William Loeb Admits at Senate Committee Hearing That Wood Campaign Was Underwritten for Million by Big Financiers.

Chicago, July 7.—(I. N. S.)—The biggest sensation springing thus far in the "slush fund" scandal involving the campaign of leading Republican candidates for the presidency, was cracked wide open in Chicago today, when William Loeb, Eastern manager of the campaign of General Leonard Wood, admitted before the senate committee investigating the fund charges that the Wood campaign had been underwritten for $1,000,000 by some of the country's biggest financiers.

Just prior to this statement by T. W. Hukried, a Missouri Lowden campaign manager, admitting that he had received $2500 from the Lowden camp, was placed in evidence before the committee.

Among the alleged contributors to the Wood fund named by Loeb were J. B. Duke, the tobacco king, who, Loeb declared, contributed a substantial sum; the late George W. Perkins, who handed over $10,000 "for somebody else," and H. H. Rogers, the oil magnate, who gave $50,000 to the fund, Loeb testified.

Loeb received altogether $400,000, said Loeb. "The campaign was underwritten for $1,000,000, however, by George J. Whelan, Colonel William Copper Proctor and a Colonel Kennel. Each agreed to be responsible for $250,000 and it was decided to try to get the fourth $250,000 by popular subscription."

Of the $400,000 received, personally by him, Mr. Loeb testified $250,000 went to the Chicago headquarters of the Wood campaign, $150,000 to the Eastern headquarters, $45,000 to the New York headquarters and the remainder, about $6000, was sent to Colonel Proctor a few days ago.

"I was asked to take charge of the campaign," said Mr. Loeb, "and John T. King was selected to manage the general campaign. He was scheduled to advance General Wood's interests among various organizations. But dissatisfaction with King's methods developed and we decided to change managers and transform our policy to a direct appeal to the public. I was consulted as to the amount of money it would take to carry the appeal to the Heppner, Or., July 7.—All through Morrow county there is today promise of the biggest crop of wheat that this section has ever produced.

Such uniformly good stands of wheat have never before been seen in Morrow county, although there have been times when individual fields have shown the prospects for a crop that are today in evidence.

Through the Hardman section, through Eight Mile and similar districts, the prospects are practically the same as when Morrow county produced its biggest crop, back in 1917.

In the lone and Lexington sections the showing is perhaps the best known. While there is a liberal percentage of spring grain in both districts, still the outlook is far above the normal.

Taking Morrow county in general it would be difficult to find a more optimistic situation than exists today.

Alfalfa crop this season is about the average and the same is true of other hay crops.

Livestock conditions are practically ideal, hay quality is concerned about holdings through the county are somewhat less than a few years ago.

There has been little contracting of wheat in this section to date, although contracts were freely offered by buyers a short time ago.

Harvest is perhaps 10 days later than normal but present weather conditions are favorable. No hot winds have been encountered and this is a most hopeful sign.

Following a bitter discussion that threatened to disrupt Portland post of the American Legion into factions, Tuesday night at Central library, a committee of 12 men was appointed to present at least two plans for reorganization at the first meeting in August.

Henry T. Boyd attended his second meeting of Portland post and, as on the first occasion, when he charged that the Legion was trying to "sell" the post, he was rebuffed. Boyd admitted he had attended various meetings, but had never accepted any committee work and had never been active in Legion work.

James M. Bain, vice commander of the post, presiding, said the resignation of James O. Conville and himself had been in the hands of the executive committee for several weeks for acceptance if members of the post were not satisfied with their acts.

Bain suggested that the post be subdivided into groups, each working separately, but all contributing to the general welfare of the central organization, which should remain intact.

Boyd's statements, pointing out that the Legion's progress in Portland was due to the hard work of a few men. At the Legion picnic last Sunday, Bain said, 10 men did all the work and of the more than 1700 persons attending, about 150 belonged to the Legion. Bain was supported by W. A. Ekwall and Dow V. Walker.
