ROOSEVELT TALKS TO BIG THRONG AT CITY AUDITORIUM

Democratic Nominee for Vice President Pauses in Belated Dinner to Meet Party Mates.

were told to keep hands off. And they, too, kept hands off, Roosevelt declared.

BASED ON MUTUAL JUSTICE

"Not a single mother's son was ever sent out of this country to defend that doctrine. That is because it was based on a principle far superior to international law. It was based on moral justice and was backed by moral principle." The League of Nations is comparable, the nominee commented.

He also answered those who declare that England would have six votes to our one in the supreme council. He pointed out that San Domingo, Haiti, Cuba, Nicaragua, Panama and a dozen would have a vote. "And do you think they would vote against the United States?" he questioned. "Why I was running San Domingo until ten days ago. The United States navy governs it. We are trustees and trusted.

CONSTITUTION IS SUPREME

"And every schoolboy knows that the constitution of the United States is superior to any treaty. And if those who are still chary about entering the league because of our position, we will put it down in black and white that the constitution of the United States shall not in any way be superseded."

Judge Robert Marx of Cincinnati spoke on the accomplishments of Governor Jimmy Cox. He declared that the presidential nominee had taken Ohio from the hands of the bosses and made it over into one of the most progressive states in the union. Popular rights, social justice and industrial welfare is his creed, Marx declared.

DR. LOVEJOY SPEAKS

Dr. Esther Pohl Lovejoy, Democratic nominee for congress from the Third district, introduced Roosevelt. She gloried in the final ratification of the suffrage amendment and insisted that the women of the nation would vote for the candidate who is worthy. Therefore, she declared, Franklin D. Roosevelt, will be the next vice president of the United States.

Mr. Roosevelt's complete address follows:

"Tonight I want to express my pleasure in getting to the state of Oregon so early in the campaign, and at the same time to say that I am indeed sorry that it could not have carried out the original program which called for meetings in two other cities of this state. I have learned better than ever before the truth of the old axiom that 'It is impossible to be in two places at the same time,' and of the other old axiom that 'Possession is nine points of the law'—for my Washington friends seized me and would not let go.

EXPECTS TO CARRY OREGON

"I want to start off by making a prophecy. I recognize that the state of Oregon is claimed as absolutely safe by the Republicans leaders; but on the other hand, a large number of independent observers, who have studied the situation, have stated it as their opinion that the electoral vote of Oregon must be placed in the doubtful column. If these independent observers are right, as I believe them to be, my prophecy is definite that Oregon will be found casting the majority of its votes on November 2 for the Democratic ticket.

"I base this prophecy on two great big fundamental facts in our modern public life and political contests. These two facts are scarcely open to dispute. Either one of them is sufficient to bring my prophecy true—with the assistance of both of them there can be no room for doubt.

PARTISANSHIP IS PASSING

"The first of these truths is that today, more than ever before in our national history, the voters of the United States are using their heads. It is very evident in every state of the union that narrow partisanship is becoming less and less prevalent. It is equally evident that what might be called inherited partisanship is also passing away. A generation ago a very large proportion of the voters of the nation, in both the Democratic and Republican parties, were partisans because their fathers or their grandfathers had belonged to a particular party. People inherited their political faith with as great or even more regularity than they inherited the old homestead or their father's watch.

"Many elements contributed in the old days to this unfortunate tendency, but the greatest factor probably was the existence of rancor and bad feeling between political opponents. A hundred years ago people in the United States used to fight duels over politics. The feeling ran high prior to elections and violence was not an exception. The fighting of the Civil war did little to eradicate the bad feeling.

ANTAGONISM DISAPPEARS

"But as these later years have passed by, this old antagonism has largely disappeared, and with its disappearance we are losing, gradually but surely, an antiquated and un-American method of voting a ticket because 'grandpa' did.

"I am perfectly willing to let two classes in the community vote for Senator Harding this year without any effort to call them away. Those who have studied the relative merits of the two platforms, who have studied the relative merits of the two candidates, and who after that are honestly of the opinion that Senator Harding would make the best president for the next four years, should vote for him. So, also, those who are guided by the opinions of their Republican grandfathers and would vote for him anyway. It would be useless to argue with that type of mind.

"I do not ask the vote of any man, Democratic or Republican, unless it be a vote of conviction.

