

LABOR TROUBLE A BOOST TO PRICES

The effect that labor has upon the cost of living is very great. The Institute of American Meat Packers advises:

The recent strike of railroad switchmen which demoralized transportation in and out of many market centers last month may have important effects upon food production during the coming year. This strike came at a time when the meat and livestock industry was in process of readjustment. Foreign exchange unfavorable to purchasers abroad had barred American meat products out of Europe. With domestic demand their sole reliance, many producers seemed to feel that the nation's call for more production would mean loss to them. Despite this pessimism the industry seemed on the point of finding itself and going ahead on a fresh basis. Then the switchmen quit work and a stagnation of freight movements followed. PRODUCERS LOSE HEAVILY Growers and feeders of livestock were among the heaviest losers. During the strike shipments of cattle and hogs were tied up in transit and the loss from shrinkage was serious. On the other hand livestock ready for the market had to be kept on farms, consuming high-priced feed and adding to the costs daily.

There is reason to believe that this loss, piling on the uncertainties of reconstruction, will give added momentum to the trend toward curtailed production. Although the strike is now pretty well ended, the packing plants and the meat industry generally are still suffering from its effects, through the inability of the railroads to return empty refrigerator cars. All during the strike the roads endeavored at all costs to move shipments of fresh meats eastward to the big consuming centers, but with this accomplished have seemed unable to move the empty cars westward again. This is seriously interfering with packing house operations. WORKERS ARE HIT Of course the brunt of these things will fall upon the workers first of all. Regardless of the merits of the strike, whatever the switchmen may have gained may be lost several times over a year hence in increased food costs and in scarcity of food supplies. We know of no incident better calculated to bring home to large numbers of men the far-reaching consequences of social violence. During the month of April, conditions in the fresh meat trade have been abnormal on account of the strike. Receipts of livestock have been irregular and shipments of dressed meats, particularly to the East, have been interrupted. All transportation lines have been seriously handicapped by strike conditions. Horse Falls, Boy Killed Grass Valley, Or., May 21.—Clarence Mitchell, 11-year-old son of William Mitchell of Kent, was thrown from a horse and killed. It is not known how the accident happened as he was alone but the supposition is that the horse stumbled while going down hill.
