Mrs. F. M. Taylor Entertains Matrons

By Helen Hutchison

THREE charming matrons, Mrs. Harold Leonard Bowman, Mrs. Henry Waldo Coe and Mrs. May Dearborn Schwab, were guests of honor this afternoon at a tea for which Mrs. Frank Mixon Taylor was hostess at her home in Laurelhurst. Mrs. Bowman, who is the wife of Dr. Bowman, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, has recently come to Portland from Chicago, to make her home. Mrs. Coe has recently returned from an extended trip abroad and Mrs. Schwab is a gifted singer who was a former Portland resident, but who has recently returned from New York city to make her home here.

At the tea hour Mrs. Taylor was assisted by her sister, Mrs. Orien Van Schoonhoven, and her two nieces, the Misses Vera and Alice Van Schoonhoven, and Mrs. E. A. Pierce. A program of delightful music added to the pleasure of the guests during the afternoon. Those who contributed to the program were Miss Nina Dressel, contralto, and Mrs. Blanche Williams Severson, soprano.

The first dance of the season will be given at the club house of the Oregon State Motor association Saturday evening. Dancing will begin at 9 o'clock and continue until 1 o'clock.

The Women's Bridge club of the Elks lodge will meet at the Elks temple Thursday at 2 o'clock, with Mrs. L. A. Bailey as hostess. At the last meeting "500" was played, honors falling to Mrs. W. G. Hogge, Mrs. J. M. Montgomery and Mrs. M. Elprut.

A dance will be given by the women's auxiliary to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers Saturday evening at Woodmen hall, 334 Russell street.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Cathedral parish will give a card party Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Jeanne d'Arc home, Fourteenth and Jefferson streets. There has been an urgent appeal made for bed coverings for the orphans at the Christie home, and the affair is arranged to raise funds to meet this need.

Mrs. John Raymond Robinson was the guest of honor today at a luncheon for which Miss Alva Jo Cage and Mrs. William Stitt were hostesses, at the home of the former on Portland Heights. Mrs. Robinson will be remembered as Miss Gertrude Towne, a bride of last year, who now makes her home in Buffalo, N. Y.

Members of Alpha Chi Omega alumnae will meet Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. H. MacDonald Mayme, at the American apartments, Twenty-first and Johnson streets.

Wisconsin State society will meet Thursday evening at Thirteenth and Main streets at Turner hall. A good program has been arranged by the new committee. Business meeting at 8:30 o'clock with dancing and cards at 9:30. Refreshments will be served. All Wisconsin people are welcome with their friends. The Iowa society is invited to meet with them this month. At the last meeting the following officers were elected: Charles Wood, president; Miss Alma Alsleaben, vice president; Mrs. M. D. Lundahl, secretary; Mrs. B. E. Mauro, treasurer.

* * *

Mrs. William George Tucker was hostess at an informal luncheon at her home at Lucretia Court, honoring Mrs. B. Clifford, Ireland of San Francisco. Covers were placed for eight guests: Mrs. A. E. Digman, Mrs. Paul Daniels, Mrs. William Hodecker, Mrs. Wallace Morrin, Mrs. Henry Viereck and Mrs. J. R. Mummax. Mrs. Ireland was hostess at a delightful luncheon at the Portland hotel Saturday, with covers placed for six. A box party at the Baker followed. Mrs. Ireland will leave for her home in San Francisco today.

FURS and MYSTERY

BY N. M. UNGAR

Canada furnishes us with the wolverine, an animal closely resembling a young bear except that it is much more ferocious and greedy. Aside from being fierce and forever hungry, it is the enemy of other furbearers and in the course of a year devours many beavers and muskrats.

The Indian has long prized the strong, sharp snow-white claws of the wolverine, which it skilfully uses in catching its prey in the open or in digging them out of their homes.

A mature pelt measures from 36 to 48 inches in length, including the tail, which is covered with a dense fur and an abundance of long hairs. In winter the short fur is almost a true black, but at other seasons is reddish-brown on the sides. Though the annual collection of this fur is small, it is always very serviceable and, at times, very popular as a novelty.

