

WAR HERO ADMITS KILLING WIFE AND ROBBER HE HIRED

(Clatsop News) Chicago, July 10.—Lieutenant Carl Wanderer, wearer of the croix de guerre, last night confessed that he murdered his wife in cold blood to get rid of her and her unborn babe.

A few hours previous he confessed that he killed his wife, but said that it was an accident.

For two weeks he was heralded as a hero on his original story that his wife was killed by a holdup man as the couple were entering their home and that he killed the robber. The police found him with his wife dead at his feet and the alleged robber dead nearby.

COMPLETELY WORN OUT Wanderer broke down under a ceaseless grilling by the detectives and stated in the day he dramatically rehearsed the story he told the police at a coroner's inquest.

"Wait a minute," he said, feebly waving back the detectives and stating attorney's men who were questioning him.

"Wait a minute, I'm all in, I'll tell the truth. Just promise that you'll let me sleep after I do that. That's all I want. I'd give my life for an hour's sleep."

"The former lieutenant straightened himself in his chair.

"I murdered my wife. I shot her to death in cold blood. Why? Here's why: 'I hated married life. I wanted to get back in the army. I grew to love the army life while serving in France. It's free and easy. It's the life for me. But I couldn't do it with my wife on my hands. And, besides, she was about to become a mother. I hated her for it. I think the thought of becoming a father must have driven me mad.'"

Mrs. Wanderer was a beautiful woman. The neighbors called her "The Little Song Bird," because of her habit of singing about the house.

"It is hard enough for a man to make a living for himself. I had a wife to support, and here was a child coming. As I say, the thought of it drove me mad."

"I wanted to be a soldier—free to go where I will and do what I want to do. Well I brooded over the situation for several months. And it drove me to drink. I think the liquor put the idea of murder into my head. I grew to love drink over on West Madison street and it was awful stuff. The more I drank the more I thought of the idea of murder. I got so I was willing to take the risk, if only I could get rid of her, stop that baby from being born, and get back in the army."

MILKED HIS WIFE "I hit on the robbery idea. It seemed

LAIDS THE BRID WIFE IN FALLS SHOWS TO EDITORS

By Marshall N. Dana Pasco, Wash., July 10.—Tragedy rests on the Quincy-Ephrata division of the Columbia basin irrigation project. Hatfield, the rainmaker, has failed. The tower he built points foolishly from the powder-dry earth to the heavens that are as brass.

He was to have had $3000 if he increased the fall of rain to two inches and a thousand dollars more for each additional inch. Saturday is his last day and the precipitation for the year is less than an inch.

It was through the country where water is so yearningly wanted that the route of the Northwest Editorial excursion led Friday and down among scenes of the earlier situation about Pasco, Prosser and thence to Yakima Saturday.

According to identification established through the Chicago American and Depicted by the homicide squad and Depicted by the homicide squad and Depicted by the homicide squad.

Those who had the least doubt about the hot ardidity of the region had an experience they will never forget. A pillar of dust attended, them more faithfully than ever the pillar of cloud accompanied the children of Israel. At Corfu, north of Frenchman's Hills, the temperature reached 105 in the shade during lunch.

South of the Saddle mountains, where there were no thermometers, the exposed metal of moving automobiles grew too hot to rest a hand upon.

At Corfu, lunch with the 'complications' of fine-spirited men and women of Quincy, Ephrata, and Soap Lake consisted of a washbasin full of lemonade, a butter full of coffee and bushel boxes of sandwiches and cakes.

The men of the district gathered from their isolated homes at daylight Friday, drove the excursionists all day through the pillbox heat, brought them on to Cunningham when the Othello Commercial club, which was to have performed the service, was unable to find enough machines, and then cheerfully left members of the party in their private cars on the Northern Pacific for an all-night drive back to their homes.

Talk about hardships, the visitors spent a heated moment of inspection from cushioned looking out of mechanics and unskilled laborers in its employ at a higher rate in order to compete with private concerns.

All of the 90,000 employees Washington driving less than $2500 now receive a straight bonus of $240.

Reductions made in the war worker forces in Washington have been largely among the general clerks, who received below the average salary.

In 1907, the census department issued an official bulletin showing the average civil service salary to be $848 annually. According to officials of the civil service commission, the average was close to $1000 until just before the United States entered the world war.

Washington, July 10.—The average annual salary paid the 600,000 federal employees under civil service now has passed $1400, according to an estimate made today at the offices of the civil service commission.

The principal factor of the increase from the 1915 average of $1250 is found in the service of 151,000 postal carriers and clerks, which were put into effect July 1.

Also the government has found it necessary to pay thousands of mechanics and unskilled laborers in its employ at a higher rate in order to compete with private concerns.

WHEAT PROSPECT OF WALLA WALLA SECTION IS MIXED

By Hyman H. Cohen Walla Walla, Wash., July 10.—The wheat crop at this time indicates a mixed appearance in Walla Walla county but at no point so far as I can find is the prospect for the 1920 crop really unfavorable. Only the fact that Walla Walla county has a decreased area to wheat this season will be able to stop this section from producing the greatest total of wheat ever known.

Optimism is shown in all quarters, even the grain growers being willing to admit that they have little, if any, real cause for complaint except perhaps to feel that they would prefer to have a far greater area planted.

Up in the foothills of the Blue mountains, along the Mill Creek road, there appears to be a much shortened area in wheat and this section, usually the one to show the greatest production per acre, is likely to be in the middle producing class for 1920.

This still will not be construed to indicate that the foothills will not produce a fairly good crop of wheat this season, but that it is not making its accustomed showing.

There will be many fields in the district that will harvest 30 bushels and 35 bushels and even 40 bushel yields will not be improbable in isolated instances.

There is not for the fact that considerable fall wheat was reown in the spring, owing to the extremely cold weather of the winter, Walla Walla county would have had almost no third mow wheat this season, as was indicated.

ESTS CUT PRODUCTION "Jim Hill" mustard and weeds cost Walla Walla county considerable wheat this season, in fact, more so than normal.

The harvest is considered about 10 days late in general. At this time it looks as if there will be sufficient heavy rain for all requirements. There is plenty for haying.

Investigation shows that a fair volume of contracting of the 1920 crop was quickly by dealers with liberal percentage of the business around $2.50 per bushel. Some of the growers have an idea that a far greater price will be available than in general run they figure that a $2.50 market is as good as they can expect. This will insure them a liberal profit.

Purchases of grain bags to date have been the smallest this section has known for a like period.
