

NEW DESIGNS FOR SCHOOL PORTABLES MAY BE SELECTED

Portable school buildings, enlarged physical education activities in the schools, the need for a director of primary education and the closer study of bills presented before payment were subjects under general discussion at the meeting of the new school board Tuesday night.

Objections having been raised that the type of portables that have been erected are in no sense portables but are permanent structures, and that cheaper structures of the millmade variety will serve the purpose, a committee was appointed composed of George B. Thomas and F. S. Hull to investigate types and prices of various millmade schoolhouses. Twenty-four new portables are to be erected almost immediately and 14 more will be needed later, it is said.

SALARY INCREASED $1000

The salary of Robert Krohn, supervisor of physical training, was raised from $2400 to $3400, the increased $1000 being allowed for night and summer work. The directors also voted to change his title so as to include larger activities. Director of physical education and recreation was suggested but the selection was left to Superintendent D. A. Grout. Attention of the board was called to the fact that Portland schools were violating the state law in not giving physical education to more than the freshman class of high school. Reasons assigned were lack of gymnasium facilities. That calisthenics and forms of outdoor exercise could be carried on without gymnasiums was the general opinion expressed.

COMPLAIN AGAINST DRESS

That high school students resented being given the same exercises as were given elementary pupils and expected something bigger was said to be the feeling in the schools, said Grout. Also, that high school girls were not dressed suitably for performing calisthenic exercises in the class room was pointed out.

Director W. F. Woodward expressed the desire eventually to bring about a change for the better in the clothing of both high school boys and girls, although he did not exactly favor the school uniform idea. The importance of more physical exercise for the defective children was also emphasized.

The two new members opposed the allowing of claims until they had had opportunity of going over the bills, saying that methods of economy were often effected in this way by discovering some cheaper house at which the articles might be purchased. This might be handled, one of the old members suggested, by the finance and judiciary committee which, along with other committees, was abolished at the beginning of the year upon the recommendation of O. M. Plummer, who wanted everything handled through the committee of the whole.

COMMITTEES ARE RESTORED

The board thereupon voted to restore the four committees, buildings and grounds, educational affairs, finance and judiciary, supplies and equipment, and to establish any other committees that might be needed for the transaction of school affairs. Director George M. Orton, chairman of the board, was empowered to appoint the committee personnel.

Director A. C. Newell, who is leaving tonight for Salt Lake to attend the National Education association convention, was authorized to select a woman director of primary education at a salary not to exceed $3600, the final selection to be confirmed by the school board. The office is practically that of an additional superintendent. It was established before the war but has been vacant for several years. Director Hull voted against the restoration of the office, saying the school could get along without such a director for another year.

TEMPERATURES ARE DISCUSSED

Attention of the board was called to a statement from one of the engineers in response to the recent assertion of an engineer from Alameda that there were 20 degrees difference in temperature between the heads and feet of the children when seated; that in every room, portable or otherwise, in which there is not forced ventilation, there will be a difference of from 10 to 15 degrees between the floor line and ceiling, but not more than 2 degrees between the head and floor.

Director A. C. Newell pointed out the value of establishing a few intermediate schools to house the seventh, eighth and ninth grades, which would relieve the congestion in both the elementary and high schools.

Doctor Fined for Failure to Mind Traffic Officers

Dr. Walter Anderson was found guilty of refusing to obey the instructions of a traffic officer. After a hearing of the case before District Judge Hawkins on Tuesday, he was fined $10.

The trouble grew out of one of the lightest trips for the visiting Brynners. Dr. Anderson took a lead of them out on the Columbia highway, and at Multnomah Falls he got into trouble with Deputy Sheriff Harry E. Taylor and Joe Weaver because he refused to move his car and blocked autos all the way from the falls to the bridge. Finally he did move on, under order of the officer, but parked his car on the pavement, in defiance of the directions of the officer.

The deputy sheriffs told the court that Anderson had been weaving in his attitude and that when served with notice to appear in court on the following Monday had declared that it didn't make any difference how many notices were served on him, he wouldn't be there. His own explanation to the court of these remarks was that he had an operation to perform that morning and simply had to keep the appointment. The maximum fine permissible for failing to obey the directions of a traffic officer is $50.

