More than 200 members of Portland post, American Legion, will go to Astoria, Thursday to attend the state convention. Assurances of this number were virtually made Monday night when the last registrations were made.

James R. Bain, vice commander of the Portland organization, will have charge of the special train leaving at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon on which about 400 men and women are expected to travel to the convention city.

A large number of American Legion caps, patterned after the overseas cap worn by the American soldier, have been obtained by the post and will be distributed to the Legionnaires on the train.

The convention will officially open Friday, although the festivities will commence with the arrival of the train from Portland.

Portland post's plans to take a band to Astoria did not work out as the organization found it could not afford the expense of caring for the musicians during three days of the annual gathering.

The housing problem is the most vital issue before the country, according to Shallcross, and can be solved only by a nation wide building campaign. "It is impossible to hold rental rates at a given level by legislation," said the realtor. "It is not rental laws that we want but houses and apartments to live in."

Plans for the Portland community chest will approach a focus at a meeting to be held Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the Chamber of Commerce.

The idea of the community chest is to condense all financial drives of established institutions requiring support by general contributions into one drive a year and to place the direction of the one drive under a strong organization of business men, thus relieving trained social workers of the necessity of spending half their time "begging money."

The organization committee, which will make its final report this evening, consists of Mayor George L. Baker, chairman ex-officio; E. N. Strong, president of the Ad club, active chairman; Henry L. Cyrbett, Max S. Hirsch, Colonel Walter D. Whitcomb, John F. Daly, B. C. Ball, G. W. Mielke, City Attorney W. F. La Roche, legal adviser; Milton Reed Klepper, secretary.

Three delegates each from a selected list of civic and business organizations, the delegates to the present, a director and a member at large of each of the organizations, have been appointed and pledged to attendance at Tuesday evening's meeting.
