

OREGON PIONEERS TO MEET AT THE AUDITORIUM

Trail Blazers and Daughters and Sons Born Previous to 1859 Will Refresh Their Memories.

Once more Portland will be permitted to see the pioneers of the state, who braved the hardships and dangers of the plains and who labored o'er the Rocky mountain passes that this part of America might be developed.

The forty-eighth annual reunion of the Oregon Pioneer association has been set for July 1 at the Auditorium. Those who "blazed the trail" before 1859 and who were born in the original territory of Oregon up to that date, comprise the members of this organization.

The reunion is usually held about June 17, but as other conventions required the use of the Auditorium and hotel, it was postponed.

At 4:30 p. m. the "Klothe Muck-a-Muck" will be conducted by the organized woman's auxiliary.

Prejudice Is Found Against Cow Testing For Disease Germs

Hood River, June 19.—That some of the old prejudices of the rancher still persist was well evidenced here this week, when Dr. Gardner, assistant state veterinarian, was testing the milk of cows for tuberculosis.

One local dairyman told the doctor that if anyone came near his barn to test his cows these would be troublesome and considerate of the cows were not tested on this visit, he gave way to the inevitable and his cows were tested.

Old Time Resident Dies Milton, Or., June 19.—Mrs. Harriet Ann Worthington, a resident of this city for nearly 50 years, died Tuesday following an operation. She was 71 years of age and is survived by three sons.

Industrial Congress Urged By G. Y. Harry

Plan Outlined for National Body to Handle Industrial Affairs.

By G. Y. Harry
Commissioner of Consular Affairs, United States Department of Labor.

Two attempts within the past year have been made to find a solution of the industrial problems of the nation, or to place it differently, to create machinery through which a genuine spirit of friendliness and cooperation might be established between the workers and employers of the United States.

The first was the convening by call of the president on October 5, 1919, of a national industrial conference, composed of conferees representing the employers of the nation and conferees representing the wage earners with a third group to represent the public itself and assist in finding a common viewpoint.

After the adjournment of the general conference the group representing the public met and formulated a report to the president, in which they recommended the appointment of a small committee to prepare a program for reference to a conference of representatives of capital, labor and the public.

This recommendation resulted in the appointment by the president of a national industrial conference composed of persons of unquestioned ability to deal with the problems. But in selecting the conferees no attention was paid to group representation as in the first conference.

This second conference consisted of 17 members, with the secretary of labor as chairman and Herbert Hoover as vice chairman. After a period of over three months' deliberation they issued on March 8, a very comprehensive report of their conclusions.

This report embodies machinery for the adjustment of disputes and provides plans for prevention of controversies as well as making recommendations affecting every phase of industrial relations and labor economics. The plan is national in scope and operation and embraces every class of wage earners, including government employees and those employed by public utility companies excepting those already provided for by congress.

A national industrial policy to meet with general approval should have full and free discussion by all the states, it being expected that the different industrial conditions in each state would reflect the conclusions of the state conferences.

No national question is of greater importance or of more vital concern to the economic life of the nation, and the national congress should at once provide for such a congress and make the necessary appropriation for its expenses.

The functions of this board to be the selection of seven persons each from the above groups, subject to the approval of the president, to compose the national industrial senate. They would also be empowered to name the time and place of meeting and fill vacancies and to see that each group is represented by their full membership during the deliberations, and to arrange for the calling by the president of industrial conferences in each of the 48 states of the Union.

The state industrial conferences to be organized upon the same general plans by the appointment of an industrial conference committee of three by the governor of each state to select five conferees from each of the three groups.

WOMAN EDITOR IS VISITING IN CITY

Nautilus, New Thought Magazine, Was Founded by Mrs. Towne in November, 1898.

Few Portland people, outside those interested in the New Thought cult and readers of the Nautilus, are aware that the first issue of this magazine was issued in Portland in November, 1898. The founder and editor of this publication, Mrs. Elizabeth Towne, is a visitor in Portland, her former home.

