Smart Luncheon Honors Two Visitors

By Helen H. Hutchison.
HONORING Mrs. Frank Vincent Du Mond of New York city, who is a visitor at the home of her mother, Mrs. Henry E. Jones, in Carter lane, and Mrs. Carleton Walter Betts (Beth Teal) of Buffalo, N. Y., who is also visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Nathan Teal for the summer, Mrs. Vincent Cook was hostess for a smart luncheon Tuesday. The affair was given at Waverly Country club, and the luncheon table was especially attractive with an artistic arrangement of blue delphinium and old fashioned summer blossoms arranged in baskets and placed as a border for the table. Seated about the table were Mrs. Du Mond, Mrs. Betts, Mrs. George B. Maxwell, Mrs. Elliott R. Corbett, Mrs. Eugene Jockey, Mrs. Thomas D. Honeyman, Mrs. Hallett W. Maxwell, Mrs. William Muller, Mrs. Edward Hamilton Geary, Mrs. Robert Washington, Mrs. Edmund C. Giltner, Miss Cornelia Cook, Miss Isabella Gauld, Miss Florence Kendall and Miss May Hirsch. The afternoon was spent informally.

Interesting visitors in Portland are Mr. and Mrs. Carl Foster of Bridgeport, Conn., who are guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Estery at Hillsdale for a short time. Mr. and Mrs. Foster, who have visited Portland before, are accompanied by their children and are making a brief stop at points of interest throughout the Northwest. During their stay in Portland, Mr. and Mrs. Foster have been entertained informally by a number of friends, among whom are Dr. and Mrs. John Forrest Dickson, who were hosts for a dinner given in their honor Monday at the Waverly Country club. Mr. and Mrs. Foster, with their children, will leave the city Saturday.

For the pleasure of Mrs. W. L. Geary and her daughter, Miss Margaret Geary of Berkeley, Cal., who are guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hamilton Geary this week, Mrs. A. L. Maxwell asked a few friends in for an informal tea Monday afternoon at her home in Prospect drive. Mrs. Geary and her daughter are leaving for their home in the south Friday evening.

Salem, July 25.—O. D. Bower, deputy sheriff and Republican nominee for sheriff of Marion county, their children, Mrs. Grace Driscoll of Salem in Portland, July 3, according to information received Monday, after Mr. and Mrs. Bower had kept the secret for more than three weeks.

Mrs. Charles E. Miller entertained informally at the tea hour Wednesday afternoon, honoring Miss Meta Rupp of Saguinaw, Mich., and Miss Eleanor Seacrest of Salem, who are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Norman N. Rupp for a short time.

Mrs. Lowell Ellsworth Kern (Jean Stevens) is a visitor in Portland this week at the home of her mother, Mrs. Jasper C. Stevens. Mrs. Kern have been making their home in Pendleton since their marriage a few weeks ago.

Mr. and Mrs. William Minsinger and children are enjoying a delightful outing at Mount Hood, near Welch, where they have as guests at their camp Mrs. George Powers, Mr. and Mrs. A. Burgy and grandson.

Miss Gladys Bowen was a visitor in Portland from Vancouver, Wash., Tuesday, coming to the city to attend the premiere of the "Forest Children" at the H. C. Wortman gardens.

Miss Louise Linthicum, daughter of Mrs. Stewart B. Linthicum, is a visitor this week at Tokeland, Wash., where she is a member of a house party at the home of Mrs. Burick Wood.

Miss Helen Harper, violinist, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Harper, is spending the summer at the home of Mrs. Kern. Mrs. James Bett, at Elko, Nev. She will return to the city September 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Burney Wilcox (Elizabeth Menefee) have returned to Portland, following their wedding trip, and are domiciled at Glenwood farm, the Wilcox country home.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Marshall are leaving the city early next week for Gearhart, where they will occupy their cottage for the remainder of the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Beebe, who have been spending a short time in "Sautier National park, returned to Portland Wednesday after a delightful trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mettler and family are spending a few weeks camping near Welch, on Mount Hood.

