

POTATOES LOWER FOR NEW STOCKS

Potatoes are slowly dropping in price and with a very good crop in prospect at all points, indications point to the consumer getting requirements at reasonable values.

At this time it is not advisable for consumers to stock up with potatoes. There is a very good reason for this. First of all the stock is "too new" and will not keep well and then with the advancing season it is more than likely that prices will drop for a time at least. Onions are also cheaper in price and are likely to remain so for a while or until the California surplus is out of the way.

Green and wax beans are coming quite freely and are not moderate priced. Local stock is taking the place of offerings from The Dalles. Lettuce continues very plentiful and low priced and the quality is at the best. Eggs are slightly firmer as is usual during the heated period when receipts are less liberal and stocks are coming from storage.

Little change is shown in the meat situation with the exception of veal, which is slightly lower again.

Chickens are generally high priced, with little change for recent days. Butter will probably show an advance within the next week or so and the same is true of canned milk.

How to keep a whole cheese fresh—

Tillamook Cheese in family size is intended for homes, boarding houses, hotels and restaurants. The delicious quality and mild flavor which make Tillamook a favorite may easily be retained. Slice from the bottom. Heat a plate and place the cut end on it. The melted paraffine coating makes an air-tight protection which holds the flavor.

Because potatoes, macaroni, omelettes, souffles and scores of dishes are improved by the addition of Tillamook cheese, you will find it economical to buy a small size "Tillamook". They come in 6 and 14 pound sizes. But if you prefer, you may buy Tillamook by the slice from the best grocers everywhere.
