not infectious,
That this is no cheat, this transparent green wash of the sea, which is so amorous after me,
That it is safe to allow it to lick my naked body all over with its tongues,
That it will not endanger me with the fevers that have deposited themselves in it,
That all is clean forever and forever,
That the cool drink from the well tastes so good,
That blackberries are so flavoured and juicy,
That when we recline on the grass I do not catch any disease,
Though probably every spear of grass rises out of what was once a catching disease.

Now I am terrified at the Earth! it is that calm and patient,
It grows such sweet things out of such corruptions,
It renews with such unwitting looks, its prodigal, annual, sumptuous crops,
It gives such divine materials to men, and accepts such leavings from them at last.

MORE OR LESS PERSONAL
Random Observations About Town

Dean J. A. Bexell, head of the school of commerce at the Oregon Agricultural college, stopped at the Imperial Saturday en route back to Corvallis after spending a week on a speaking tour through Eastern Oregon cities. The dean is urging upon voters the necessity for the millage tax plan of support for the Oregon institutions of higher learning and in the meantime he has just conducted has found encouragement that leads him to declare that the measure will be approved by voters east of the mountains. In fact, there are some 700 students, as against the handful the school started with not so very many years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. John Burke are going back to their home at North Platte, Neb., after sojourning in California during the winter. They are at the Cornelia hotel. Burke has a brother in Portland whom he had not seen for many years, and a thorough review of the intervening period must be accomplished before the Nebraska can continue on their way.

Dr. and Mrs. R. Bilyeu of Albany are guests at the Multnomah while they spend the weekend in Portland. Albany is strictly a "clock town." Portland offers inducements that even the Linn county metropolis cannot present to the home folk. Dr. Bilyeu is a dentist. From Astoria, Dr. J. J. Peltinger, another of the doctor profession, is a guest at the Cornelia hotel.

Here to attend a conference of Western Oregon Telegram company workers, F. H. Blainfield, manager of the company's business at Victoria, B. C., is stopping at the Multnomah hotel.

President P. L. Campbell of the University of Oregon is a guest at the Portland hotel for the weekend. At the Imperial are Professor and Mrs. Joseph Shaffer of the state university community. Both educators find occasion to hold lobby discussions, with the proposed millage tax for educational aid as the subject.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Baker, accompanied by Miss K. H. M. Baker, all prominent in Spokane, their home town, are at the Multnomah. From the same city comes E. E. Ballinger, representative of a Portland firm implement concern in the Washington city. Ballinger is also at the Multnomah.

J. E. Morrison, rated by his local friends as one of the most extensive wheat growers in Gilliam county, is a guest at the Perkins hotel from Arlington.

Impressions and Observations of the Journal Man
By Fred Lockley
In this the second installment of his sketch of the career of Mayor George Baker, the point where he makes and loses $34,000 in one year, and from it he speaks. Meanwhile, this present installment is not looking in record of outside of his own account.

The Oregon Country
Northwest Happenings in Brief Form for the Busy Reader

OREGON NOTES
Salem Masons have appropriated $1000 towards the erection of a new city hospital.

OREGON NOTES
Surrounding the town of Shedd are eight boys' and girls' industrial clubs, each of which is active.

OREGON NOTES
Captain C. A. S. U. S. Army, retired, has celebrated his ninety-fourth birthday at Hood River.

OREGON NOTES
Mystery surrounds the unearthing of a skeleton near the Linton grade on the Columbia river highway.

OREGON NOTES
The Congregational church of Corvallis collected $1625 in the program memorial fund. Its quota was $300.

OREGON NOTES
Students of the University of Oregon have organized a statewide campaign in favor of the bond issue.

OREGON NOTES
The Butler Banking company of Hood River is completing the installation of an electric burglar alarm system.

OREGON NOTES
Oregon has the largest number of men injured in the world war, now training under the act for vocational rehabilitation.

OREGON NOTES
A movement for a social survey of Klamath Falls initiated by the Red Cross chapter has been taken up by the local business community.

OREGON NOTES
For the first time in its history the orchestra of the University of Oregon will make a concert tour during the spring vacation.

OREGON NOTES
Douglas county farmers are putting their farms on a business basis by using the record books put out by the college farm management.

OREGON NOTES
Cecil Brotherton, aged 16, an alleged delinquent, was sentenced to the reformatory at Roseburg and held for the naval authorities.

OREGON NOTES
The home mission committee of the Willamette presbytery of Oregon is in Albany to prepare its report for the next session of the presbytery.

WASHINGTON
Five criminal cases are to be tried this week in the federal court at Pasco. Of the 4000 or more voters in Vancouver only 1400 have registered up to date.