"It is because I am so certain of the appeal which Democratic ideals are making this year to those who are willing to use their individual judgment that I give this as one of the great reasons for my prophecy of Democratic success in this state this year.

PUBLIC IS WISE

"The other great reason is that the American people are on the whole a pretty wise people, and that they will not be fooled or misled by lies and misstatements. And the campaign of the Republican leaders, as disclosed thus far, is so full of misrepresentation that the voters have plenty of time to discriminate, to call the bluff, to discover the truth and to punish those who are the guilty parties.

"I suppose it is because the Democratic campaign has put the Republicans on the defensive that they are driven to the use of despicable methods. Let me give you an example. During the past week I have been demolishing the silly argument about England being able to outvote us six to one in the League of Nations. I have shown, first of all, that it is the council of the league which is the true governing body, and that in that council the whole British empire has but one vote, just the same as the United States; and I have shown that while in the assembly, a very large body which has primarily only recommendatory powers, five of Great Britain's dominions, like Canada, South Africa and Australia, each have a vote, the United States of America will undoubtedly have the support of twice as many of our neighboring and friendly republics in the West Indies and South America. I cited, for instance, the fact that the republic of San Domingo is at the present time being administered by the United States navy, and that as the interests of the two countries are closely bound up together, the votes of both countries would undoubtedly be found in the same column.

ALSO TRUE OF HAITI

"The same thing is true of the republic of Haiti, though in that particular case it has a president and cabinet of its own.

"It is true also that the interests of other republics, such as Cuba, Panama, Nicaragua and Brazil, are so akin to ours that we shall be of mutual support to each other in the assembly of the League of Nations.

"What I am driving at is this. The above simple and clear statement got under the skin of the partisan Republican leaders to such an extent, and under the skin particularly of the partisan Republican press, that they sent someone to the state department the other day and misrepresented me, saying that I had said that the United States has control over the governments south of us. A cleverly worded story appears from Washington, making it appear that the state department has denied my claim about these republics in the League of Nations. I am glad that the state department has denied the absolutely false statement given to them as coming from me. I wholly agree with the state department. I reiterate exactly what I said before, that the United States will have voting side by side with it in the League of Nations, not six states but at least twice that number, and this because of the simple fact that these little republics have the same kind of interests that we have and that it is even more certain that we will all be voting the same way, than that Canada, Australia and South Africa will be found voting with England.

TYPICAL MISREPRESENTATION

"That is a very good illustration of the kind of misrepresentation to which they have been driven. By 'they' I mean the present people in control of the Republican campaign. That kind of campaigning is not acceptable to the voters of this nation—to the voters of any political party, and they will show their resentment when they are put to it.

"I believe in playing this game on the level—in giving a square deal even to one's opponent. That is the other reason why I am very certain that the people of Oregon are going to put the state in the Democratic column in November."

DR. LOVEJOY INDULGES IN PROPHESY IN INTRODUCTION

In her introduction of Roosevelt, Dr. Lovejoy said:

"Oregon is a long way from New York, but the next vice president of the United States has traveled that distance, stopping at every place possible between the Atlantic and the Pacific for the purpose of meeting and talking with the people of this nation, in order to give them a fair chance to determine whether or not he is the kind of a man they want for vice president of their country.

"This foreknowledge of the fact that our next vice president is seated on this platform is not due to the gift of prophecy. I know this simply because I am a woman, and last Wednesday the legislature of the state of Tennessee immortalized itself by enfranchising the women of this nation. Millions of women will vote in the coming presidential election. The high cost of living and shoddy goods at exorbitant prices have made them cautious. They are looking for quality. They have little faith in advertising, and when they come to the political bargain counter they will want to know, to see, to hear and to have personal knowledge of what they are going to get for their votes.

DIM LIGHTS UNATTRACTIVE

"Women will not vote for a man who hides his political light under a bushel. They will not believe he has any light. They will suspect that it is a two-candle power instead of an arc light. There are a lot of things that women will not do. They will not follow submissively behind a political band wagon, whether it is on the right or the wrong road. Women are inquisitive. They will want to know what is in the wagon and where it is going. They will not say 'My party, may it be always right; but right or wrong, my party.' These are a few of the things that women will not do. And there are other things as disconcerting that they surely will do. By their righteous independence they will help to put the ideals upon which this nation was founded into practice and thereby redeem the promise of its founders to the people of the world.

