KEYSER PLACED IN CHARGE OF FIGHT ON EARWIG BUGS

Commissioner S. C. Pier, in charge of the bureau of parks, in a communication to F. H. Keyser, superintendent of parks, Thursday morning ordered him to "roll up his sleeves and get busy" on the earwig plague that is raging through the Walnut Park district.

The fight was taken out of Keyser's hands last week by the mayor and given to Commissioner A. L. Barbur, who had J. W. Jones, sanitary inspector, appointed to carry on the fight.

When Pier returned from his vacation Wednesday, he investigated the earwig troubles and had the matter brought back to Keyser.

The latter announced that Martin W. Gorman, custodian of the forestry building, and considered to be the best informed entomologist in Portland, would be in charge of the drive against the bugs until other agencies are enlisted. Keyser said that the park bureau is now enlisted in three separate campaigns against insects. The elm leaf beetles are causing serious trouble, and the tent caterpillars, always active in August, are doing their worst.

The most comprehensive report yet made on the earwig was received today from Frank H. Lathrop, research assistant in entomology at Oregon Agricultural college. Lathrop investigated August insects in the city and has written his findings to Dr. J. T. Jardine, head of O. A. C. experiment station.

Mazama Pictures Show Climbers on Summit of Baker

Showing three members of the Mazamas on the summit of Mount Baker in Northern Washington, first pictures taken in the camp of the Portland mountaineers to arrive in the city are published in this issue of The Journal. The Mazamas are now making their annual encampment in the northern Cascades. They are expected back next Monday morning.

Edward C. Sammons, president of the club, John A. Lee, both of Portland, and John R. Penland of Albany are shown in the picture taken on the summit, but J. K. Parker was also in this party of scouts who made the trip in advance of the big crowd.

The Mazamas were to have climbed Baker, but because of the remoteness of the region no word of their efforts had been received late Thursday. A party of 20 Mazamas climbed Mount Shuksan, a most difficult ascent, last Sunday.

No Indication of Foul Play in Case Of Wm. Herrick

Vancouver, Wash., Aug. 12.—That William V. Herrick, whose body was found near Seattle, after he had been missing from Vancouver for several days, met his death by drowning was the report of the King county coroner, given out yesterday after an investigation. The theory that Professor Herrick might have been murdered was dispelled when it was found that his throat had not been cut, as stated by the first reports. Although the lower part of the face was disfigured there were no indications that his throat had been cut, it was declared.

Before leaving Vancouver, Herrick had made over a part of his property for the protection of his business partner. It was announced by his attorney, Herrick had been in ill health for some time, and, following a recent financial reverse, it is believed he had suffered a partial mental collapse.

Statement That Big Sum Withheld From Dairymen Is Denied

The statement by C. M. Douglas Tyler, treasurer of the league. Tyler is authority for the statement that all members of the league will be paid for milk delivered during July as usual, although all the money has not yet been collected. Money for the July milk has not yet been received from the Portland-Damascus Milk company, but most of the other distributors have paid the league in the regular way, he said.