Another novelty fur is that of the spotted ringtail, called a cat because of its relation to the feline. This animal measures about 35 inches in length, including the tail, which is nearly a foot and one-half long, marked with alternating rings of black and white, eight of the rings being black.

The fur on all parts of the body is dotted with nearly circular dots, averaging about one-half inch in diameter; the fur being soft and fairly abundant, it makes a good fur for the woman who likes something odd.

These two furs are "good" for a year or two at occasional times, so don't let any furrier recommend either of them to you unless you know that he is abreast of the fur fashions.

Beware of the Wolf in Sheep's Clothing.

The Stroller notices—

THAT P. R., L. & P. cars carry nice new signs requesting passengers to have the "exact fare" ready.

That it might speed service somewhat, too, if conductors always had transfers ready.

That the book tickets purchased from the company are too thick.

That they are not properly perforated.

That it's hard to tear one ticket out without mutilating another one.

That the best way to fix them is to take them out of the book and carry them encircled by a rubber band.

That then if you get tired of hearing the tickets tick you can take them out and listen to the music.

That scarcely a day passes in which the Titian does not find some new problem entering into her young life.

That one of the newest questions bothering her is just what she should do with her apple at recess when the bell rings before she has eaten it all.

That we know what we'd have done when we were a youngster.

That we've put it in our pocket and eaten the rest of it—core and all—when the teacher wasn't looking.

That we couldn't advise a nice little girl to do a trick like that.

O. U. H2O

Portland, 10-12.

Dear Stroller:

A stranger in your city but enjoy your column. Hope I may be able in a few days to distinguish the difference between an Oregon mist, a sprinkle and a downpour.

Coming from a desert state, was at once pleased, delighted and charmed to the utmost with a quaff of your clear, sparkling H2O.

For an invigorating, sleep-producing, satisfying bath before retiring, Portland water, to my way of thinking, eclipses 'em all. So soft and velvety, but to strangers would recommend and advise the use of skid chains when emerging from the bathtub. C. E. PALMER,

Gentile from a Mormon state.

Dear C. E. P.: You'll always be on the safe side, and you won't miss it far, if you refer to all precipitation in Oregon as "mist." We can appreciate how you feel about the water up here, too. After you've been here a while you'll refer to it as "old Bull Run." We felt the same way about it, having come from that same "Sego Lily" state, where there's so much mineral in the water that the soap won't lather and where you have to take a cold chisel and hammer to pry off the high water mark in the bathtub.

It's a grand old state at that, isn't it?

We'll say so.

The Highland Travel club, with about 20 members, assembled at 2 p. m. on Thursday at the Vernon library, where, through the courtesy of Miss French, they were royally entertained. Rollcall, responses with aphorisms and "current events" were followed by a very instructive lecture delivered by Miss Rockwood on "The History of the Book." Miss Rockwood had for inspection all manner of recording events from hieroglyphics down to modern printing. After dainty refreshments, the club adjourned to meet with Mrs. Stokes, 455 Prescott street, October 21. The author to be discussed as chosen will be James Whitcomb Riley. Study of the Hawaiian islands, the land to which the club will next sojourn, will begin at this meeting.

The Holman Parent-Teacher association will give a community dance in the school auditorium, corner of Bancroft avenue and Corbett streets, Friday evening, from 8 to 11 o'clock. Single tickets 35 cents, children 25 cents. The proceeds will be used to start a milk station. The question of having a dancing class will be discussed. A community gathering was held at the Holman school Friday night, with Walter Jenkins conducting a community sing. Miss Kathleen Cockburn gave an interesting address upon community service. Plans were made for a Halloween party at the community church, October 30. Announcement was made that a girls' reserve corps will be organized October 15, with Miss McClellan as leader. The new scoutmaster, Rolf Jensen, was introduced. A real spirit of cooperation was evident throughout the evening and the people of the district are anticipating some enjoyable gatherings in the month to come.

The Portland Progress club will meet Thursday at 2:30 p. m. with Mrs. Adam Hunter, at Ardenwald.

