SKETCHED FROM THE NEW SPRING MODELS

Demonstrating Our Supremacy in Tailored Suits

Smartest of the New Versions in Tailleur Modes Featured in a Notable Assemblage

ONE MUST NOT DELAY, if the new suit is to be worn on Easter. Selection is a matter of elimination as a rule, but not here! We took the elimination process on our own shoulders—and can confidently say that every suit in our stock represents one of the best models of one of the best makers.

—This is a suit stock, therefore, comprising many "bests"—a selection that will bring joy to the heart of the woman whose privilege it is to select therefrom.

—Early selection will facilitate careful fitting and alterations.

EVERY COLOR—EVERY STYLE! You cannot name a favored shade that will not be found here in profusion. And as to style, each garment seems to possess definite distinction and individual style touches without number, but at no time deviating from the lines that Fashion approves most decidedly.

—Truly a wonderful showing of Tailleurs—one that promises fulfillment of every desire to her who is even most critical. Prices from $67, $75 and $100 upwards to $250.

—Third Floor, Lipman, Wolfe &amp; Co.

EVERY SUIT FINELY TAILORED. In fact the tailoring is one feature that distinguishes these suits and lifts them into the realm of unusually fine apparel—and reading the materials gives one an idea of the mammoth selection awaiting you, for instance:

COMPROMISE IS SOUGHT ON TREATY; APPEAL TO WILSON

By David Lawrence

(Copyright, 1920.)

Washington, March 30.—Samuel Colcord, a modest old gentleman with kindly eyes and benign countenance, who represents no organization, no political faction or party, no personal ambition or desire for prominence, has presented to President Wilson through Secretary Tamm a plan for the ending of the deadlock on the treaty.

Instead of an appeal from the president to the people in an election, Colcord brings an appeal from the people to the president.

He urges, briefly, that there be an adoption of the peace treaty with all the points on which there is agreement between the Democratic and Republican senators and that only the disputed points be left to the campaign or a referendum.

WORLD NEEDS AID

His idea is that much of the gain of the League of Nations and treaty can immediately be derived by the United States in partnership with the rest of the world, while the points like Article X, on which hypothetical and not concrete obstacles have arisen, can be determined later on.

"They may take their referendum if they will," writes Colcord, "but not while the world waits in suspense and agony for the pledges of aid we are willing to give."

Signers galore, from all political parties and walks of life, give the petition presented at the White House a non-partisan and disinterested appearance.

JUST MR. CITIZEN

Neither the League to Enforce Peace, nor the league organizations which have worked so zealously for treaty ratification are involved in the plan. It is solely the work of one man—Samuel Colcord—who has used up much of his income and principal to forward an idea that he thinks will benefit this country and the world.

Colcord has no office, no staff, no publicity organization—nothing at all. He is just an average citizen, who feels so deeply about the delay in entering the League of Nations and putting the treaty of peace into effective operation that he has devoted all his time for many weeks and is prepared to continue his efforts indefinitely in order to help along a situation in which he thinks only disinterested men can help.

PROMINENT MEN SIGN

On the petition appear the names of President Lowell of Harvard and Cardinal Gibbons. Then there is Cleveland H. Dodge, Princeton classmate and intimate friend of President Wilson.

Also George W. Wickersham, former attorney general in the Taft cabinet; Augustus Thomas, playwright; Hamilton Holt, editor of the Independent, who has been particularly friendly to President Wilson's point of view on the League of Nations, as well as Major George Haven Putnam, Jacob H. Schiff, Edmund Dwight and others who have been prominent in civic affairs and have joined in the memorial.

Accompanying Colcord to the White House were Hamilton Holt and Professor Woodbridge of Boston.

WILL ENLIST OTHERS

Of course anybody who has dared to mention the word "compromise" at the White House has had to tread softly and speak in whispers, for the president has brooked no such suggestions. Indeed, it has been said that he would not receive certain Democratic senators, hitherto on the friendliest terms with him, because he learned in advance that they wanted to talk compromise. Wilson did not see Colcord or his committee. But the memorial they presented will of course be laid before the president by his private secretary. Every day it is planned to add more names so that eventually thousands of persons whose names command public respect will be enlisted in the movement. Colcord admits he is a Republican, but claims he is no partisan. He is the kind of a man who believes much can be accomplished in the treaty situation if the individuals interested turn their thoughts from personal hatreds to broad principles of human compassion.

MAY START LANDSLIDE

He plans to carry his appeal to the senate, too. He has already interviewed several senators who favor the compromise plan, and it is probable that there will be speeches on it this week. The president has not seen fit to reply to the senate resolution returning the treaty to him.

Sometimes he welcomes occasions to speak indirectly and by implication. The visit of Colcord and his committee may furnish that opportunity. Some pronouncement from the White House has been expected for several days, but it has been deferred to see what congress would do about the joint resolution proposing a declaration of peace.

It is still a game—each side watching the other and each side confident that the public supports such a local lumberjack to Mrs. Nellie Cully, Birmingham, Ala. ## Matrimonial Bureau Bride Disillusioned Kallspeil, Mont., March 30.—(U. P.)—"Come, share my beautiful home on Kallspeil lake," wrote a local lumberjack to Mrs. Nellie Cully, Birmingham, Ala. Mrs. Cully, accompanied by her two children, Lydia and Clyde, had formed acquaintance through a "matrimonial bureau." She came, "The beautiful home" consisted of one log shack, windowless and dirt-floored. Mrs. Cully is dying in a hospital as the result of tuberculosis developed in the shack.
