

LUMLBER INDUSTRY PROSPECTS BETTER, EDITOR OBSERVES

Among the eastern visitors at the Portland hotel is A. L. Ford of Chicago, managing editor of the American Lumberman, the leading lumber trade paper of the country.

Ford says that when he left Chicago three weeks and there was a distinctly better feeling apparent in the lumber trade and the consensus was that the worst of the depression in the lumber industry had passed and that a steady improvement might be hoped for.

Reports from various retail centers throughout the country indicate that a buying movement is at hand, he said. Lumber dealers generally have permitted their stocks to run down during the lull in building activity and now must build them up again in order to take care of the trade that will follow the harvest of the active demand is expected in all the agricultural districts, especially for material for the construction of granaries, corn cribs, hay sheds and additional storage for the grain that will have to be collected while awaiting delayed shipment on account of the car shortage.

CAB SHORTAGE ACUTE "The lumber industry generally is experiencing an acute shortage of lumber because of the inability of the railroads to handle promptly and expeditiously cars that have accumulated in eastern terminals. With the granting by the Interstate Commerce commission of increased freight rates the railroads will be in better position to finance their requirements and, next to the farmers, the railroads are the largest buyers of lumber in this country, a demand is looked for that will tax the ability of the mills to supply.

COAST PLANTS BIG PART "In supplying the lumber needs of the country the west coast is going to play a more and more important part, for as the timber supply of the south gradually diminishes the deficiency from that section must be made up in the West. This being true, the west coast, by its utilization and conservation of the great forests of the Pacific Northwest grows increasingly important. This has been recognized by the National Lumber Manufacturers association, which, at a recent meeting in Chicago, promulgated a national forestry program in which the industry, the government, the federal and state, may cooperate, and at the same time wisely selected as for-ester for the association to have charge of this important work in the west coast a Portland man, E. T. Allen, an experienced forester who has the confidence of the entire industry.

HELPFUL PROGRAM PLANNED "It is hoped, through his efforts and those working with him, that a program can be worked out in which all may cooperate and the great lumber industry be perpetuated without injury to the interests of anyone." Ford is making a tour of the Pacific Northwest to get first hand information as to conditions in the lumber industry in this section and will spend several days in Portland and vicinity. He is accompanied by Mr. Gilmer, western manager of the American Lumberman.

Corinne R. Barker And Hobart Henley Wed at New York

New York, July 26.—In the sailing of Mr. and Mrs. Hobart Henley for Europe yesterday another romance of the stage came to light. Mrs. Henley, before her marriage to Mr. Gilmer, was Corinne R. Barker, an actress. Her husband is an actor and motion picture producer. The couple were married by the Rev. Dr. Musie of the Ethical Culture society in the Madison avenue home of Mr. Henley. Only immediate members of the two families were present. The ceremony, for once, did not leave the marriage of two of its favorites until they were well on their way toward England. Miss Barker, who was born in Oregon, has starred on Broadway and appeared in motion pictures. Mr. Henley for several years successfully directing motion picture production has recently formed a producing company of which he is the head.