The free sewing school for girls between the ages of 8 and 15 years which has been operated with success for the past several years in the Presbyterian church house, will resume its meetings Saturday afternoon from 2 to 4. The material and instructions are furnished free of charge and the class is open not only to girls of the neighborhood, but others who are interested.

The woman's gymnasium class of Peninsula school will meet this evening at 7:45. All women of the community will be welcome.

The board of directors of the Monday Musical club at their last meeting selected Miss Martha B. Reynolds as an added member of their teaching faculty. Miss Reynolds will have charge of the class in musical analysis and form. This is a definite course and those taking it can go on and secure a state certificate. High school credits are also given for this work. The class is now forming at Miss Reynolds' studio, Main 3792, and the first meeting for work will be at the studio of the Monday Musical club, 148 Thirteenth street, Thursday morning, at 10 o'clock.

Mount Tabor Parent-Teacher association will hold its regular meeting on Thursday, October 14, in the school assembly room. The meeting will begin promptly at 2:30 p. m. with a community sing, led by Walter Jenkins. Miss Frances Hayes, of the public welfare bureau, will be the speaker. Entertainment for the children will be provided in an adjoining room.

LILLIAN ROSEDALE with McIntyre and Heath in "Hello, Alexander," at the Heilig theatre tonight.

Lillian Rosedale, who will appear with McIntyre and Heath in "Hello, Alexander," at the Heilig theatre tonight, looks like Mary Garden and has Jack Lait, the author, for a cousin. Aside from these dizzy facts, there's no reason in the world why Lillian Rosedale should achieve fame on her own account.

Miss Rosedale, composer, has written a little ballad; or ditty, or whatever it is, which Miss Rosedale, singer and pianist, is singing. Those who "know" say it is destined to supplant the w. k. "I Hear You Calling Me." And those who don't "know," but appreciate good music just the same, have told Miss Rosedale that her song is one of the greatest love songs ever written. It is called "Just as the Day is Fading." "Hello, Alexander" comes heralded as the best and most pretentious thing McIntyre and Heath have ever done.

Plenty of Pep In New Picture At the Columbia

A vivid story with a theme standing out in striking contrast to "Why Change Your Wife?" "Male and Female," "Don't Change Your Husband" and any of his previous successes, marks "Something to Think About," Cecil B. De Mille's big Paramount picture opening at the Columbia today.

The idea of right thinking furnishes the basic idea for the story. In the early scenes the quaint rural characteristics of Luke Anderson, a blacksmith, and his daughter Ruth, have a rollicking humor that is captivatingly presented. When the daughter, already engaged to a rich young man of the neighborhood, elopes with Jim Dirk, a handsome newcomer, the clouds of tragedy gather quickly.

Then a series of swift climaxes develop in rapid succession until will power brings with it the restoration of the heroine's happiness through the instrumentality of her little boy.

Free Show at The 'Hip' Saturday

The annual entertainment to Portland children by Manager W. W. Ely of the Hippodrome will be given Saturday at 11 a. m., the admission fee to be a bundle of clothes for the Near East relief. Comedy reels and pictures of Armenian children will be shown. "How a Portland Boy Traveled 33,000 Miles and the Good Times He Had," will be another feature. Collections of clothing are being made as rapidly as possible. Those having cars to offer or those with bundles not yet collected should telephone Main 2178.

Lends Collen Moore

Collen Moore has been chosen to play the leading feminine role in King Vidor's production of "The Sky Pilot." After selecting David Butler for the male lead, Producer Vidor spent weeks in search of the most suitable actress to play the difficult feminine lead. At length he went to Marshall Neilan, with whom Miss Moore recently signed a long term contract, and finally induced Neilan to lend him that capable young actress.

BURGESS' BEDTIME STORIES

Buster Bear Remembers

By Thornton W. Burgess

Forget the disappointing things
And look for what the future brings.
—Buster Bear.

POOR disappointed Buster Bear! He actually whimpered, which is as near as Buster ever comes to crying, when he discovered that the hollow in that bee tree was empty. He guessed right away who had emptied it. It was Farmer Brown's boy. Buster didn't have the least doubt of that. Farmer Brown's boy had found that honey and taken it away.