BOSSES REALIZE FEARS

"The worst fears and prophecies of the political bosses are already materializing. Mary Hay of New York is probably the strongest Republican woman in the country. She was chairman of the Republican women's national committee, from which she resigned in order to be free to do her political duty in her own home state and to prevent, if possible, the reelection of Mr. Wadsworth, one of the most powerful Republican senators in the reactionary group. And Senator Brandegee. What will happen to Senator Brandegee? The women of Connecticut will probably send him back to his own front porch, where he can stand pat for the rest of his days without doing any damage to the country.

PROGRESSIVE MEN IS NEED

"There never was a time when this nation needed progressive statesmen more than it does today. The ferment of revolution is working in the world and rapid evolution is the only thing that will counteract this movement. This is a critical time in the history of our nation. We need men in high places who are conscious of this menace and who have a sympathetic knowledge of its underlying causes. We need such men as Mr. Roosevelt. He belongs to a progressive family. His great-grandfather was progressive, and as a member of the New York assembly had a voice in the ratification of the constitution of the United States.

"Mr. chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I have the honor to present Franklin D. Roosevelt, a worthy representative of a great progressive name and nation."

HOLD FAST TO IDEALS, ROOSEVELT TELLS LEGION

Centralia, Aug. 21.—The devotion of the Democratic party to American institutions and ideals was reaffirmed at Centralia by Roosevelt. He exhorted members of the American Legion to hold fast to the causes they advanced during the war.

"My message to you, the patriotic men and women of the American Legion, is to hold fast to the great causes you have so far nobly advanced. Continue to serve the nation in time of peace as you did in time of war. Keep up the big work in order that we may translate into the woof and fabric of the land the ideals for which you suffered and sacrificed."

COX DENOUNCES USE OF SOLDIERS TO END STRIKES

Candidate Says Republicans and Big Interests in League for Force; Fund Cited as Proof.

By Herbert W. Walker

Canton, Ohio, Aug. 21.—(U. P.)—The coffers of the Republican campaign fund are being filled by big interests, who believe the armed force of the government should be used to end strikes, Governor James M. Cox charged here tonight in closing another busy day of stump speaking.

"If Will Hays has denied that the Republicans are seeking a campaign fund of $15,000,000, I will produce the evidence," Governor Cox said tonight in his speech. He indicated "the evidence" will be the subject of later speeches.

Hays denied the Cox charge today.

POLICY TERMED DANGEROUS

Addressing an audience here today of many workers, Cox declared that nothing is more dangerous than a governmental policy which seeks to compel industrial settlement by the use of soldiers.

Public opinion can be relied upon to settle disputes between capital and labor and the force of government should be used only to preserve order and to protect life and property, the governor asserted.

"There is no symptom of present tendencies more dangerous than the eagerness of some industrial captains to entrench themselves in the favor and the gratitude of public offices with the very definite idea that force can be invoked if the occasion arises, to compel settlement," Cox said.

MAKES FOUR TALKS

The governor made four speeches today, two from the rear platform of his car, one at Orrville this afternoon and the one here tonight.

In all he directed a stronger attack on the campaign fund which he claimed Republicans are raising. Cox vigorously asserted he has plenty of evidence to back up his charge that the minimum goal of the Republican campaign fund is $15,000,000.

Cox charged that the American defense society formed for patriotic purposes during the war, has been turned by some of its officers into a Republican political organization "of hypocrisy and deceit.

HECKLERS CHALLENGED

Although Cox devoted much of today's speeches to industrial questions, he did not neglect the League of Nations. At Orrville he boldly gave all hecklers their chance.

"Is there anyone here who believes that we should not go into the League of Nations?" he asked. "If there is anyone, I'll have it out with him right here on the street corner."

The crowd applauded but Cox waited in vain for someone to accept.

Girl Shot by Lover Is Believed Dying

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 21.—(U. P.)—Lorraine Gladys Barnes, 23, is believed to be dying in the receiving hospital here this afternoon, having been shot twice by Harrison M. Beal, her lover, according to the police. Beal then shot himself in the chest. He is believed to be dying. Beal is said to have a wife in San Francisco.

