SPLIT THREATENS CALIFORNIA G. O. P.; WANT CRAIL FIRED

Los Angeles, Cal., July 10.—(I. N. S.)—A split in the Republican party of California is threatened today from action taken by Ivan St. John, chairman of the executive committee of the "Kent-For-Senator" campaign, who has dispatched telegrams to National Chairman Will Hays demanding the resignation of Joseph Crail, vice chairman of the state central committee.

St. John's telegram flatly charges that "by misappropriating the state central committee organization" Crail is "jeopardizing the unity of the Republican party in California and putting in peril the success of the Harding-Coolidge ticket in order to advance his own personal aims and further the interests of his own special candidate.

It is charged that Crail, as campaign manager for A. J. Wallace, also a candidate in the G. O. P. senatorial race, is violating Will Hays' rule of Republican committees that they "elect, not select," candidates.

A rejuvenation of the old Republican County league, an insurgent organization, is threatened unless Crail is removed from either Wallace's management or the vice chairmanship.

Boys Camping at Beach Must Have Parents' Consent

Because of numerous complaints, boys no longer will be allowed to camp overnight at Columbia Beach without written permission from their parents, Joseph M. Rieg, manager of the park, has announced that this step was made necessary by worried mothers telephoning the beach in attempts to find missing lads who had started out ostensibly on forbidden camping trips.

"The watchman at the beach has been instructed to take into custody all boys who, when camping overnight, do not have written permission," said Rieg. "Of course we are glad to have them spend the night at the beach if they are there with the knowledge of their parents. If they bring a note to that effect we will see that the watchman looks out for their safety."

HOUSE IS BLAMED

Meredith related how an appropriation of $37,500 was denied a departmental bureau capable of showing results worth millions to the American people and yet how the house, over the protest of the department and of the senate retained the distribution of free seeds at a far greater cost.

In explaining the discontinuance of the $3000 annual federal aid to the Hermiston, Or., experiment station, Meredith declared that the 3000 state aid would insure the continuance of the station until December, after which time he hoped the department would be able to renew its support.

Meredith declared he did not hold the congressmen individually responsible for reduced appropriations, but declared that their attitude reflected public ignorance and indifference to the importance of the work of the department of agriculture.

KEEPING DOWN EXPENSES

Congressman Fordney, while indorsing Meredith's claims for the need for more money, explained that the problem of the last congress was to make a $5,000,000,000 income meet the needs for $8,000,000,000 sought for, declaring that, as it was, the governmental expenses for the current fiscal year would exceed the income by $1,000,000,000. And he added that, even at that the public debt of the United States is only 7.7 per cent of its wealth, as against public debts of 44 per cent in great Britain, 53 per cent in France and 55 per cent in Russia.

The secretary of agriculture was introduced by E. E. Faville, a former associate and editor of the Western Farmer. About 300 Portlanders were in attendance. Charles E. Berg presided.

Meredith, who was most discussed as a "dark horse" at the Democratic convention in San Francisco, spent a busy day Saturday, conferring with department of agriculture heads, addressing the Hunderson club of Commerce and visiting the Eagle creek camp grounds on the Columbia highway in the afternoon.

Secretary Meredith reached Portland Friday evening and is on his way back to Washington from the San Francisco convention. Suffering from a severe cold, he did not arise until late, but found time to talk to the newspaper men before his conference with department of agriculture officials at forest service offices at 10:45, when 30 heads of departments met in Forest Supervisor George Cecil's office and listened to an address on department matters.

APPROVES OF COX

Secretary Meredith is here, not on a political mission, he said, but "to sell the department of agriculture to the people of Oregon," also to hold an informal "family reunion" with the various heads of departmental work on duty in the Oregon country.

"I would rather not talk politics," Secretary Meredith said, "for I am here to sell the department of agriculture to the people of Oregon. Later, when the campaign has opened I will take my part in it.

"I do believe, however, that Governor Cox has an excellent chance to win in November. He stands very well indeed with labor in Ohio and has a constructive record as governor. I supported another fellow in the convention, for I was for McAdoo, but I believe Cox is a strong candidate.

"The 'wet' issue is being urged against him, but I do not believe Governor Cox is as 'wet' as he is being represented. That question, however, has been and should remain settled. It ought not to enter into the campaign, but it will be used, particularly in these Western states. But the issue has been settled."

