

LOOP ROAD ROUTE CAUSES HOT TILT

After an extended debate on the proper location of the Mount Hood loop highway between Gresham and Brightwood, the commission took under advisement Tuesday the question of ordering a detailed survey of what is known as the north of Sandy route, advocated by Portland officials and others.

The argument in behalf of this route was maintained principally by Gus Moser, City Attorney La Roche, City Engineer Laurgaard and City Commissioner Mann. Opposed to them were the proponents of the south of Sandy route, which runs from Gresham to Brightwood by way of Kelso and Sandy. So far as applause was concerned the speakers for the southern route had much the best of it as the court room was filled with a large delegation of residents of Sandy and other sections of Clackamas county. Gus Moser even intimated that the meeting may have been packed.

JUDGE DIMICK SPEAKS
Commissioner Mann introduced a joint report of a survey made by City Engineer Laurgaard, Engineer Handlett of the water bureau and former City Engineer Morris, in which it was claimed that the distance by the southern route was 32.48 miles, as compared with 32.55 north of the Sandy river.

Whatever the difference in cost of construction there might be in favor of the southern route was, it was claimed, more than counterbalanced by the extra cost of right of way and difficulties of drainage.

While it was admitted that the route surveyed by the state highway department on the south side was the best one that could be found on that side, it was contended that in an improvement involving the expenditure of $1,000,000 a complete survey should also be made of the northern route before a decision was made. It was held that from a trunk road standpoint the north side was the logical one.

In behalf of the southside location, Judge Dimick of Oregon City spoke from the viewpoint of county and city development, saying that the southern route passed through the greatest area of agricultural country.

CONTROVERSY FORESTALLED

Another survey, he said, would not demonstrate the superiority of the northern location, but would simply delay the improvement of the road. As a booster for more farm production, Circuit Judge Stapleton came to the ranks of the Clackamas county people in behalf of the southern route, as did Senator George W. Joseph.

The highway department is just completing a survey of the northern route, which indicates that the route is slightly shorter than the northern route and can be constructed for approximately $900,000 less. Until the details are fully worked out, however, the commission will not take further action relative to the location.

The old high pass-low pass controversy and the Eugene-Florence controversy was before the commission again, but in order to forestall a possible court injunction proceeding it was laid aside for a time. The commission by a divided vote had advertised for bids on the grading of the Golden section. Before the bids were opened A. D. Leedy, representing the Grant county court and others, filed a protest on the ground that the only authority the commission had to undertake the work by law was to do so in cooperation with the federal government as a forest road and on the further ground that the route was not selected by unanimous vote of the commission, Chairman Benson having opposed, and further that it was not a road of state importance.

SEVERAL BIDS RECEIVED
By diverting the state road funds to its construction, it was contended that roads of primary importance, such as the John Day highway, would be deprived of the necessary support.

There were several bids on the project, including one from the Lane county court. After they were opened the matter was disposed of by an agreement that the Leedy protest would be withdrawn and the letting of the contract be deferred until its legality could be passed on by Attorney General Brown. The lowest bid was $121,819. Lane county court bid $123,000.

The following contracts were awarded by the commission:
Cherman county, graveling 14.5 miles Columbia river highway, Porter & Conley, $108,000.

Polk county, grading and graveling 7.5 miles Tillamook-McMinnville highway between Yamhill county line and Butler's store; Elliott & Scoggin, $98,254.

An agreement was reached with the United States forest service to cooperate in the graveling of the McKenzie pass road from Blue river to Balknap springs and to eliminate the grade of Dead Horse hill. The amount of the state appropriation is to be $26,000.

The next meeting of the commission will be August 10.

Gas Tank Explodes; Residence Damaged

Abideen, Wash., July 21.—The explosion of a large carbide tank used in the welding shop of S. R. Castle demolished the place and damaged the residence of C. Y. Fenwick next door. Eye witnesses say that the tank was blown 100 feet into the air and that it fell on the roof of the Fenwick house, breaking partially through. No one was in the repair shop when the accident occurred and the cause is unknown.

Kozar Gets Negative Argument on Four Initiative Measures

Salem, July 21.—Arguments opposing four of the 11 measures that will appear on the November ballot had been filed on the November ballot had been filed with Secretary of State Kozar up to closing time Tuesday afternoon, for publication in the official voters' pamphlet. This was the last day on which negative arguments could be filed. Three arguments are directed against the measure proposing a maximum legal interest rate of 4 per cent. One of these is sponsored by the Oregon State Bankers' association, another by the State Chamber of Commerce and a third by M. L. Jones of Brooks. The proposed consolidation of the Portland dock commission is opposed in an argument filed by the Taxpayers' Vigilance commission, Robert J. Linden, secretary. William H. Trindell of Salem filed an argument opposing the proposed state market competition, and the proposed single tax

Alleged Forger Is Caught by Police

Some months ago, when short of money, Ruth Bashore, wife of a Portland prizefighter, found a Ladd & Tilton checkbook. She filled in the blanks, which, of course, was all right, except that she had no account, say the police. Time went on, and so did the checks, until Ruth tried to pass one on Harry Eukles, who reported her to the police, who say she cashed 21 checks, amounting to about $1000 in all. She is charged with obtaining money under false pretenses.