COX CHARGE ABOUT G. O. P. FUND HELD UNTRUE BY HAYS

Statement That Republican Campaign Pot Will Total $15,000,000 Gets Rise From Chairman.

Augusta, Maine, Aug. 21.—(U. P.)—Branding as an "outrageous falsehood" the charge made by Governor Cox in his recent Wheeling speech that "millions have gone into the Republican treasury from certain interests banded together to buy the presidency," Will H. Hays, chairman of the Republican national committee, addressed Republican state and county committeemen at Island Park this afternoon in celebration of the opening of the campaign in Maine.

It was the first time an official reply has been made to various allegations of Cox and his running mate, Franklin D. Roosevelt, in connection with the financing.

ROOSEVELT RAPPED

Hays denounced particularly Roosevelt's statement in Chicago that the Republican campaign fund would exceed $30,000,000 and Cox's later statement at South Bend last Thursday that it would not be less than $15,000,000.

"Roosevelt," said Hays, "gave as his authority an item he had read in a newspaper. Cox submitted no evidence whatever. Both knew that the Republican national committee had adopted a method of centralized giving, with a maximum of $1000 for anyone's contribution."

Asserting that nothing has been or will be concealed, Hays said:

Probably never before in the history of our party has the natural strife over nominations been followed by so complete unanimity of acceptance and approval. It is a part of my business to detect and see signs of dissatisfaction, and I tell you honestly that I have found none, either in factions or among individuals. The bringing of that splendidly encouraging message constitutes the chief reason for my being with you today.

ISSUES SIDETRACKED

I shall say little of the issues involved. It is not necessary. They are being unfolded and made clear daily with incomparable lucidity, directness and frankness by your candidates. It suffices for me to invite your attention to one point of peculiar significance. We have shown full readiness to meet your adversaries upon any battlefield they might choose.

When they concentrated us on the league covenant without the dotting of an "i" or the crossing of a "t" we met them squarely. When, through their national chairman, fresh from a conference with their candidate, they pronounced the covenant only a "secondary issue," after all, we acquiesced. When the candidates reversed their national chairman and declared the Wilson league the sole issue we accepted most readily.

Where next they will land is wholly conjectural. They may conclude to stake their all upon weighing of the relative merits of the respective candidates. They may prefer to contrast recent Republican cabinets with that which maintains a wayward and hardly recognizable existence.

COST OF LIVING

They may wish to stand upon the actual results of their eight-year-old pledges to reduce the cost of living.

They may choose to dilate upon their fresh promise to stop profiteering, in the face of the fact that all profiteering sprang into being and continues to flourish under their own auspices.

They may like to contrast the type and character of justices of the supreme court to be appointed by one or the other of the two nominees.

They may again rest upon their slogans of four years ago, "He Kept Us Out of the War," "Peace, Preparedness and Prosperity," and "War in Europe, Peace in America, Thank God for Wilson."

They may seek popularity in substituting for "first in war, first in peace, appellation far more apt as of the moment, that is war, last in peace, gone from the hearts of his countrymen."

LEADER TO DECIDE

It is for their new leader, now zigzagging back and forth from the sinister blight of the soloist of the Democratic party to the furtive presence of its quartet of bosses, to make his selection. It matters not to us. Our sole requirement is that there shall be no restrictions. This referendum is going to be more than solemn, it is going to be great, the most comprehensive known. Before ended it will have comprised every phase of maladministration, and every flock of Wilsonites that have brought untold miseries upon a people who have every right to be prosperous and contented.

The Democratic candidate appeals to both the Wilson and the anti-Wilson factions of his party. To the former he holds forth the president's platform. To the latter he exhibits himself as an advocate of complete change in administration. Idealism for the sentimentalists, patronage for the machinists—that is his motto, and he offers to the country for foreign use the Wilson covenant and for domestic service Tammany Hall—truly a marvelous combination of impotence and ill-repute.

SERVING TWO MASTERS

Upon the highest authority we are informed that no man can serve two masters, but what of one master and four? Obviously with his recognized dexterity the Democratic candidate hopes to be able to hold to both, seemingly despised by the one, not loved by the other. What, pray, can be deduced from the mental processes of one who solemnly defines the Monroe doctrine as "the very essence of Article X," precisely as, with like accuracy, one might define vaccine as the very essence of smallpox. But I forego wish to follow the tortuous road to the trail's end—at least not yet.

