

MURDERED MAN'S BODY RECOVERED IN WILLAMETTE

The body of Harry Dubinsky, the skinned man, was recovered from the Willamette river, 120 feet below the Oregon City bridge, at 8 o'clock Sunday morning by Fred McCausland, superintendent of the Oregon City water works, and Harry Calvert, a photographer.

Confession of George Moore that he abetted while his friend Russel Brake beat Dubinsky to death with a tire chain a week ago Sunday morning two miles north of Oregon City, and that the two then threw the for hire car driver's body into the river from the Oregon City suspension bridge, is thus apparently established.

FUNERAL HELD HERE
The body was lodged in a backwater in the current about 60 feet below the surface. It was grappled by the two men by means of sturgeon hooks lashed to a length of gas pipe.

The body was turned over to Coroner E. L. Johnson of Oregon City. An autopsy was held Sunday morning, in which it was determined that Dubinsky had come to his death as the result of being struck over the head four times with some heavy instrument.

The body was sent to the boy's home at 734 Second street, Portland, for a funeral Sunday afternoon. It was interred in the Shalom Teraf congregation cemetery at Fremont station. Rabbi Fajvu Showitz and Cantor S. Shulman officiated in the Hebrew funeral ritual.

CORONER'S INQUIRY TONIGHT
She had heard the news of his death but a short time before and was nearly prostrated by the shock, but Mrs. Dubinsky, mother of the boy, attended the ceremony.

The reward offered has not been awarded yet. It is in the hands of A. Rosenstein, J. Vidyoff and H. Schwartz. A coroner's jury was empaneled Sunday and allowed to examine the body thoroughly before it was taken to Portland.

10-Year-Old Boy Is Drowned at St. Johns

Lester Webb, the 10-year-old son of Harry Webb, Whitwood Court apartments, was drowned Sunday morning when he fell into 10 feet of water from a raft on which he was playing at the foot of Baltimore street, in St. Johns. Jewel Chor, who was swimming at the place, secured the body just as it went down the last time. Engineers Prehn and Voderberg of the Harbor patrol rushed a pumpmotor to the spot, but were unable to revive the boy.

Headquarters for the Celebrated "KISER" Oil Colored Photographs of Oregon Scenery

There is a charm to Kiser pictures, a depth to them which makes direct appeal to anyone who cares about pictures and appeals to many who never realized that a picture could mean a great deal to them. Kiser pictures are unlike any others.

They are hand colored in oils under the supervision of an artist whose fame has traveled up and down the Pacific Coast.

Meier & Frank's is the only large store in Portland where these Kiser oil-colored photographs can be had. Our collection is so large that two salons are devoted to their exclusive showing. They can be had artistically framed or unframed.

Among many subjects are Multnomah Falls, Waukeena Falls, Latourelle Falls, Horse Tail Falls, Eagle Creek Bridge, Haystack Rock at Cannon Beach—one of the most beautiful hard-sand beaches imaginable—a glimpse of the tall-timbered country, Crater Lake, sunrise on snow-capped Mt. Hood from Lost Lake which is "lost" because it is surrounded by miles and miles of timber, a lovely view of a trail leading to Larch Mountain and scores of others.

Visitors who wish to recall their pleasant memories of Oregon may anchor them serenely with some of these beautiful Kiser pictures.

Prices $2.50 to $100. —Meier & Frank's: Picture Shop, Fifth Floor.

Mid-Summer Frocks for Shrine Week
$25

Delightful gowns that will be useful day after day—and most of them are pretty enough for evenings.

They are of georgette crepe with beads and embroidery, dotted swiss with cunning white pleatings, pastel colored organdie and charming cotton crepe printed like georgette. Most of the georgette dresses are lined with silk.

A number are trimmed with many rows of lace or cool net fichus.

Each one is cool and fresh—just arrived from our New York makers.

Sizes for misses and women.
