Benefit dance and card party at Jeanne d'Arc home for All Saints chapel. St. Francis parish card and dancing, church hall, East Eleventh and Oak.

Heights Club to Hold Dance Friday

The opening dance of the social season of the Heights club will be an event of Friday evening at the clubhouse. The committee for this first dance and the series which follows during October includes Mrs. Homer D. Angell, Mrs. G. Tully, Mrs. J. A. Giv-Argell, Mrs. Homer V. Carpenter, Mrs. M. L. Kline and Mrs. Harry J. Stroudbridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Goldsmith (Amy Rothchild) of San Francisco announce the birth of a son to them Wednesday. The baby will be known as Gerson Frederick Goldsmith, after his grandfather.

Miss Cecil Lewaux, daughter of Dr. Virginia V. Lewaux and sister of Dr. Victor H. Lewaux, has returned to New York city, where she has been for the past two years, to resume her study in voice.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer L. Moller of Hood River were seen on a visit to Mrs. Moller's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William G. Oberheuffer, at the Wilmar apartments.

Miss Rose E. Wilson became the bride of Frank E. Huett Saturday at the home of the bridegroom's parents, at 169 North Twenty-second street. The Rev. A. J. Hanna officiated.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Willis Preston have left Portland for Walla Walla, Wash., where they will spend 10 days with Mr. Preston's mother, Mrs. M. C. Preston, who was a recent visitor here.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Alice Britton of San Francisco to Frank G. Hillier of Shanghai, China. The bride is a sister of Miss Dorothy Hillier, who is the house guest of her aunt, Mrs. Anne G. Gaud, and her cousin, Miss Isabella Gaud. Mr. and Mrs. Britton will make their home in Yokohama.

Arthur M. Hoffman and Leon Goldsmith left the city Friday for Boston where they will enter Harvard Medical school. This is their third year of study there.

Miss Elaine Clark of Rochester, N. Y., who with her mother is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Willis K. Clark at their country home at Meadowdale farm near Newberg, was the inspiration for a bridge tea for which the Misses Ruth and Louise Sims were hostesses at their home on Portland Heights.

Miss Lucille Evans and her fiancé, Urban F. Ditefman, will be guests of honor at a dinner-dance at the Waverly Country club for which Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Jackson will be hosts. The marriage of Miss Evans and Mr. Ditefman will take place Saturday at the Malloy hotel.

Mrs. Cecel C. Hammond has left the city for Washington, D. C., where she will join Colonel Hammond, who will be stationed there for the next six months.

Miss Ruth Knapp of Chicago, who has been the guest of Miss Pearl Staples for the past fortnight and who has been much entertained during her stay in the city, has departed for California where she will enter Miss Harker's school and will probably be the student of Miss Lee Tevis, also of Portland. Miss Staples expects to leave October 1 for Chicago for her second year of study with Harry Diamond, teacher of violin at the Metropolitan conservatory of music. She has been spending the summer with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Isaac E. Staples.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Maudie, signifying "mighty battle maid," was interchanged in former times with Mathilda, the first instance of its double use being the daughter of Henry who was known by both names. But this is not its etymological origin, since Maudie was primarily a man's name. For Maud, Mauid and Mauid appear early as feminine names, also Mahald and Mahald. The Twelfth century reveals a woman named Mahald vel Mathilda, about whom little is known. Mathild was the wife of Emperor Henry the Fowler, who afterward became the sainted abbot of Quedlinburg; another Mathild was canonized after being abbess of the convent of Henry's name because she was the first to take the first steps to the temporal power, and who is introduced by Dante in the flowery fields of Paradise. Mahault, so-called by the Flemish, was the wife of William the Conqueror, who brought the name to England, where the Normans called it Moide and the Scottish-Saxon Eadgyth was made to assume it, whereupon it became the reigning royal name. Maudie was the Norman contraction and the most fashionable today, though Mathilda, used by Spencer for one of the maidens in his "Faerie Queen," is really the correct name. Tilly, Tilda, Mechtild and Melche are some of the derivatives. Many poets have felt inspiration at the name "Maud Muller," is known to

Music on New Program at the Hip

THE Royal Italian Five, at the Hippodrome this week, present a number of operatic selections, in which they excel in an attractive setting, and prove one of the high lights on a program of general worth.

The sketch on the program, "The New Boarder," put on by Isabelle Miller and her company of three, proves a laugh from beginning to end and is very well received.

Sam K. Nainoa, who plays a guitar in Hawaiian style, is entertaining, and the Christians also offer musical numbers of more than passing merit. Their program includes classical and popular numbers.

George P. Wilson offers a bright monologue and Jack Haddon and Edna Norman entertain in a turn entitled "All in Fun."

Madge Kennedy is featured in the photoplay offering, "Nearly Married."

Talmadge Studios Being Enlarged

When Constance and Norma Talmadge return from their trip to Europe they will hardly recognize their studio, which, during their absence, has been enlarged and entirely renovated.

Joseph M. Schenck has leased for a term of years the Oliver film studios adjoining the Talmadge quarters, and the wall separating the two buildings is being torn down, doubling the studio room of the plant. All of the dressing rooms will be transferred from the Talmadge studio to the new building, and Schenck's executive staff is being moved from its present abode to offices in the Talmadge studio, where Schenck will also have his headquarters. The scenario and continuity departments will also be stationed at the studio.

BUDGE'S BEDTIME STORIES

Joy in the Old Briar-patch

By Thornton W. Burgess You'll find the longer that you live The more you can and will forgive.

PETER RABBIT led the way lipperty-lip across the Green Meadows toward the dear Old Briar-patch and close behind him hopped the little Rabbit, who had been so long lost. It was dark, for it was night and Mistress Moon had not yet climbed up to light the way. The little Rabbits never once took his eyes from the white spot bobbing along ahead of him. Of course, that white spot was Peter's tail.

There had been a time when that little Rabbit would have thought it quite needless to keep his eyes on that white spot every minute, but that was when he was willful and foolish and thought he knew all there was to know. It seemed like a long, long time before that he had been so willful and foolish, though really it was only a few days. But, you know, he had been out in the Great World and he had learned a great deal. The most important thing he had learned was that he really knew very little after all.

So he was a very humble little Rabbit as he hopped along, lipperty-lipperty-lip, at Peter's heels, and he didn't intend to be lost again if he could help it. He had had quite enough of the Great World and he knew, he just knew that in it there was to place like home. The dear Old Briar-patch he had once thought a place to get away from had become the truest dearest place in all the Great World.

Whenever Peter stopped to sit up and look and listen, and this was often, the little Rabbit sat up right behind him and looked and listened. When Peter, forgetting that his small son's legs were not as long as his own, ran faster than he should have, the little Rabbit ran with all his might and always managed to keep Peter's white tail in sight, though at times he was so out of breath that it seemed to him that he couldn't hop another hop.

So at last they came to the dear Old Briar-patch just as Mistress Moon had quite enough of the Great World and he knew, he just knew that in it there was to place like home. The dear Old Briar-patch he had once thought a place to get away from had become the truest dearest place in all the Great World.

Brown Eyes—It's a hard thing to say to the most beautiful girl in the movies without hurting someone's feelings, and that's why I can't give a definite answer to your question. Some think Olive Thomas the most beautiful, some have the same opinion of Katherine Manners and Dolores Costello. I think Dolores, while others believe that none can compare with Norma Talmadge or Mary Pickford. And there you are. Each of the good-looking has a distinct style of beauty and it's only a matter of personal preference anyway. That's a