"He might have left a little for me, just a wee bit," muttered Buster in his deep rumbly, grumbly voice as he licked the inside of that hollow with his tongue, trying to get just a taste. "He didn't need all that honey," continued Buster. "He's the greediest fellow in all the Great World. That's what he is—the greediest fellow in all the Great World. And he's a robber. He robbed me of that honey. He saw me up here and he drove me away and then robbed me."

Buster's memory was short. He had quite forgotten that Farmer Brown's boy was the one who found the tree and that he, Buster, might never have found it had he not followed Farmer Brown's boy and been watching him when he found the tree. And when you think of it, it was funny for Buster to call Farmer Brown's boy greedy, for had Buster had the chance he wouldn't have left so much as one good lick inside that hollow. But disappointed people seldom are reasonable.

Grumbling and growling, Buster Bear climbed down that tree. The smell of that honey and the wee taste he had managed to get made him hungrier than ever for a feast of honey. He felt that he just had to have some. And then as he landed on the ground he remembered something. He remembered those other bee trees he had found by following Farmer Brown's boy.

Buster's face suddenly brightened. "Why didn't I think of them before?" he grumbled. Then his face clouded again. He remembered Farmer Brown's boy. Perhaps the latter had already been to those trees and taken all the honey. The very thought made Buster growl, and it was a deep, ugly-sounding growl. Just thinking of Farmer Brown's boy made him feel ugly.

Stopping only to lick up a drop of honey where Farmer Brown's boy had filled one of his pails the morning of that very day, Buster started for the second bee tree. He shuffled along through the Green Forest more rapidly than you or I could have gone in daylight, and this, you know, was after the Black Shadows had crept all through the Green Forest. Buster does not mind them at all. In fact he seems to prefer them.

So it didn't take Buster long to reach the second bee tree, the one that was dead. Just as he had done with the other tree he walked all around this one, listening, testing every little night breeze that came along for a hint that Farmer Brown's boy was about. But there was no such hint for the very good reason that Farmer Brown's boy was at that very minute at home figuring on a piece of paper how many pounds of honey he would have to sell if each of the other trees he had found held as much honey as the one he had opened that day.

Buster Bear stole softly to the foot of that tree, stopped every few steps to look and listen and smell. But he saw nothing and heard nothing and smelled nothing to make him afraid. You see there was no longer scent of Farmer Brown's boy about that tree because it was so long since he had visited it. Buster heaved a great sigh of relief. For once he could forget Farmer Brown's boy and think only of honey.

The next story: "Buster Bear Forgets All His Troubles."

Mr. and Mrs. R. Fegan announce the marriage of their daughter, Evelena, to J. J. Haight. Mr. and Mrs. Haight are spending their honeymoon in Seattle and will make their home in Portland on their return.

Make your silk underthings really last

YOUR soft satin chemises, crêpe de Chine nightgowns, frilly petticoats. Ribbons and lace and chiffon to your heart's content—only do take care of them. Wash your silk things the gentle Lux way and see how long you can make them live!

It is perspiration that is the great enemy of silk. It actually eats the delicate silk fibre. Every minute that rather expensive camisole spends in the hamper is making its precious life that much shorter, turning its dainty pink such a sad yellow.

Don't let your nice silk things be ruined! It is so quick, so easy to save them with Lux. Just sousing in the pure bubbling suds and pressing of the suds through the soiled spots.

Dip your silk underwear in Lux suds after every wearing—it will last three times as long! Your grocer, druggist or department store has Lux. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

How you should launder silk underwear

Whisk a tablespoonful of Lux into a thick lather in very hot water. Add cold water until lukewarm. Press the rich suds through soiled spots again and again—do not rub at all. Rinse in three lukewarm waters. Squeeze the water out—do not wring. Roll in a towel and when nearly dry press with a warm iron—never a hot one. Glove silk and georgette crêpe should be gently shaped as you iron.

No suds so delicate as Lux for silk underwear