Thus far but one of the joint associations of the Democratic candidates bears directly upon my department. Speaking in Chicago on October 4, Secretary Roosevelt charged that the Republican campaign fund would exceed $30,000,000, and added that "such a sum could not be honestly expended." Three days later, in Wheeling, W. Va., according to the New York Times report, Governor Cox "caused a sensation and brought enthusiastic response when he charged that certain interests were banded together to buy the presidency and that millions had been contributed to the campaign fund of the Republican party with sinister intent."

COX IS QUOTED

"They want to be the sponsors of the American government," said Governor Cox. "I assure you that they will not, and that the government will be sponsor of their activities. Their checkbooks are ready and open and hundreds of thousands — yes, millions — have gone into the Republican treasury to buy an underhold on the government."

Roosevelt gave as authority for his accusation "an item" he had "read in a newspaper." Cox substituted no evidence whatever. Both these men know that the Republican national committee had adopted a plan, which I announced more than a year ago, for financing our campaign by the method of decentralized giving, securing small contributions from a great many, with a limit of $1000 as a maximum, for any contribution; that Mr. Harding had publicly approved the plan and that the committee had readopted it after he was nominated.

CHARGE RESENTED

Knowing all this, Roosevelt asserted that our campaign fund would reach the colossal sum of $30,000,000 and Cox declared, apparently of his own knowledge, that millions have already "gone into the Republican treasury" from "certain interests banded together to buy the presidency."

They thus deliberately accused Mr. Harding, your national committee and myself of being engaged in a conspiracy to betray our country.

That I admit is a serious charge. If it could be substantiated no punishment of those guilty could be too severe. It cannot be, of course, for the quite simple reason that it is not true. Do you think Cox believed it is true? Do you think Roosevelt believed it was true? I do not, and yet they had the audacity to utter this outrageous falsehood, denying the truthfulness and reflecting upon the honor of fellow citizens, for one of whom, at least, they have professed the fullest respect. Their purpose is plain. They can hardly hope to deceive the thoughtful, but they do mean to impose upon the credulous.

Frankly, I do not believe they can do either. My concern at any possible political effect for such defamatory allusions, therefore, even when put forth by authority of men deemed by their fellow partisans worthy of holding the highest of honors, is slight. The personal aspects may be ignored.

"CALUMNIES SADDEN"

What does sadden me is that calumnies such as this can be spread broadcast through the columns of great journals without evoking rebuke from the guides and leaders of public opinion who control those powerful agencies. There has been no secret about what we are trying to do. I have discussed the matter personally with many of the foremost editors of independent and Democratic newspapers throughout the country. I have pointed out the difficulties necessarily involved in effecting so marked an innovation. I have sought their advice and suggestions and invariably have received assurance of sympathetic cooperation in what amounts to no more, no less than earnest endeavor to eliminate money as a controlling factor from American politics.

Nothing has been and, of course, nothing will be concealed. By reason of the enlarged electorate and the greatly increased cost of all things, we figure that there will be required a total of about $3,000,000; an average of about 10 cents per voter. Part of this has been received in small contributions from individuals, 50 per cent of whom have never before subscribed to party funds. The largest part of the total, we hope, and have every reason to believe we will be able to raise under the plan of limited subscriptions which thus far has proved successful.

MAY RAISE LIMIT

If this attempt should fail to produce the requisite sum, we shall so state publicly and increase the maximum and seek additional contributions. But should it succeed, as I believe it will, has achievement, I may quote prominent Democratic editors, "would far transcend in ultimate and definite good to the country the election of a dozen presidents."

In any case, the endeavor cannot be pronounced unworthy of commendation or even of encouragement. We have not tried to make political capital out of the idea. We have not criticised and have not thought of criticising our opponents for adhering to the old method of accepting the largest contributions obtainable. That is their right and privilege under existing statutes. Nor shall we be resentful if the positive charges of the Democratic candidates, emulate them even so much as to intimate that their responsible officers will use any part of their funds corruptly. Frankly and squarely, as between mutual respecting citizens we don't believe they will or would if they could.

