

JONES BACKS NEW MERCHANT MARINE MEASURE TO LIMIT

Tacoma, Wash., Aug. 11.—(I. N. S.)—Emphatically declaring that the merchant marine act was law and that there would be no change in any provision until tried out by experience, Senator Wesley L. Jones, father of the act, Tuesday made his first address in defense of the law, and especially section 28, which provides for differential rates favoring American ships on all rail shipments destined for foreign ports provided they are carried in American bottoms.

Senator Jones' address preceded a special hearing on section 28, which was attended by representatives from San Francisco, Portland, Seattle and Tacoma. He declared at the conclusion of his address that he wanted to see American shipping take its rightful place on the seven seas and that he believed the merchant marine act would accomplish this. He added that the hearing would not change his opinion in the least.

LEGISLATION NEEDED "Retaliation confronts us" on the part of competitors for trade, said Senator Jones, "and will continue to do so until we get legislation that will protect and build up the merchant marine. During the war we furnished the Pacific coast to transport troops, and immediately our allies placed their own ships on the coast to build up their trade."

Senator Jones denied he had anything to do with placing section 28 in the bill. He said it was placed there on the recommendation of the shipping board and unanimously indorsed by the special committee and the committee as a whole.

The speaker said the law was framed so that the shipping board was vested with enormous power, and section 28 would not be enforced where it would be detrimental to any section, or where there were insufficient American bottoms to carry freight.

"I have been told that a foreign company will show preference for our own country's ships," said the speaker. "Well, if he does, we take a good lesson from him, but I doubt if any company will disregard lower rates if it can get them."

Senator Jones urged shippers to wait and give the new act a chance to work and that the new shipping board would have a representative from every section, any complaint would be justly cared for and no community would suffer by reason of any section of the law.

Senator Jones' audience included representatives of all large foreign shipping lines operating out of Puget Sound and other coast cities.

W. L. Clark, Washington representative of the Pacific Steamship company, acted as spokesman for the act at the hearing, and answered questions of coast shippers.

Beat Their Way From East Just To 'See' Oregon

Albany, Or., Aug. 11.—Glowing accounts given by returning Shriners and contained in advertising literature prompted two young Ohio men, whose names were not learned, to "beat" their way to Albany to see Oregon, they told Chief of Police John Catlin, who took them into custody from a freight train.

WARNERS BLAZE TRAIL FURTHER UP LARCH MOUNTAIN

Charles E. Warner and his two sons, Charles and Wilbur, have returned from a week spent in further opening up the new Larch mountain trail by ascending by the northwest ridge from Bridal Veil and Angels Rest.

This trail was started last spring by the Trails club and a party headed by Warner worked all last week completing the new route.

Two new springs were made ready for use, one between Angels Rest and the east fork of Bridal Veil creek and the other at an elevation of about 3000 feet on the northwest ridge. The latter is said to be the best spring on the mountain as the flow of water is copious.

Lipman Wolfe & Co. "Merchandise of Merit Only" "Why Buy Furs in August?"

THIS question was asked of us by a level-headed business man who came with his wife to look into the fur situation. It was a fair question bluntly put, just as one would expect from a business man—with a single purpose, and that really to convince himself that savings were tangible and not imaginary in this August Fur Sale.

It was a pleasure to convince him. Yes, and it was rather easy.

"Simply go over this entire line of Fur Coats, Sir. You will see that each Coat has two tickets. The large one is our regular sales ticket, on which is the after-August price. The August sale price (which is for August only) is indicated on the smaller ticket of each garment. Now, you are a business man, subtract one from the other and you have the exact amount saved!"

The business man was not only convinced but astonished that he could save such a substantial amount. The saving on the Hudson Seal Fur Coat purchased was $262!

Variety for selection is best during the August Sale. This is a feature that most women appreciate. Fur Coats are priced from as little as $195 and upwards. Fur Scarfs (chokers) are priced $24.75 and up.