Minimum Wage for Barbers Increased To $28 Per Week

A decision of the state board of compilation, rendered Tuesday and retroactive to June 9, increases the minimum wage for journeymen barbers from $20 per week to $28, or 60 per cent of the gross receipts over $40 per week, instead of $30 as heretofore.

The board, composed of William F. Woodward, O. R. Hartwig, and J. K. Flynn, states in its report: "It is the unanimous judgment of the board that there be no change made in the existing schedule of working hours. This for the reason that the present schedule is one based upon the normal condition of the calling and the needs of the public."

"It is quite apparent that the (wage) schedule based upon present costs of living is insufficient and calls for a material readjustment. Present material costs and overhead have advanced to a point where the present line of $10 per week is quite inadequate to give the employer a fair return upon his capital invested."

The decision of the board does not fix the wages of the members of the craft who by virtue of advanced age or disabilities are unable to perform their duties efficiently. It leaves adjustment in these cases to the parties immediately concerned.

Civil War Veteran Beats Firemen to It in Fine Style

Nimble, despite his age, Elder C. D. Martin, Civil war veteran, residing at Fourth and College streets, succeeded in clambering to the roof of his home Tuesday and extinguishing a blaze before the fire department could make a run of five blocks to his home.

Spartan from a burning flue set the roof on fire. Neighbors sent in a fire alarm and then warned the veteran of his danger. Although the firemen claimed to have made the run in two minutes, Martin had the fire out when they got there and was busy picking a bouquet of climbing roses for them.

McCAMANT DOESN'T EXPLAIN HIS BROKEN PRIMARY PLEDGE

Wallace McCamant, as speaker of the day at the Rotary Club luncheon Tuesday at the Hotel Benson, told the assembled members of that organization everything he knew about the Chicago convention insofar as he was informed through his connection with it as a delegate at large, except that he failed to refer to or attempt to make clear how he could consistently promise the people as a candidate—that he would vote for the "twining of the Oregon primary"—and then—as a delegate—refuse to vote for Johnson.

The chairman of the day gave McCamant a splendid excuse to tell the audience all about how he had promised as a candidate to vote for the winner at the primary election, and then, as a delegate, had gone clear back on his promise and had broken the pledge he had given the members of his party over his own name in the voters' pamphlet. In introducing McCamant, the chairman said that he was a man of strong conviction who was not afraid to go to bat for what he thought he ought to do, or words to that effect, and the club members all sat back expectantly to hear the returned delegate tell how it is the proper thing for a candidate for public office to promise one thing in his campaign and do the opposite after election, and then away with it without censure or obloquy. But there was nothing doing.

McCamant told in great detail all about how the convention functioned. He complained that Ralph E. Williams, national committeeman, had done a poor job in the selection of the seats for the Oregon delegation, having put them off on one side instead of right up in the middle in front of the chairman. What made it much more annoying, McCamant said, was that "several large, burly delegates from Oklahoma" insisted on impairing his view of the platform by standing up in the aisle. Other than that, however, it seemed to be a very good convention, as viewed by McCamant. All in all he gave a very interesting address, for though much of the information he conveyed had been carried in the newspapers more than two weeks ago, still it makes a different imprint when you get it through the ears rather than the eyes. But it was not altogether satisfactory to a goodly number of the audience who grieved that McCamant had not "opened up on how he voted, and why."

"Mill-to-Man" Suits Are Most Practical

MILL-TO-MAN suits are hand-tailored—that is why they're so practical—because they wear longer—and hold their shape.

It makes little difference to the man who wears one of our splendid Wool garments whether or not he lounges about outdoors, or sits all day in the office—for he knows that his Brownsville Suit will hold its shape.

AND, as we manufacture these splendid ready-made "All-Wool" garments—in all sizes and styles—in our big tailoring shops—it is obvious therefore why we can sell for less—because we are the manufacturers.

10 per cent permanent reduction on all ready-made suits.
