BOOTLEGGERS' RING AIDS PROSECUTION OF POLICE, CHARGE

"A league of bootleggers" is behind the prosecution of Patrolmen E. M. Jackson and W. D. Morris, implicated in the shooting of Bert Hedderly, according to charges before Mayor Baker.

The hearing will continue despite the move of attorneys L. E. Carter, Elton Watkins and E. L. Fraley, representing the policemen, who sought its postponement until after a grand jury meeting.

Attorney Barnett Goldstein, representing the widow of Hedderly, and alleged wife of the league of protection, contended that Mayor Baker could dismiss the officers even though he found they had violated no law.

Attorney Watkins declared he would prove that bootleggers are being charged with the killing of Hedderly while on a business trip, when the latter was shot to death at the wheel of his car.

THE Stroller notices

THAT though he probably knew what he was about, it struck us as rather odd that the floor down street, who had ferns and flowers out on the sidewalk this morning, soaking in the rain, should be watering them with a sprinkling can.

That the chap who carried coals to Newcastle had nothing on him. That the gasoline being sold at some service stations these days smells suspiciously like the stuff we burn in the old coal-oil lamp when the P. R. L. & P. fails us.

That there's no "kick" in it. That motorists kick a good deal about it. That a profiteer is without honor in his own country.

That one disadvantage about hugging close to a building in the rain is that the overflow from the eaves gutter is likely to run down the back of your neck.

That if Henry makes a half dozen breaks like his last one, we may be able to afford a Ford. That a man doesn't have to be religious to be decent.

'Frisco's All Right—But—San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 21. Dear Stroller: I am at San Francisco from Portland, and I want to say that Portland is thought of as a rain-driven city and icy cold in winter.

Prisco hasn't any tall white buildings that's so good to look at as the one in the building in which your paper is printed.

My best regards to your little family and Jerry. You tell 'em, too, H. D., that they haven't the only port on the coast, and don't forget to come back home.

BURGESS' BEDTIME STORIES

What Buster Bear Saw By Thornton W. Burgess A worker, not a leader, is little Busy Bee. He has no idle moments while there's light enough to see.

BUSTER BEAR was puzzled. Never in all his life had he been more puzzled. What was Farmer Brown's boy trying to do? There he was in that little sunny place right in front of where Buster was hiding, and he seemed to be very intent on something, but what that something was Buster couldn't make out.

In one hand Farmer Brown's boy carried a little square box and in the other hand he held the cover to it. He went from flower to flower. Presently Buster was reminded of what he himself was there for by seeing Busy Bee alight on a flower. He watched her for only a second, then again turned toward Farmer Brown's boy.

The latter was stealing very softly toward that flower in the heart of which Busy Bee was hard at work. Slowly and carefully Farmer Brown's boy held the little box close to that flower, and then with the cover in his other hand brushed Busy Bee into the box and put the cover on.

Then he peeped in at the little window in the cover of the box and watched Busy Bee. Of course, Busy Bee was very indignant and flew about inside that little box all the time buzzing angrily. But it didn't take her long to discover that honey on the bottom of the box. Right away she forgot that she was a prisoner. She forgot everything but the fact that here was honey already to take away. She took off the cover to load up with all she could carry.

Farmer Brown's boy walked over to an old stump and carefully placed the little box on it. Then he took off the cover. Buster Bear blinked his eyes. "Now, what did he do that for?" thought Buster. "If he doesn't watch out Busy Bee will get away."

Right that very instant Busy Bee did get away. She flew up out of that little box straight up in the air, circled and darted away. Buster Bear couldn't see in which direction Busy Bee flew but he knew that Farmer Brown's boy could see her and he looked toward the Green Forest.

"Huh!" grunted Buster Bear, taking great care not to do it aloud, but down inside. "Huh!" That was a stupid thing to do. What did he go for all that trouble to catch Busy Bee for and then let her get away like that? And what under the sun is he watching for now. He looks for all the world as if he expects Busy Bee to come back. Huh! He must think she is stupid. I always thought these two-legged human creatures were smart, but I guess I was mistaken. Now, Farmer Brown's boy did expect Busy Bee back and he expected her to bring one of her sisters with her. It certainly would have surprised Buster Bear could he have known this. In fact, Farmer Brown's boy was sure that Busy Bee would come back. He was disappointed. Buster Bear's eyes popped almost out of his head as he saw Busy Bee suddenly alight on the edge of that little box and then crawl out of sight inside it, while one of her sisters followed.

He was still staring at that little box when Busy Bee flew out and away just as before, and a couple of seconds later her sister followed. Buster couldn't make anything of it. Never in all his life had he been more puzzled. He fairly ached to scratch his head. Somehow it always seems to Buster that if he scratches his head when he is puzzled, there are other people just like him.

But he didn't dare scratch his head, because he didn't want Farmer Brown's boy to know that he was there, and if he should scratch his head the quick eyes of Farmer Brown's boy might see him. All he could do was to blink his eyes and wonder and wonder what it all meant. He was still wondering, when back came Busy Bee and her sister, and behind her another sister, and behind her another sister. Into the little box
