

AIRPLANE DELIVERY SERVICE to beach points during the summer months is but one of the Oregon Journal's innovations directed toward giving its readers the latest news first.

Stage, Screen, Woman's Realm

A LAUGH A DAY will keep the doctor away if anything will, and there's a whole "flock" of laughs in The Journal's daily comic strips. A page of fun on Sundays.

Farnum Strong In "Orphan" At Liberty

The regeneration of an outlaw by the power of a girl's love is the dominating theme in "The Orphan," a William Fox production, in which William Farnum is showing at the Liberty this week. "The Orphan" contains all the thrills necessary to make a first-class Western production and gives Farnum ample opportunity to display his rare talents. He is convincing as the hunted outlaw in the film. "The Orphan" is a perfect opportunity to display his rare talents. He injects fine dash and personality into the part.

Louise Lovely is seen at her best as the girl whose love persuaded the outlaw to start life anew after he had been cleared of many crimes of which he had been unjustly accused.

Others in the cast are Henry J. Herbert, G. Raymond Nye, Earl Crain, Olive White, Carrie Clark Ward, Harry De Vere and Al Fremont.

Columbia

A stirring story of red blooded men, fighting life's battles on stormy seas, is the "Sea Wolf," Jack London's famous book, dramatized, which opened Saturday at the Columbia.

A prologue precedes the action and depicts the state of unrest and turmoil that is sweeping the world. "Wolf" Larsen, Noah Berry, is introduced as the man who believes in the law of the survival of the fittest. "Wolf" experiences on a Pacific boat, his many struggles for supremacy and his final failure to rule by sheer brawn make up the plot of the story. Several thrilling bits of action, such as the ramming of a ferry boat by a whaling schooner and the beaching of a schooner in a storm are the high spots of the picture.

A scenic reel, a Paramount review and a rather clever Mutt and Jeff comedy complete the program.

Helig

Sam Morris and his Yiddish players will appear at the Helig tonight for the last show of their present engagement and will offer "The Flower Girl" and "The Flower Girl." Their opening performance of "Adam and Eve" Monday night was well received. Mr. Morris, Pearl Winter and supporting members of the company were heartily endorsed. Miss Winter offering special dance numbers during the performance. The play is given in Yiddish.

Majestic

"Riders of the Dawn," the Benjamin R. Hampton production of Zane Grey's gripping novel of the Northwest, "The Desert of Wheat," is the feature film at the Majestic this week. The new W. W. Hodgkinson release, a worthy successor to the Hampton picture "Desert Gold," and like it a vehicle to which the novelist gave detailed assistance all during the production. The story, enacted by a cast including Roy Stewart, Claire Adams, Robert McKim, Joseph J. Dowling, Violet Schram, Frederick Starr and others. The story depicts the adventures of Kurt Dorn following his return to the Northwest wheat belt after a year's brilliant service in the army overseas. After a royal homecoming reception Kurt learns that an organized band of plunderers has made prey of the peace-loving farmers in the section, including Tom Anderson, whose daughter Lenore has given her promise to wed him and remains faithful despite the sinister efforts of Henry Neuman, a young lawyer, to win her for his own.

Seeking to protect themselves, the farmers organize a battery of night riders, with Kurt as leader. The outlaws' depredations continue; for, enraged at his failure to win Lenore, Neuman, who is the master mind of the desperadoes, spurs them on to a series of crimes culminating in the murder of Anderson's youngest daughter, Kathleen, and the kidnapping of Lenore. Then the action develops rapidly to a satisfactory culmination.

Peoples

Eugene O'Brien scores effectively as John Bellamy Smart, popular American author, in the Selznick picture, "A Fool and His Money," adapted for the screen from the story by George Barr McCutcheon, showing at the Peoples. O'Brien shifts rapidly from the gay to the dramatic in this delightful story of an author's experiences in an ancient castle on the banks of the Danube. He investigates ghost stories, finds a beautiful American-born countess, vanquishes a villainous nobleman, gets a plot for his new novel and a wife for his new home, and does many other things that endear him to the audience.

Picturesque settings, both interior and exterior, have been provided for this picture, visualizing artistically all the glamorous locales described by the author.

Star

The old maxim of Publius Syrus, written before the Christian era, "It is a consolation to the wretched to have companions in misery," is exemplified by Harry T. Morey in his Vitaphone feature, "The Sea Wolf," showing this week at the Star. Morey appears as the captain of a large schooner who has

THE Stroller notices

THAT a little heat in the car this morning didn't feel at all out of season.

That if there was a gasoline shortage yesterday standing room would have been at a premium on the highway had the supply been normal.

That talk is still cheap.

That it's hard to lose something you don't want.

That indications are that there will be an unusually heavy crop of hazel nuts in the fall.

That they are maturing earlier than usual.

That wild blackberries will soon be ripe.

That the Rose City Park clubhouse looks sadly neglected.

That the gardens are overgrown with weeds and neglected.

That the lawn is badly sunburned.

That some other community clubhouse in Portland is much better kept.

That on a walk down the length of the South side, one can hear conversation in almost every language but English.

That the average man isn't in need of additional glands to make him somebody's goat.

From Salem's Sweet Singer

Dear Stroller:

We used to live in Portland, out on the Nehalem.

But the first of June we moved to Salem.

We find it very quiet down this way.

So we have to see The Journal every day.

Friend wife and I often have to go to see who gets the paper first at night.

From Stroller, Krany Kat to Magdalen.

Everything's there from booze to pigs.

We read about conventions and politicians.

Till at last old Sam closes our eyes.

And I'm no poet, either—just A SALEM SLAVE.

Hunt Up Last Friday's Journal

An old friend of the column, J. DeP., who lives out on Alberta street, sends us a clipping from The Journal of last Friday, on which he has circled the three figures in the ad on page 20. Look it up for yourself, and then the chances are you won't wonder that the boy is tickled.
