Vice President Marshall Says Secret Poll Would Show Upper House Opposed to Prohibition.

By David Lawrence
(Copyright, 1920.)
Washington, May 15.—Vice President Thomas H. Marshall has presided over the senate of the United States for seven years and can be therefore expected to know whereof he speaks when he says that if prohibition had been submitted to a secret vote, it would not have gotten 30 votes in the senate.

ALIEN PROPERTY UNCHANGED

This war ending declaration, now to go before the house for concurrence ahead of the supposedly inevitable presidential veto, also provides that pending the constitutional ratification of a peace treaty with suitable provisions for satisfaction of claims against the German government, alien property shall remain in its present status. It was on this point that most of the debate today hinged. Senator Forrester of Ohio charged that the United States was attempting to assume the benefits of the Versailles treaty while taking none of the obligations. "The president is not to accept any of the benefits," replied Senator Knox of Pennsylvania. "It provides that they shall not be."

POPEBERRY DIVIDENCE SCHEME

Senator Pomerehne, while denouncing this "unconstitutional Republican scheme" for ending the war, did not spare the president entirely. He said that the "unmitigated senate majority" was largely to blame for the situation, but he admitted that the executive himself was not entirely free from blame. "It is virtually a scheme among the Republicans to do what they think is right," said the president in a hole. "The Republicans are not to be blamed."

CONSTITUENTS MISUNDERSTOOD

"As I told the lawyers at Richmond, the people of this country didn't intend, in my judgment, that their representatives should be guided by their constituents, but that they should act for them. I don't think when people hire a lawyer that they should ask him to do what they want. Advice should not come from the client to the lawyer, but from the lawyer to the client. If the client doesn't like the advice, he can get another lawyer."

WOULD HAVE VOTED NO

"Oh yes, and my views have been well known. Mind you, I do not use liquor, never serve it at my table and I would to God that no one else did. But I object to the way prohibition has been imposed, though again I must insist now that it is here the law must be enforced."

LAWYERS LOSING INFLUENCE

"Indeed, lawyers like statesmen are losing their influence because they are not telling their clients what is the law and what should be done. Instead, lawyers are listening to boards of directors and trying to accomplish what those boards want done—often against the best judgment of the lawyers themselves."

REWARD OFFERED FOR GAME LAW VIOLATORS

Determined to eliminate poaching, Rufus Holman, county commissioner, has notified the state fish and game commission that he will give a reward of $25 for the arrest and conviction of anyone caught hunting or killing game on the reserves set aside by him near Barton, Clackamas county, and recognized by the state as a game refuge.
