KIWANIS ENJOY PORTLAND VISIT IN HIGHWAY TRIP

Kiwanians from all parts of the United States and Canada who have been in Portland all week attending the fifth annual international convention, are ending their visit to the City of Roses today in a way that is making them wish the visit might be prolonged.

Over 500 of them left in automobiles from Fourteenth and Morrison streets about 8 o'clock this morning to spend the day on the Columbia river highway. Rain during the week made many of the visitors view with misgivings the prospect of a highway trip, but the influence of the most perfect day of the year.

VIET FISH HATCHERY
The Kiwanians were taken all the way to Eagle creek, where luncheon was served at 11:30. Afterward the schedule called for an inspection of the Viet fish hatchery, the largest fish propagation station in the world, where the state fisheries department now has over 20,000,000 eggs and young salmon fry developing for release in the Columbia.

Members of the international board of trustees only went way over the highway and were hurried to the hotel in order to attend the "post-mortem" meeting of the board and the international officers at the Portland hotel this afternoon.

All the business transacted during the convention will be brought up for final action at this meeting and new procedure will be crystallized so it can be turned over to the new international officers for execution.

CLEVELAND IS SELECTED
At the president's banquet in The Auditorium Friday night it was announced that Cleveland, Ohio, had been selected as a result of the balloting during the meeting in the afternoon. The convention city for 1921, the announcement was made by President J. Mercer Barnett, met with much applause.

An elaborate dinner was followed by speeches from President Barnett and his predecessor, Henry M. Elliott, of Montreal, Canada, who turned over the keys of the city to the convention city for 1921, following the election Friday afternoon. Circuit Judge George Stapleton was toastmaster at the banquet.

Elliott, whose title is now immediate past president, and as such remains a member of the board of trustees, will leave for San Francisco Sunday night, followed by the convention city for 1921, following the election Friday afternoon. Circuit Judge George Stapleton was toastmaster at the banquet.

CLUBS TO BE INSTALLED
Next Wednesday night these men will be officials at the installation of Kiwanis clubs at Cleveland, Ohio, and Oakland. Large clubs have been organized in both cities.

The Sanger special, with 175 people from all parts of the East, will leave Portland tonight by way of the Union Pacific, going to Yellowstone National park for a short visit. President Barnett will leave for his home Sunday evening.

By unanimous vote, J. Mercer Barnett of Birmingham, Ala., was elected president at the conclusion of the convention Friday afternoon.

Barnett, who had been first vice president, was nominated by Edward Howell, district governor of Oklahoma, and so unanimous was the verdict for Barnett that the usual vote by ballot was not taken. Secretary O. Samuel Cummings being instructed to cast one ballot.

When Barnett later appeared in the convention hall he was given a tremendous reception. His work as chairman of the convention at Birmingham last year had won him the popularity that brought about his election. Barnett is a lumberman.

SICK MAN ELECTED
Roe Fulkerson, editor of Kiwanis magazine, was elected first vice president at the convention today at St. Vincent's hospital.

Fulkerson, although sick at the time, reported on his magazine work at the convention Thursday. He was forced to take to his bed at the Multnomah hotel during the afternoon. His wife, Mrs. Fulkerson, accompanied her husband from Washington, D. C., where he was confined.

Mayor Limps Back
Mayor George L. Baker returned to his duties at the city hall Friday after being confined at home, most of the time in bed, suffering from a wrenched knee. The mayor was injured last Saturday afternoon at the Shrine ceremony at The Auditorium. His stenographer and secretary have been going to his home each day to assist him in the duties of his office. The mayor will remain on crutches for several weeks.

METHODISTS OF PORTLAND GREET BISHOP SHEPARD

Methodists, 450 strong, greeted Bishop William O. Shepard at the First Methodist church Friday evening. The entire Northwest area of the church, known as the Portland area, was represented by pastors and district superintendents. Bishop Shepard told of his love for the Western country and intimated that he had a desire to be assigned to this area before the conference met.

"Out here I realize more than ever the great opportunities offered for the greatest work of all," the new bishop said. "And these opportunities are greater today than ever before, for we are living in a wonderful age—an age of leaders, mature men."

Reference was made during the evening to the selection of Bishop Shepard to this area. The Oregon delegates asked for the bishop when they arrived at the quadrennial conference. They were informed that other areas had also asked for Bishop Shepard and were advised to name a second choice. Not to be outdone, the delegates named Bishop Shepard as their second choice.

Bishop Eben S. Johnson, a visitor in the city, was present at the reception and spoke briefly. Bishop Shepard comes to Portland from the West, E. B. Baskett of Corvallis, grand standard bearer; Walter C. Winslow of Salem, grand marshal; Clyde Mason of Seaside, grand purveyor; William G. Wharton of Portland, grand tyler.

Fulkerson, although sick at the time, reported on his magazine work at the convention Thursday. He was forced to take to his bed at the Multnomah hotel during the afternoon. His wife, Mrs. Fulkerson, accompanied her husband from Washington, D. C., where he was confined.

To City Hall Post
Mayor George L. Baker returned to his duties at the city hall Friday after being confined at home, most of the time in bed, suffering from a wrenched knee. The mayor was injured last Saturday afternoon at the Shrine ceremony at The Auditorium. His stenographer and secretary have been going to his home each day to assist him in the duties of his office. The mayor will remain on crutches for several weeks.

Police Are Inspected;
Tackaberry and Finn
Are Awarded Medals
The Portland police department held its annual inspection on Multnomah field this morning, where Mayor Baker "hobnobbed" on crutches to pin "for merit" medals on the two officers who had been awarded the highest honor by the department. Tackaberry and Patrolman Finn.

Baker told how Patrolman Finn stood under an arched light one night, April 12, 1918, and advanced on three robbers who crowded in the shadow of an automobile, firing upon him. Finn killed one of the men, John Luthi, and captured the other two.