Secretary Meredith, whose home is in Iowa, is the successful publisher of a farm paper which has brought him a considerable fortune. He is widely known and admired by farmers in every part of the United States.

GREETED BY GOVERNOR

Governor Olcott came down from Salem Saturday morning to meet Secretary Meredith and was one of a special reception committee which met the secretary at the Multnomah hotel and escorted him to the Chamber of Commerce shortly before noon. Other members of the committee were:

President W. J. Kerr of the Oregon Agricultural college, Senator Chamberlain, E. E. Faville, general chairman; Simon Benson, Charles F. Berg, W. P. Strandborg, Dr. C. J. Smith, Nathan Strauss, C. C. Chapman, Julius L. Meier, Edward Newbegin, E. N. Strong, J. L. Wright, W. E. Wilson, John S. Beall, D. L. Carpenter, C. E. Spence, George Quayle, W. H. Crawford and Edward N. Weinbaum.

Secretary Meredith will leave Saturday afternoon at 5:30 for Washington.

At last night's meeting the audience, including speakers and newspapermen, consisted of about 80 persons.

The defendant killed Nicholson, a building contractor, in the Pittman home. He surrendered and declared Nicholson "broke up" his home. The defense also will endeavor to prove Nicholson was on intimate terms with many other Fresno married women.

Pittman's counsel probably will attempt to show he was temporarily insane. Mrs. Pittman was not in court yesterday and it developed her whereabouts for several weeks has been a mystery.

BISHOP PROTESTS AGAINST SCANTY DRESS OF WOMEN

By Bishop Welldon

Dean of Durham

London, July 10.—(I. N. S.)—There appeared in the press recently a story which throws a somewhat lurid light upon modern society.

It seems that the parish priest of a village not far from Paris has been shocked by the insufficiency of the clothes in which brides of the present day come to the altar. He has therefore written in his parochial magazine the following caustic paragraph:

"I quite understand the difficulties attaching to the high cost of living, and especially the increase in the high price of clothing material. I sympathize keenly with the girls who can only afford enough material for half a dress, leaving a low neck and bare arms. I have therefore bought a perfectly good white woolen shawl. It will be at the disposal of all lightly dressed brides during the marriage ceremony at my church, which is very cold."

POOR NOT SOLE OFFENDERS

The scanty attire of which the priest complains may or may not in his village be due to poverty, but neither in France nor in England is it, I am afraid, peculiar to the poor alone.

Ladies in high society have of late inclined, after the example of some artists in the theatre and music halls, to clothe themselves so lightly that a critic has spoken of them not now as dressing, but rather as undressing for a dinner party or dance.

Fashion has seldom offended so gravely against good sense and good taste as in reducing ladies' dress to a minimum. For the use of dress as a covering of the human body is one of the marks which distinguish civilization from barbarism.

There can be little doubt that the clergy will and must raise their voices in protest against the insufficiency of modern dress, whether in the higher or in the lower social circles.

For the exposure of the person can do not good; it is dangerous to health in a northern climate, and it may do much harm by exciting emotions which it is the office of civilization as well as of religion to hold in check.

So far as I am aware it has seldom or never happened that brides who are poor in England have presented themselves without adequate clothing at the altar.

A clergyman would be justified in refusing to let so sacred a service as the solemnization of holy matrimony be profaned or debased by conformity to a habit which, if it has prevailed elsewhere, has generally prevailed in the lowest places of popular entertainment. He could not be rightly censured if he were to follow the French priest's example by supplying brides with such an overall as would cover their defects. But religious feeling will not, I hope and think, lower itself to a transient fashion of society.

CHANCE FOR REFORM

There is much occasion for reform in people's dress. It is difficult to understand why men have so largely forfeited the benefit of color in their clothes.

Nothing more awkward or hideous than a top hat can well be conceived; yet such a hat was until a few years ago practically enforced upon gentlemen in the streets of London. But of all male sufferers from the traditional law of dress bishops and deans, I am afraid, suffer the most. Women all through the ages have endured pains and even torture in subservience to fashion. At last common sense promises to win the day in the dress of both sexes.

It would be a pity if the triumph of common sense, so far as it insures both grace and ease, were defeated by such a relapse into barbarism as nudity involves.
