Support Urged for Educational Bill to Aid Former Soldiers

Following endorsement by the state executive committee, William B. Follett, department commander of the American Legion, telegraphed to 87 posts in Oregon appeals for support of the soldiers' educational aid bill, one of the measures submitted for the legislature this week. The telegram read as follows:

"Soldiers' educational aid bill, ballot title 317, must receive favorable publicity. More than 4000 soldiers now receiving aid and appropriation exhausted with more than 10,000 unpaid claims. Unless the bill passes, more than 2000 service men will be deprived of the aid. Act promptly along all legitimate lines of publicity."

Vocational training officers will meet in Portland later in the month, the executive committee decided, and a working program to aid ex-service men will be outlined. Department headquarters are also planning to open a bureau to disseminate information to ex-soldiers on all problems presented as a result of their war service.

J. A. Buchanan of Astoria was named on the committee succeeding George A. Gore of Astoria, resigned.

Economic Dwelling Plans Are Proposed; Buyers Solicited

If you are interested in cutting down the high cost of owning your own home, file your name at room 413, city hall, with the city building department, and help out in the plans now being made for the construction of a thousand temporary homes in Portland.

The request that prospective home owners do this was made by City Commissioner A. J. Barbur, following a conference Thursday night with members of the general committee of business men called for the purpose of taking some step in eliminating the residential congestion and its result, rent profiteering.

Real estate men, builders, portable home manufacturers and others interested in the discussion attended the meeting, which was held in the council chamber.

Plans for 60 types of dwellings, ranging in design from summer cottages at $600 to pretentious houses for $4000 were submitted by one firm of ready-cut manufacturers, and the committee learned that portable types could be constructed for $300 and up, while the ready-cut homes run from $800 up.

NATIONAL TRACTOR SHOW TO BE HELD IN LOS ANGELES

Farm implement dealers of Oregon and Washington, through associations with headquarters here and at Spokane, acting in cooperation with similar associations in California, have taken initial steps for the inauguration of a national tractor and implement show at Los Angeles early in the autumn.

The use of the tractor has revolutionized farming methods in the West, and according to J. E. Bartholomew, president of the Avery company of Peoria, Ill., it is impossible to supply the demand for tractors in this territory.

Bartholomew, accompanied by E. E. Critchfield of Chicago, arrived this morning from the South and will remain here several days looking over the local field.

"During the past month we have covered Texas, Arizona and California, studying the needs of the farmers for particular kinds of labor saving machinery," said Bartholomew. "The Avery company is now manufacturing seven varieties of tractors and information gleaned on this trip will probably result in a considerable increase to the number. With millions of acres of land undergoing rapid development in the Pacific coast states and the Southwest and increasing attention being given to scientific methods of farming, the future of the implement business must be viewed as a period of practically unlimited output."

Preferential Land Rights for Home Guards Opposed

Washington, May 17.—(WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE JOURNAL).—A suggestion received by Senator McNary that the home guards organized during the war be allowed to share in the preference right extended to ex-service men for entry of lands opened to settlement has not been favorably received by Clay Tallman, commissioner of those general land office.

Tallman says the law should remain as it is, as the home guards would not seem to be entitled to special consideration beyond shipworkers and others employed in wartime tasks, and to make such an extension would go beyond the purpose of congress in granting preference to men in the military service.

TANKER IS HERE WITH MOTOR OIL

With a cargo of gasoline aboard, the tanker W. F. Herrin for the Associated Oil company, and the tanker Oleum en route with supplies for the Union Oil company, the Standard company's acceptance of Governor Olcott's proposal to accept the sale of boiling test gasoline has practically rubbed off the sharp edges of the much mooted gasoline shortage in Oregon.

There is yet need, however, according to officials of all the companies, of careful conservation lest the shortage again become serious. The Standard continues to ration its available oil to patrons on a basis of 50 per cent of the tank capacity while the other companies are selling to full capacity.

Meanwhile the question of gasoline supply is to be topic for discussion at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis club at the Benson hotel Tuesday noon.

At that time A. D. Parker, district manager of the Associated Oil company, will speak.

Sunday saw the practically unstinted use of gasoline in pleasure automobiles. Highways in every direction carried motorists to a multitude of destinations and it is estimated that the indulgence in pleasure travel was greater than on any previous day of the present spring season.

Game Warden Here

R. C. Steele, United States game warden, is in Portland from Seattle, in connection with the enforcement of the federal migratory bird treaty act. Most of the violations of the migratory law arise from ignorance, says Steele, the violators complying in some cases with the state law and now realizing there is a federal ruling to observe. The migratory bird act is a covenant between the United States and Great Britain for the protection of migratory birds in the United States and Canada. In any instance where it conflicts with a state law the state law is inoperative.

POPE CANONIZES JEANNE D'ARC AT GREAT CATHEDRAL

(By United News.)
Rome, May 17.—With a ceremonial which in pomp and splendor rivaled the most impressive church celebration ever held here, the canonization of Jeanne d'Arc was solemnized Sunday at St. Peter's.

Twenty-five thousand pilgrims from France and other countries pressed against the great gates of the cathedral from early morning until 7:30 o'clock, when they were swung open, and then filled the ancient church to overflowing.

VAST BED OF FLOWERS

Platoons of gendarmes and Palatine guards were required to hold back a throng estimated at 40,000 during the course of the ceremony while other thousands of worshippers vainly waited outside the grounds.

The papal cortege was one of the most imposing and gorgeous in the history of the church. Four hundred bishops and 60 cardinals preceded the pontifical chair in which the pope was seated. The church itself was one vast bower of flowers.

One feature of the crowd attending the canonization was a group of 120 French deputies headed by Special Ambassador Hanoteau and General Castelnau, which surrounded the panel throne.

Scores of women, overcome by the heat and the heavy incense and perfume from the flowers, fainted in the crush and were removed to the vestibule, where a first aid station had been established.

Thousands in the great audience wept openly when the pope, replying to the request of Cardinal Vico, rose and pronounced the words proclaiming the Maid of Orleans a saint of the church.

MAYOR ROLPH IN PORTLAND TO SIZE UP JOHNSON BOOM

Stumping Oregon in behalf of the presidential candidacy of Senator Hiram Johnson, Mayor James Rolph Jr. dropped off the train from San Francisco this morning and today is deep in the intricacies of the Republican campaign in this state.

As a politician Mayor Rolph has some local fame, but he is best known as one of the foremost shipping men of the Pacific coast. Rolph-owned and Rolph-chartered ships have been coming into the Columbia river for the last 30 years.

Although intensely interested in the Johnson campaign, Mayor Rolph found time to discuss business today, predicting a revival of the old time grain fleet off the coast ports as soon as the grain traffic passes from government control at the end of the month.

Last week six steamers to load grain in the Columbia river were chartered in San Francisco, the first on shippers' account in a number of years, Rolph said, the rates being $24 a ton to the United Kingdom and $29 for the Bordeaux-Hamburg route.

But week Hiram Johnson as president of the Pacific coast will come into its own and really see what business is like," said he. "I am willing to underwrite what he will do for the Pacific coast."
