

OREGON SCENERY IS FEATURED AT SPRING EXHIBIT

Colorful bits of Oregon scenery are featured in the second annual spring exhibition of the work of the Portland Palette club shown at the Central Library this week. The exhibition will be open until Monday. The list of studies includes landscape work and decorative panels as well as interesting paintings of birds and several portraits.

"August's Fire Haze," among the works of E. D. M. Fowle of Multnomah, Or., is a work of unusual charm in color and composition. Local scenes were chosen by the artist for most of his work shown in the exhibit. The bird studies of R. Bruce Horsfall, familiar to Portland folk from previous showings, are among the notable pictures shown at the library. "The Pioneer," a portrait of strength and character, is also among Mr. Horsfall's pictures.

Among the studies of Clyde Leon Keller is "The Barn on the Hill," which won first honorable mention in 1920 at the Seattle Fine Arts society. Another picture of interest is "Old Taylor Street Church," Mount Tamalpais, California, is another bit of excellent work. The "Hawthorne Bridge at Night," a local scene, speaks strongly of the lithographs of Whistler in color and composition.

"CRATER LAKE" ATTRACTS "Crater Lake," Oregon's great beauty spot, in the works of C. C. McKim, is one of the striking pictures in the exhibit. Among the pictures displayed by Paul Lauritz of Los Angeles, Cal., "June Afternoon in California" is receiving special attention. Mr. Lauritz has four pictures on display.

A group of decorative panels done in water color and treated in an unusual way, a mixture of the art of the Orient and the Occident, are among the studies shown by S. Mizuno, Japanese artist of this city.

"The Black Vase" and two unusual sketches in the collection of Conrad D. G. Pedersen of Portland, as well as a group of flower studies, are of unusual interest in color and treatment.

DRAW ESPECIAL ATENTION The paintings of Alfred S. Rix of this city, including the "Abandoned Farmhouse," "The Sketch of the Upper Columbia" and "Ancient Sunlight," have been especially commented upon by visitors and a delightful composition of unusual grace and brilliant coloring is the still life study of Fred, in the center, whose other works include "Moonlight" (Rhine, near Cologne), "French Village of Wasnes-au-Bac," "Boats at Fulton" and several others.

Only one picture, "Billy the Sketcher," is shown by Hamilton Blevins, but the work has received more than passing attention by visitors.
