

VENGEANCE AND NOT ROBBERY MAY EXPLAIN MURDER

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 18.—(U. P.)—Despite the fact that rings and money in the possession of Mrs. Alma Sampson at the time of her death have disappeared, the police do not believe that robbery was the motive of her murder early yesterday morning at her room in the Castle hotel.

Two men, William Coleman and Fred Saunders, are held by the police in connection with the case. That Saunders detained simply for investigation was admitted by the police last night. Coleman is booked on an open charge. He is about 35 years of age and was for eight years a policeman in Edmonton. He was arrested late yesterday afternoon and denied that he even had heard that Mrs. Sampson was dead.

Coleman lived at the West hotel. Saunders had a room at the Castle, but appears to have been out of town Monday. When he returned yesterday he attempted to get into communication with Mrs. Sampson and it was he who gave the alarm of her death.

Charles Sampson, brother of the dead woman, was met by police officers at the railway station on the arrival of Tuesday's Seattle train, on which he was employed as a brakeman.

"It was revenge," he exclaimed. "He threatened her and me. He said he would do the same to her as he did to my brother."

Sampson did not indicate at that time to whom he referred, although he later made a full statement to the police.

One important detail is lacking in the police case. They have not as yet discovered the instrument with which the woman was strangled. The gaping wound on the top of her head indicates that it was a weapon of some weight and was used to break down the door and search the room, and the hotel revealed nothing to verify the first supposition that the blow had been struck with a bottle.

Sampson and his wife had been living apart for six months, though they frequently met and were on fairly good terms. It is said that Mrs. Sampson is certain that she carried considerable money.

Hood River Barber Helps Save Hotel With Wet Towels

Hood River, Aug. 18.—The Oregon hotel was threatened by fire Tuesday morning when an awning above the front porch caught fire. Little damage resulted but a serious fire was narrowly averted, for the flames came close to an open window.

A barber was turned in, but volunteer firemen, hearing the news, rushed to the scene.

The barber owning a shop adjacent to the hotel applied wet towels to the smoldering woodwork.

CAMPAIGN LIES ARE FOUND RAMPANT

ator Harding or Governor Cox has anything more to do with the qualifications of these men to be president of the United States than the private lives of the voters who will do the electing next November.

GAMBIT IS RUN

It is not necessary to describe the nature of these stories, for let it suffice to say that everything that has ever been charged against persons in public life is being said about Harding and Cox. Not satisfied to inquire into the domestic relations of each of the candidates, the tale mongers have even gone back a generation or two and in one instance nearly 100 years to resurrect skeletons of moral laxity.

Anyone who listens carefully to the stories told by both sides cannot but be impressed with the fact that the circumstances in each case afford absolutely no index to character. The trouble is that party workers have an idea this is the thing that makes votes, and while on the subject of party workers, the writer has seen enough and heard enough to become convinced that the Democrats and Republicans in the wards and precincts where this propaganda is being peddled are equally culpable.

SHOULD CINCH LIES

Somehow it appears to a disinterested observer as if the national and state politicians in Ohio have stopped to this sort of thing which is as degrading as it is politically popular. There are plenty of faults in the policies and promises of the two candidates, but it is not their duty to determine which man is better able to manage the public business of this country for four long and uninterrupted years.
