OPERETTA IS REAL WOODLAND IDYL

By Anne Shannon Monroe

One sentiment overwhelmed me at the close of the charming little operatic fan-

"Forest Children," written by Mabel Holmes Parsons, is easily an idyl of our own land, our own childhood and our own forest.
From this beginning should come an annual festival of the woodland that will focus our attention and the attention of outsiders on this phase of life in Oregon which is so closely interwoven with the warp of our daily existence, the thing that, above all else, makes us love this green land.
