

DOUGLAS, MARQUIS OF QUEENSBERRY, IS DEAD AT AGE OF 52

London, Aug. 2.—(I. N. S.)—The Marquis of Queensberry died today in Johannesburg, S. A., on Sunday, said a Central News dispatch from that city today.

The family name of the Marquis of Queensberry was Percy Sholto Douglas and he was 52 years old. He succeeded to the title in 1900. He was twice married. The eldest son, who will succeed to the title, is 27 years old and fought in the World War.

The Marquis of Queensberry mentioned is the son of the Marquis who became noted throughout the world as a patron of sport, particularly of pugilism. The well known "Marquis of Queensberry" rules of the boxing ring are credited to the father of the lately deceased Marquis. These rules were framed in 1867 and have since been used in all championship matches. The son who succeeds to the title will be known as the tenth Marquis. The family is of Scottish origin and the title goes back to the fifteenth century.

Economist Gets Cox View on League; Is Going to See Harding

Dayton, Ohio, Aug. 2.—Irving Fisher, the noted economist of Yale, today revealed the real purpose of his conference with Governor James M. Cox, democratic presidential nominee.

"I am the representative of a newly formed organization of the League of Nations," said Fisher, "and I was delegated to talk with both Governor Cox and Senator Harding for the purpose of finding out exactly where both candidates stand on the league. Our organization will support the candidate who comes nearest to representing our view on international relations."

Fisher said he would go to Marlon from here and would probably have a conference with Senator Harding. He declined to make any statement as to whether he found Governor Cox's attitude toward the league in accordance with his own, but said they had gone into the matter fully. Fisher brought away from the conference an advance copy of the governor's speech of acceptance. The Yale professor would give no details as to the membership of the organization he represents.

Governor Cox rested from politics Sunday. In the morning he attended services at Christ Episcopal church, Dayton, and in the afternoon he acted as his own chauffeur, driving with Mrs. Cox to his farm at Jacksonburg, 30 miles from Dayton, and returning late in the evening.
