Spectacular Fire Burns Two Trucks And Oil Warehouse
An oil house and two automobile trucks belonging to the Pacific Bridge company, foot of East Salmon street, were demolished by a spectacular fire early Sunday morning.

Flames swept high in the air, as the fire was fed by gasoline from the tank truck. From there the flames jumped to the oil house, where more oil added to the fierceness of the flames. Because of the danger of the oil tank exploding in fighting the fire was extremely hazardous. It failed to explode, although the gasoline was burned up.

The gravel truck was also badly damaged. Assistant Fire Marshall estimated the entire damage at $3000. The gravel truck was owned by H. P. Gault, fourth street. Yost was planning a trip to Bend. He was preparing for the trip by filling some 50 gallon containers in the truck with gasoline. The tail light on the truck had been left lighted which ignited to gasoline. Six fire engines and two fireboats were called out to combat the fire.

Preparations are being made for a large crowd at the Armory Monday night when Franklin D'Olier, national commander, will address members of the American Legion on progress of the fight to obtain a bonus for ex-service men and other legion activities in behalf of veterans.

Mr. and Mrs. D'Olier and James E. Darst, one of the associate editors of the American Legion magazine, arrived Saturday night from San Francisco. The national commander is visiting posts in every state west of the Mississippi river.

Representatives of a dozen posts in Oregon had arrived in Portland at noon to attend a dinner being given in honor of the national leader at the Benson Monday evening and the meeting that is to follow.

ASTORIA VETERANS COMING
Major W. S. Gilbert, chaplain of the 162d Infantry, the old Third Oregon, who has been elected department commander of the legion in Oregon, was expected in Portland from his home at Astoria Monday afternoon, and he will probably preside at the Armory meeting.

The national commander was taken to Salem at 10 o'clock Monday morning by a party of state legion officials to meet members of Capitol post at a luncheon at Marion hotel, held at noon. William B. Follett, vice-national commander, drove the car and with him were George A. White, adjutant-general of Oregon; G. Lane Goodell, vice-commander of Oregon, and E. J. Elvers, department adjutant.

Representatives from the posts at Albany, Corvallis, Independence and other cities of the upper Willamette valley were expected to attend the gathering at Salem.

The party will motor back to Portland Monday afternoon in time for dinner at the Benson.

Mrs. D'Olier was entertained informally Monday by members of the women's auxiliary of Portland post.

The D'Oliers were shown over Columbia River highway Sunday as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Follett. In two machines were Mr. and Mrs. G. Lane Goodell, Mr. and Mrs. George A. With George A. White of Portland and Lieutenant-Colonel Theodore Roosevelt Jr. D'Olier was one of the first men to propose formation of the legion in endeavoring to do for those who fought through the recent war. Entering the service as a captain, he finished with the grade of lieutenant-colonel, attached to the general staff.

FLAMES DESTROY MILL AT LINNTON

Fire which broke out early Sunday morning in the Strange Shingle company mill, four miles west of Linnton, along the Linnton road, completely destroyed the mill and nine houses belonging to the company, doing damage estimated at $100,000.

The mill was being operated by William S. Strange and Charles S. Strange, brothers, under a seven year lease from the S. Ban Export & Import company. They have been operating the mill for nearly three years. The mill equipment was totally destroyed. Shingles estimated at a value of $35,000 were burned.

A boarding house which was operated by William Strange and where his family lived, four dwelling houses and four bunkhouses were included in the loss. Very little personal belongings and no furniture were saved. A little bed clothing was saved from the house which was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Strange, parents of the lessees of the mill.

The annual output of the mill was $140,000, said S. A. Strange. Eighteen men were employed, all of whom lost all their clothing and personal belongings except what they had with them. They were all in Portland at the time of the fire.

The dwelling houses were occupied by E. Sherman Carlson and family, Charles Parrish and family, Charles Strange and family and the Strange's parents. The Strange brothers and their families were at Kelo picking cherries when the fire occurred. They got to the scene too late to save any property.

Carlton had a narrow escape when he attempted to save some property from his home. He saved nothing, as did Parrish. These families were forced to move to apartments in Portland temporarily. The Strange brothers returned to Kelo. Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Strange are living for the present in a little shanty along the Linnton road, several hundred feet above the fire, the only property saved.

Mrs. Carolyn Denman, the cook, who also lived in the boarding house, lost virtually all her personal belongings. The owners of the mill have made no plans as to whether or not they will rebuild.