Mr. and Mrs. William L. Thompson are spending a few weeks at their former home in Pendleton.

Mary Fairbanks Buys Wardrobe Doug Sees Business Openings

By Sydney B. Whipple.
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)
New York, July 25.—"She," said Doug Fairbanks, pointing an accusing finger at our own Mary, sunk up to her eyebrows in the deep plush cushions of the davenport in their room at the Ritz, "she went out and bought four million dresses. And most of them look like that one she has on—she's under a shirt with a fringe at the top."
Now, that was Doug's complete characterization of Mary's trip to Paris. It told almost the whole story. In Doug's mind, of their sojourn in foreign countries.

As for Mary, she said little but looked a lot.
On behalf of Mary's gown, it should be said that it was no such thing. It was a cream-colored acetate, or other that began at her neck and fell below her waist. It was as far from Doug's unorthodox description as Paris is from Skowhegan's Maine.
To make things easier for interviewers, Doug continued after this fashion: "We'd go into a shop, and she'd say, 'look at the lines in this dear little dress.' And, so help me, there weren't any lines to it at all—not a line."

"Just bought dresses."
"You'd say, 'That's beautiful, Mary; that's great.' And she'd buy two dozen. Just like that. Yes, sir, she bought four million dresses, if not more. That's all she did in Paris."
Mary didn't answer the accusation. She was too busy describing one of her frocks to a bubbling young friend to bother denying anything. England, Switzerland, Holland and Belgium apparently remain as nothing but a floating memory beside that adorable Paris.
But, except when he was busy decrying his wife's expensive hobby of depriving Paris of its finest and costliest, Mary at Doug seemed a bit tired. He and Mary have hopped around quite a bit, as if there were crowds everywhere.
"Everywhere in the world," Mary said. "Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks. Everybody apparently is happy they're married, almost as happy as Doug and Mary themselves. But when Mary Doug admitted, in places where they never heard of Wilson or the League of Nations."

THE whole thing impressed the American stars. It impressed them particularly that there was a practically virgin field for American motion picture capital.
"Why, think of it," said Doug. "There's Central Europe, with about 300,000,000 people, all of them pleasure loving, all film crazy, and they can't get enough pictures to satisfy them."
"I'm going to Washington and get the government and some of the biggest men in the country to back us and coral a part of the field. Man, it's wonderful, the opportunity that is there." Mary and Doug arrived Wednesday on the White Star liner Olympic. A

Women Treated Well at S. F. Convention

MRS. C. B. SIMMONS, seventh regional director for the National League of Women voters, has returned from a trip through her region during which she covered five states and accompanied the national board to San Francisco, where it went to present its plans to the platform committee of the Democratic party.
"When we say the Democratic party took all but one of the planks offered it is needless to tell of the rejoicing among the women of the league," said Mrs. Simmons Wednesday. "The phrase asking for a federal department of education is the part that was not accepted. Women everywhere feel that they have at last reached the place where men regard them as political equals after this demonstration and the Democratic convention was a revelation to the world in this respect."

Charles Edward Russell, the well known political diagnostician, in speaking of the platform at a dinner given by the league to the press women attending the convention, said:
"It is the most constructive program ever presented for a platform in my 41 years of political convention experience. In the lobby of the Palace hotel hangs a huge placard on which is listed the most satisfactory and fundamental program for humanity I have ever seen. The significant fact in political circles is that it was drawn up and presented by a group of women. In my opinion the future of the country lies in the hands of the women and their freedom from political oppression. Attractive lettering of white and orange on a black background set out the main points of the 'woman's platform' which has had endorsement of the Democratic party. L. Owen, Edward Meredith and James W. Gerard."

"We urge federal cooperation with the states in the protection of infant life through infancy and maternity care. The prohibition of child labor and vocational training in home economics and federal regulation of the marketing and distribution of food; full representation of women on all commissions dealing with women's work or women's interests; the establishment of a joint federal and state employment service with women's departments under the direction of technically qualified women; a reclassification of the federal civil service free from discrimination on the ground of sex; a continuance of appropriations for public education in sex hygiene; federal legislation which shall insure that American born women, resident in the United States, married to aliens, shall retain American citizenship, and that the same process of naturalization shall be required of alien women as is required of alien men."

