

I. W. W. IS GIVEN PRISON SENTENCE

Lawrence A. Sorlie, convicted of criminal syndicalism after a trial lasting five days, was sentenced by Circuit Judge Morrow Thursday to one year in the penitentiary. The judge stated that he made the sentence as light as possible, because of the recommendation of the jury for leniency. Notice of appeal to the supreme court was given by George F. Vanderveer, general counsel for the I. W. W. in the Pacific Northwest, and who was counsel for Sorlie during this trial. A stay of execution for two weeks was granted.

Vanderveer argued his motion for a new trial, urging the insufficiency of evidence to sustain the verdict rendered. He stated that for 26 hours the jury stood six to six, and that the jury reasoned that a man who had been in jail five and a half months had been punished already. Deputy District Attorney Hamner insisted that there was sufficient evidence to justify the jury's verdict of guilty.

Judge Morrow said that he could not comply with the jury's recommendation of parole, as this carries with it the belief of the judge that the paroled person will not again violate the state laws; but that Sorlie had not renounced his I. W. W. membership, and had declared, in substance, that he was satisfied with the order and intended to continue a member; therefore, if paroled, he would be violating the state law daily, as two juries here have found that membership in the I. W. W. constitutes criminal syndicalism.

Vanderveer Asks New Trial
Vancouver, Wash., May 7.—George Vanderveer, attorney for I. W. W. who was convicted in the superior court here of talking through the jail bars to a prisoner, Thursday filed motion for a new trial, alleging that the court was without jurisdiction, and that there were errors in law. He also filed a bill of exceptions to the court's instructions.

Man Falls 25 Feet Through Skylight; Injuries Are Slight

Robert Laughlin stepped out of the window of his room in the Yonable hotel onto a skylight to recover a cigarette case that had fallen from his hand. The glass broke, dropping him headlong 25 feet to the floor of the Vienna Cleaning and Dye works. The doctor rushed to the scene said he was only slightly bruised.

The front door of the cleaning works could not be forced, and Paul Rockwell was lowered by a rope through the hole in the skylight. He tied the rope around the injured man and Patrolmen Wadell and Palmer, with the aid of a crowd of curious persons who had gathered, dragged the limp body up to the window.

Automobile Stage Merger to Extend Scope of Business

Consolidation of the interests of Frank Shepard of Portland and A. Jaloff of Astoria, announced Thursday by the latter, brings together two automobile stage operators who will have under their direction 45 vehicles, operating over the full length of the Columbia river highway, as well as on other important routes.

Heretofore Jaloff had an Astoria-Seaside-Portland auto stage line, with headquarters at Astoria, and Shepard operated not only Columbia highway routes but Portland sightseeing cars as well.

Under the new arrangement, Shepard will remain as president of the company and Jaloff will come to Portland as manager in charge of the company's business. That the routes of the company's stage lines will be greatly extended is the promise of the new manager.

As soon as roads are in condition a route to Tillamook will be established. Later a Salem trip will be created. For the present, one daily trip to and from Astoria and Seaside from Portland will be arranged, cars leaving Portland and Seaside at 10 a. m. daily. Upper Columbia river trips and sightseeing tours will be maintained.

Latin-American Trade Demands to Receive Attention

Trade relations between Pacific coast ports and Latin-American countries will receive more careful attention in the future, according to a message received by Representative W. C. Hawley from J. W. Alexander, secretary of commerce.

Alexander says in his message, that attaché offices are being maintained in Buenos Aires and Rio de Janeiro, and that trade commissioners are located at Lima and Santiago. Investigations of trade conditions are also being conducted in Paraguay, Bolivia and Venezuela.

These offices and commissioners will give the Pacific coast trade all possible attention and will endeavor to promote closer commercial relations between the Pacific coast ports and the West coast of South America," says Alexander.
