Not a sale—not a special purchase—not a job—but a carefully planned campaign to offer better apparel at lower prices every day throughout the season. The customary rush and crowding which accompany a sale will be avoided—still you obtain in this plan irreproachable values.

Laying the foundation for this announcement of supreme values at Fifty Dollars has required months of earnest efforts.

And here is the story of how we did it—The fabrics, linings and findings we purchased ourselves—the styles we ordered reproduced from personally selected high-cost models—the making was under rigid restrictions based upon our well-known select standards.

And profits are cut to the lowest possible margin, a margin that can only be justified because we anticipate that these supreme values will sell many times more readily than any apparel we have offered heretofore.

We believe that these supreme values are unsurpassed anywhere in the United States—at fifty dollars.
