PORTLAND MAY GET WARSHIP OREGON

"If the state of Oregon will provide a sufficient number of naval reservists for active duty about the battleship Oregon, that famous old craft will be assigned to Portland harbor."

Such, in essence, is the word received today from the navy department by Lieutenant Commander John A. Beckwith, who enhances the interest of the announcement that Oregon can have her famous old namesake for her own with the news that the department is ready to assign to Portland harbor one of the Eagle boats; 200 foot sub-chasers built by Henry Ford.

There are 3000 naval reservists inactive in Oregon. Beckwith, who is in charge of sub-district No. 2 of the Thirtieth naval district, says, "Among these, surely, we can find a sufficient number willing to reenter the service for permanent assignment to the Oregon."

The call is for men who held the lower ratings in war service—enlisted men. A permanent crew to man the Eagle boat will require the services of 10 former petty officers.

The recent importations of Adjutant General George A. White and the long effort of other agencies to bring the Oregon to the home harbor will be successful if the desired number of reservists apply for assignment to her decks and, in addition, the Eagle boat will be sent to Portland.

Those interested may communicate with Lieutenant Commander Beckwith at 502 Fenton building and as soon as he is assured sufficient interest he will so advise the navy department.

Lusk Proceeds to San Francisco in Lumber Firm Case

REMEMBER DEEDS OF CHAMBERLAIN

Kuney's expression was but a sample of many others of similar import which were given to the senator during his two days' visit in Newport and Toledo. But aside from those, and getting away from the circus which drew about the senator during his visit to Lincoln county and out among those who follow politics in that county and who might naturally be expected to be opposed to the senator's campaign, the same sentiment expressed everywhere.

Public officials, business men—who have Harding buttons on their coat lapels and Harding pictures in the window, and on the signs of their offices and places of business—all of them predict Chamberlain's success in the county, and most of them say without reservation that they are with him now and will be for him when election day comes on November 2.

People of Lincoln county have known Senator Chamberlain for a long time as their personal friend and as the friend and champion of their hopes and desires for harbor improvement on Yaquina bay. He went to bat for them and their jetty improvement project when it had been turned down by the federal government at Washington in 1912 after their plans had been thrown in the scrap heap of things discarded back there secured a hearing for them out of which came a congressional appropriation for a survey of the harbor. Out of the survey came the subsequent appropriation of $418,000 for the construction of the government's half of the jetty improvement, which work is now under way and nearly half completed.

More than that, Chamberlain stands with the people of the district in their contention that it is now being unfairly treated by the demand of the war department that the Port of Newport add $295,000 to the $418,000 which it has already raised and expended.

He insists, as the port commissioners and people generally contend, that the government to all intents and purposes made a binding contract with the port district pledging the government to complete the harbor improvement when ever the port district had raised and expended $418,000, that being half of the estimated cost of the work. The senator told the people of Newport and of Toledo while there that he knew this to have been the intent of congress when it authorized the work and granted the appropriation, and he promised them that when congress convenes in December that he will again go to the firing line for them in an attempt to put the project back on the basis intended in the first place.

And aside from this circumstance the senator holds the confidence and esteem of Lincoln county people because of his consistent efforts made during the war for the comfort and welfare of the service men.

There are those in the county as there are in all of the counties of the state who are the direct beneficiaries of his interest, and these men, now home from the hospitals, the camps, the cantonments and the battlefields of France—and the fathers and the mothers to whom they have returned—still remember the efforts put forth in their behalf. Taking it all in all then few are to be found in Lincoln county to predict Chamberlain's defeat in that district in November. Not all of those who say he will win, however, will vote for him, but that he will win without regard to how they may vote. It is expected, generally, in Lincoln county that he will carry that county.

U. S. Forest Inspector Fromme Arrives on Way to the Siskiyou

R. L. Fromme, district forest inspector, arrived in Portland this morning from Olympia, en route to the Siskiyou national forest in Southern Oregon where he will make a three weeks' inspection trip of all phases of the forest. The Olympia national forest has created another game refuge, says Fromme, lying on the Saldisc burn west of Lake Crescent. The other game preserve is in the vicinity of Mount Angelus. On the Saldisc burn more trail has been cleared than on any other area in the Olympia, says Fromme, and the shooting of deer has become slaughter rather than sport. This caused the Clallam county game commission to agree with the forest service that it was time to stake out a preserve and compel the hunters to go farther into the interior for game. The preserve is six miles long and two miles wide.

TAFT FOR HARDING, WHETHER OR NOT

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 11.—(I. N. S.)—The desire by the people for a change in the national administration overshadowed interest in the League of Nations, according to ex-President William H. Taft, who left last night for Vancouver, B. C., after a short stay here. He declared at no time in his political career has he considered an election so sure as the one to be held November 2.

"I am for Harding, because I am a Republican," said Taft. "If the League of Nations were the paramount issue, which it is not, I would also be for Harding," because the election of Harding will mean that we will have a league, and the election of Cox will mean we will have no league.

THE US ARMY TEACHES TRADES

LET go the plow handles for a year or so and learn to drive a tractor. Be an expert on dairy cattle—or sheep—or bees. Learn something about scientific farming and farm management. Ask a recruiting officer about it. He'll tell you facts about a farm school at Camp Funston, for instance, that you never imagined you could find in the Army.

In the Army you can learn to be a better farmer than your dad. Instead of paying to learn at some agricultural college, you'll have a good, paying job while you learn—and a chance to see some other part of the country than the familiar "four corners."

Earn a good living and learn how to make the old home farm pay better when you go back to it.