But I give fair warning now that neither the Republican candidates nor the Republican management will take false aspersions lying down. If, at the instance of our adversaries, this campaign shall finally resolve into a question of personal characters, we know of no reason, aside from natural distaste why we should not meet that issue as readily as any other.

With Warren G. Harding and Calvin Coolidge as our candidates, all we ask is a fair contest, and that we propose to have. We fight for the faith of the fathers of the republic and for perpetual freedom of the sons and daughters of America. Sometimes a picture points a principle no less than a moral. Such an one recurs to my mind. It was a cartoon published on the day after Governor Cox delivered his speech, on the editorial page of his chief newspaper supporter in New York. It depicted the candidate hauling a flag to the top of a pole. The banner was unfamiliar to the eye but unmistakable in its meaning. It bore no heraldic device or other symbol. There was not a sign of a stripe, not a suggestion of a star. Emblazoned upon a plain background in large letters were the words, "The League of Nations," and nothing more. It was the new motto of an old party. It symbolized surrender of American independence—a surrender, please God, that shall never be made so long as the spirit of patriotism continues to animate the hearts of American freemen.

But a more apt or more exact portrayal of the chief purpose of the Democratic party, dictated by its leader and declared by its candidate, could not be devised.

CONTRAST SEEN

As I looked at that striking and significant sketch, I could but not wish that I were capable of making a companion picture that should emphasize the contrast between their aspirations and ours. There would be nothing novel in illustrations, nothing strange to the vision; nothing startling to the emotions. It would be a mere reproduction of that first star-spangled banner produced by the nimble fingers of Betsy Ross.

A companion picture, did I say? No, never! There can be no companion banner to the Stars and Stripes as a symbol of the great republic. There shall be but one flag. But that flag I would paint and hold for a moment to the light that all might mark the difference between the old and the new. There would be no need to post that banner. It was raised first at Dorchester Heights by George Washington. But a few days ago I saw it raised in Marion, Ohio, by Warren G. Harding. For nearly 150 years it has floated over this free land, and never once been lowered, and at the base of the pole I would draw, facing all the world if need be to defend same, the figure of a great American—an American in every fibre of his being as faithful as Washington, as humble as Lincoln and as unafraid as Roosevelt—your leader, your candidate and your friend.

"Under which flag?" I would never have to ask you Americans of Maine. My sole injunction would be, "You held the post of honor; you must point the way." So before you go to the polls, let your eyes rest for a moment upon the twenty-third part of the forty-eight which gleam from the background of blue. That is your star, the star of Maine, the north star of the Union, unblemished from the time more than a century ago it was added to the galaxy on our national emblem. Let it not be tarnished now. Illuminate it fresh by sending forth the message that Maine continues inflexibly American and rejoices in the privilege of being the first to voice to her sister states the spirit of complete victory wbhich in November will crown Warren G. Harding and Calvin Coolidge, now leaders of the party, the leaders of the republic.

PROFITEERING IN SUGAR IS ALLEGED IN 8 INDICTMENTS

Mormon Church, Chief Owner of Utah-Idaho Sugar Company, Involved in Charges Brought.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Aug. 21.—(U. P.)—Eight indictments charging profiteering in sugar were returned against the Utah-Idaho Sugar company, its officers and business associates here today.

The charge was made that the company, owned largely by the Mormon church, sold sugar costing $9.44 per 100 pounds, for $23.48. Sales were alleged to have been made in Eastern states.

Officers of the company specifically named in one indictment were C. W. Nibley, Merrill Nibley, S. S. Love, W. E. Mattis, W. S. McCormick, J. D. Murdock, Thomas R. Cutler and D. A. Smith.

Merrill Nibley and James E. Jennings, in another indictment, were charged with conducting a wholesale sugar business without a license.

Similiar indictments were returned against George Goddard and Gage Broadman.

Bankers were involved in the indictment of Frank Pingree, a cashier, and J. H. Grut, banker. It was charged they received gifts in connection with loans in alleged violation of federal laws. The money was used to buy sugar in Chicago, it was charged.

Heber J. Grant, president of the Mormon church, is president of the sugar company also. He was not named in connection with the indictments, and it was said he voted against the price fixed by the company. C. W. Nibley is presiding bishop of the church and general manager of the sugar company.