Fire Victim Is Buried at Oreleans

Albany, Aug. 11.—The body of Miss Edith Bogue, Elton Court, Portland, fire victim, was buried Tuesday afternoon beside those of her grandparents at Oreleans, near Albany. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. B. F. Fellman, pastor of the Methodist church in Albany.

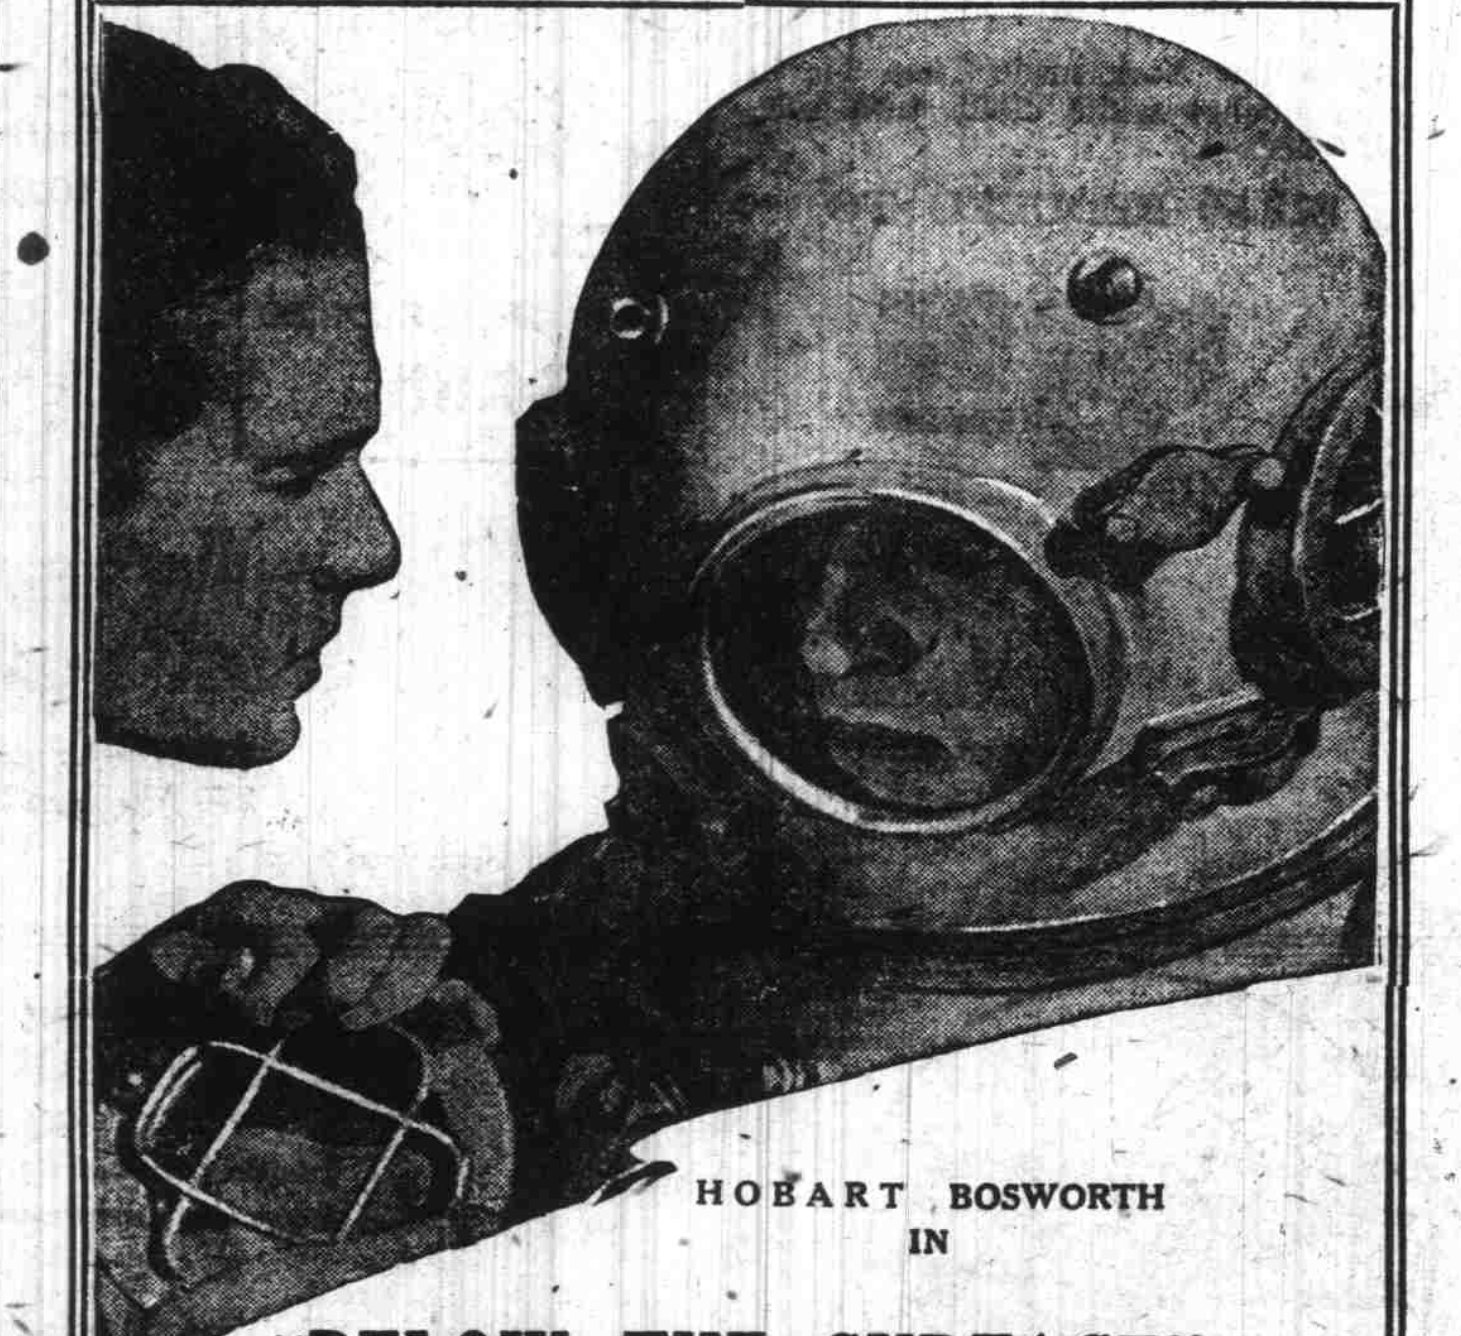

One week of married life was enough for Mr. and Mrs. Zell Tatum of Albany and Lebanon, who were granted a divorce in the local circuit court Tuesday. They were married at Vancouver, Wash., last December, but have lived separately with the exception of the seven days, says Mrs. Tatum, who had charged her husband with cruelty. The case went by default.

Officers Interfere With Still Workers

Dallas, Or., Aug. 10.—Trailing a supposed bootlegger, Sheriff John W. Orr Monday night stumbled onto a still in full operation at the residence of L. F. Evans, a blacksmith, almost in the heart of Independence. Evans and another man escaped from the house just a moment before the arrival of the sheriff, as was evidenced by the fact that a quart fruit jar, into which the liquor was running from the still, was not yet full, although it required only six minutes to fill it. The still, which has an estimated capacity of 60 gallons a day, was brought to Dallas. About 300 gallons of prunes and raisin mash were found ready for use and this was dumped into the Willamette river. It is believed that the still had just started operation, as only two quarts of the finished product was found.