This is a very happy homecoming, for I was born in Portland. My father was John Halsey Jones, president of the Jones Lumber company, and my brother, Herman Halsey Jones, now the head of that company, and my sisters, Mrs. L. D. Grindstaff and Mrs. George Schalk, all live here, so I am having a delightful visit with home folks and at the same time my thoughts naturally turn to those earlier days of my life.

I was a member of the Taylor Street Methodist church in those days and sang in the choir there, and for eight years was the leader of the choir of the Mount Tabor Methodist church. In my Bible study I found the text that seemed to open the way to a new understanding of the truth; the text is, "The spirit shall deal these into all truth." With varying emphasis, it seems to me that text incorporates about all there is to the science of life and of living. Self-expression is one of the greatest needs of the world, that is the very kernel of New Thought.

The suppression of the child is one of the curses of the age. Instead of hushing a child, it should be encouraged to talk and to ask questions, for only by so doing can it develop its individuality.

After studying along New Thought lines for some time, I conducted a class in New Thought and then began the publication of the Nautilus. The first issue comprised only four pages. I had no subscription list, so Mrs. Rose Mallory, publisher of World's Advanced Thought, gave me her list and I sent my publication out to her 2500 subscribers. The subscriptions that came in before the second publication paid the printer's bill. At the end of eight months I went east and the magazine has grown in size and circulation, our list now comprising 54,000, the largest circulation of any New Thought publication.

The announcement that Miss Freda Campbell of Salem, a graduate of Willamette university in the '20 class, has been selected as one of the 22 American women to receive scholarships in French universities was received by President Doney from Julian J. Champeola, New York, in charge of the selection. The offer comes from the French department of education in appreciation of the public money for reference to the American department of education.

Miss Campbell has majored in French at Willamette and won the Hollingsworth prize for having the highest scholastic record during her senior year. She was chosen maid of honor to the May queen this year.

Board, lodging and tuition and $20 per month for incidentals and a 80 per cent rebate on the two passages are provided.

Rose Show Opens Monday Prizes for Boys and Girls

Medals and Cash Await Winners On Each Day of Floral Display.

Will your name be engraved in the space left blank on one of the three medals that are offered as first prizes in the Children's Rose Show Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week?

The medals, as they have just come from the expert hands of the engraver at Jaeger Brothers' jewelry store, read, "Awarded to First Prize, Oregon Journal School Children's Display, Portland Rose Show, 1920."

The Journal offers two second prizes of $2.50 each and five third prizes of $1 each on each day of the children's rose exhibit.

President Blaesing of the Rose society announces that members of the reception committee are expected to be on hand by 4 o'clock on each morning of the show. All exhibits must be in place by 10 o'clock. None will be received later.

The children's exhibit will be held on the same block as the general Rose Show, but in a section that will be easily found by the sign. The place is South Parkway, between Columbia and Clay streets. All that is necessary is to find the rose, attach it to the coupon in The Journal with name, address and school written in and bring it to the Children's Rose Show. There are no further requirements.

O. A. C. HONORED FOR THIRD TIME

Military Efficiency at Oregon Institution Gets High Praise From War Department.

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, June 19.—"Distinguished Institution," the designation given O. A. C. by the war department Tuesday because of its military efficiency is the third time the college has been thus honored. The military work was highly complimented by P. C. Harris, adjutant general at Washington, D. C., in a telegram received by President Kerr.

The secretary of war extends congratulations to you and all concerned upon the high standard of efficiency attained by the military department in your institution," reads the telegram.

Colonel Joseph K. Partello, commandant, had felt confident ever since the annual inspection in May that the college would be among the 16 institutions to receive this honor. Inspecting officers were high in their praise of the manner in which the military maneuvers were carried out.

Each of the five units of R. O. T. C. has been under a competent war department officer. The units are: First, 300; engineer, 150; motor transport, 150 cavalry, 75.

More than $1,000,000 worth of equipment has been given to the college for its instructional work. Very few institutions in the country have been recognized to this extent.
