

SHIP'S BOATS ON FAIR BASIS, JONES' PLEA

The United States, through the shipping board, is entering an uncharted sea. The board is experimenting with a merchant marine...

That is the picture described by E. A. Dean, trustee of the Fleet corporation, general counsel for the shipping board...

He says shipping is a new field for this country. That experiments along the lines of operation of our national competitors are now being tried...

Section 23 of the Jones bill is an experiment. Dean declares it may be suspended at any time. He points out that America must meet foreign competition...

Likewise, the rebate provision was incorporated in the Jones bill to meet foreign advantages. Dean explains. In foreign ports, foreign ship lines were permitted the rebate privileges...

Dean believes the new shipping board will be appointed in Washington. This is a part of a plan of decentralization of authority advocated by Dean.