The third annual meeting of the Oregon Federation of Negro Women's Clubs will be held today and Friday at the Bethel African Methodist Episcopal church. An open meeting will be held Thursday evening at a musical program will be a feature of the occasion. An all day meeting will be held Friday at 10 o'clock at Mount Olive church. This meeting will close at Shattuck school in the evening at 8:30 o'clock with a lecture by Professor Kelly Miller of Howard university, Washington, D. C. Take Sixteenth street car to Hall street.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

By Thornton W. Burgess.
A pleasant time is had by all who read one's absence causes friends concern. It proves that your friends really do care for you; that you have a place in their affections. And after all there is nothing in life finer or more to be desired than true friendship.
Now you know Peter Rabbit had been in the house of visiting the Green Forest and the Old Orchard every chance he got that he was almost as much at home in those places as in the dear Old Briar-patch. But when a week or two days that Peter remained at home in the Old Briar-patch his friends in the Green Forest and the Old Orchard gave him a hard time. But when a week or two more days passed and Peter hadn't been seen he was missed.

Sammy Jay was the first one to mention the matter. Sammy keeps a close watch on everybody and everything, and there is little going on in the Green Forest or the Old Orchard that Sammy doesn't know about. Early one morning, as he was making his rounds, it came to Sammy that he hadn't seen Peter for several days. Sammy said nothing until he had visited all the places where Peter was likely to be found. Of course he didn't find Peter. Then he began to inquire of the other little people if they had seen Peter recently. "No one had."
"That is queer," muttered Sammy to himself. "I have never known Peter to stay away so long before. I wonder if anything can have happened to the long-legged little rascal. Good morning, hop not! Things wouldn't be the same without Peter poking his wiggly little nose into everybody's business but his own. I wonder if Reddy Fox knows anything about him."
"Good morning, Reddy," Sammy said in his most polite manner. Reddy stopped and looked up at Sammy Jay suspiciously. It was unusual for Sammy to be so polite. Usually Sammy greeted him with a harsh scream of "Thief! Thief! Thief!" So Reddy was suspicious. "He has come because of his politeness. He has come to his mind. He wants to find out something from me," thought Reddy. "Fair, middling fair. Just a trifle too warm for comfort," replied Sammy. "As Peter Rabbit would say, it is good sitting-out weather."

THE Stroller notices

THAT a pair of bluebirds were bathing in the dew on the lawn as we came to work this morning.
That it was a good omen for another happy day.
That through the courtesy of an unknown friend our evening meal was enriched by choice condiments.
That the L. H. passed favorable judgment on them.
That the Girl With the Green Eyes is in town again.
That she has a coat of tan 'n everything.
That there's something mysterious about that girl.
That as yet we haven't seen a campaign button embellishing a single coat lapel.
That there will probably be plenty of them ere long.
That it's embarrassing to meet a lady friend climbing on the same car with you when you have but 8 cents in your pocket.

On the 5:15
"Do you read The Stroller?" asked a young woman of her companion as they sat opposite us in the B-M stub last evening.
"Never heard of it," answered the young man.

"Why, he lives on top of the hill," continued the young woman, as she folded her Journal inside out. "Here's his column."
Together they read the column, and though the young man didn't seem very deeply impressed, he forced a smile as though he rather felt that he was expected to do so.
"Who is this Stroller?" he asked.
"Why, his name is —" answered the lady, "and he has two little girls he writes about sometimes, and he calls them the Titian and the Little One. Their real names are — and —"

We enjoyed the conversation immensely, particularly because, though the young woman had our name correct, the names of the two little girls she mentioned were not our children at all, but the daughters of our good friend and neighbor on the next block.
Such is "fame," and if the young woman, who wore an orange-colored waist, with orange-colored ticklers on her hat, and carried a patent leather bag decorated with a bunch of grapes, reads this, she will know why we were smiling when she and her friend left the car at Siskiyou street.

