

GASOLINE SUPPLY NOT APPORTIONED FAIRLY IS CHARGE

Discrimination by oil companies handling the distribution of gasoline against one section of the country is not only unfair but cannot be satisfactorily explained, declared F. E. Moskovics, vice president of the Nor-dyke & Marrison company and member of the Society of Automotive Engineers, Friday morning.

"What affects one part of the country ultimately affects the whole country," Moskovics said, "and people of the Pacific coast should demand an equal rationing of gasoline. Instead of the shortage being felt acutely in one part of the country, let it be felt slightly in all parts."

"It is to be a dues paying organization," he said. "No Wall street is going to pay the fiddler in this case, but the rank and file of the party who are not able to bring about a reorganization of the supply, let the government take a hand."

Shortage of gasoline is not felt anywhere in the country except on the Pacific coast, according to Moskovics. He has been investigating the gasoline situation in the East and finds no complaint in any centers or outlying districts there. The fact that automobiles have vastly increased in numbers is no reason for a shortage, he said.

"The oil companies might have foreseen this situation months ago and made provision against it. If the dealers can purchase the fuel, then the distributing companies can supply it. The companies in the Texas fields, they could have done so weeks ago. Texas has an abundance of gasoline."

Moskovics admits that the demand for gasoline has surpassed production, and says that for cracking processes to increase the yield of gasoline from a given quantity of crude oil will cut down the supply of by-products necessary to the activities of the world being illuminated by kerosene. It would be folly to cut down the yield of that fuel.

"It is estimated that the state of Utah has enough shale to supply the world with crude oil for 800 years, Colorado has enormous deposits, and so have Wyoming and Northern Texas. It may be used to raise the price of gasoline to at least 40 cents a gallon in order to interest capital in this development, which the British are already familiar with, but once production has started and refining methods have been established, the price will come down."

Moskovics will leave Friday night, but during his stay here he intends to talk with various business men on the fuel situation, in an effort to discover just to what extent the coast has been affected by the shortage.

Warnings on Gas Shortage in Oregon Being Investigated

Warnings advising tourists to keep away from Oregon on the pretext that there is no gasoline to be obtained in this state have been put up in the tourist camp ground at Salt Lake City, according to advice received Thursday by George Quayle, secretary of the State Chamber of Commerce from W. E. Meacham, secretary of the Baker chamber.

Advice from tourists at Hood River is that similar signs have been posted along the trans-continental route in Idaho. Quayle will make an effort to find an intentional discrimination is being made as far as sent out the information that the gasoline shortage is general in all coast states, but that rationed supplies are always obtainable.

Pay as You Enter, Third Party Plan, Says Christensen

New York, July 30.—(L. N. S.)—Membership in the Farmer-Labor party will be on the "pay as you enter plan," Parley P. Christensen, presidential candidate, announced today on his arrival in New York.

Asked how the new party would be financed, he said: "It is to be a dues paying organization. Those who pay the fiddler call the tune. No Wall street is going to pay the fiddler in this case, but the rank and file of the party who are not able to bring about a reorganization of the supply, let the government take a hand."

N. Y. AUTHORITIES EXPLAIN ACTIONS IN SCHWARTZ CASE

New York, July 30.—New York authorities responded promptly to the request of Governor Ben W. Olcott of Oregon, to investigate the case of Milton Schwartz, charged with being an insane degenerate, who was committed to the custody of relatives who moved him to Oregon. It was learned today.

Justice Tierney said his action was justified by the evidence brought before him. He said he was not able to shift responsibility for the care of Schwartz from this state to another. Schwartz, when he arrived in Oregon, is said to have misadvised himself as to a boarding house in such a manner as to be brought into the courts here, resulting in his entrance into a private sanatorium in the custody of his relatives.