Action Against "Bill" Hart Has Been Non-Suited

San Francisco, July 31.—A non-suit has been granted by Judge Works in the action of J. Parker Read Jr. against William S. Hart, motion picture actor, to recover a commission of $44,800 for the negotiation of a contract.
The court found that at the time Read negotiated a contract for Hart with the Aircraft Pictures Corporation in New York, he also negotiated a contract between Thomas H. Ince and Hart and the same distributors. This latter contract called for the distribution of pictures to be made by three stars, two of whom were Charles Ray and Epit Bennett. These contracts were signed the same day.
The Ray-Bennett contract provided that it was entered into because of the Hart contract and that it could be terminated any time after the Hart contract should terminate.
The court found that the contracts were carried out together. On this ground, he held that Read could not recover his commission from Hart. Attorneys Congrove and Carpenter will appeal from the judgment. It is stated, Attorney Scarborough represented Hart.

'Blue Bird' Takes Her Maiden Voyage

The "Blue Bird," Montrose Ringier's new river dancing and pleasure boat, took her maiden voyage on the river Wednesday night, and 750 persons were entertained. The "Blue Bird" is a somewhat pretentious craft, with ample dancing accommodations and well equipped for personal comfort and care.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

By Mildred Marshall.
Copyright, 1920, by the Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.
Anne, Anita, Nanette, Nancy, Hannah. The charming simplicity of Anne is reached through a piquant history. Its root is found in the Hebrew Chanannah, signifying favor, mercy, or grace, and first known as Hannah, mother of Samuel. Whether the British custom of dropping the preliminary "h" originated in those early days is not authentically substantiated, but certainly Hannah became Anne in a very short time. Quite erroneously, the name was confused by the Romans with their goddess Anna Perennia, presiding deity of the circling year.
St. Anna was a favorite with the Byzantines from very early times. In the days of Christianity it reached its greatest fame when it became the name of the mother of the Blessed Virgin. Later, all of Europe adopted Anne with the exception of Italy, where the charming interpretation of Anne, meaning joy, Anne of Luxemburg took her name into England and there forsook her. Anne, the calm-eyed, gracious whom the best known were Anne Montimer and Anne Boleyn, ill-fated wife of Henry VIII.

It was given to France by the Breton heiress who was twice queen of the empire, and her Italian granddaughter, Anne of Este, took it to Italy, where the custom of giving a religious feast to the Virgin and her mother gave rise to the coupling of the two names into Anna Marie or Marianne. Since then no name has undergone more varieties of endearment, considering that it is already so short that it scarcely lends itself to abbreviation.

Scotland calls her Annot. France has contributed numerous derivatives, of which Anneite, Nanette, Nannon, Nimon and Nichteite are the most popular. Anne and Anita are the typically Spanish names. Anne, Nanna and Ninetta have been adopted by Italy. English derivatives are almost too many for mention here, but the most familiar are Annie, Ann, Nan, Nannie and Nancy.
It's a curious fact that the poets have neglected Anne as a subject for immortal verse. They have chosen rather her diminutive and written odes to Annie and Nannie and even to Annabel, which is erroneously thought to mean "beautiful Anne," but has a totally different derivation. Anne, calm-eyed, gracious, excels her prerogative of mercy with cool detachment, is a wielder of power, not a sentimentalist.
Quite as cool and efficient is the gem which Anne and her feminine diminutives should wear as a talisman-amber. Everyone knows the curative and preventive qualities of the lovely transparent golden jewel. Its popularity among the Scandinavian peoples has extended to the whole world and its vogue is apparent in the jewelry shops of every country. Amber wards off illness and the jinx of bad luck. To dream of it insures a safe voyage.
Gertrude Olmstead of La Salle, Ill., has been placed on the Universal photographic record as the most beautiful woman in the world. Her beauty was placed recently held in Chicago.
