

M'NARY, SINNOTT SORE BECAUSE OF FLOWERS' ATTACK

Friends of Congressman Sinnott and Senator McNary are not at all pleased with the indictment by Montaville Flowers of Senator Chamberlain on the ground that Oregon has not received back all of the money contributed by the state to the reclamation fund for use on Oregon irrigation projects. They chafe because Flowers' indictment of Chamberlain is an indictment of both Sinnott and McNary at the same time. Not only is it an indictment of them, but also of the late Congressman Ellis, of Congressman Hawley, of Congressman McArthur and of former Senator Bourne.

A reclamation act was passed by congress in 1917 which provided in substance that moneys received from the sale of public lands in the various states should be put into the reclamation fund and expended in proportion to the amount contributed by each state within the borders of the state. This provision was repealed in June of 1919 because public land states like Kansas, Oklahoma and other states were using their contributions on non-irrigation projects while feasible projects in Western states were not securing federal aid.

At the time this repealing act was passed, Taft was president, Sherman was vice president, Cannon was speaker of the house and both senate and house were in alignment with the national administration. At that time, too, W. R. Ellis represented the great Eastern Oregon section of the state in the house, and W. C. Hawley, the first district, Jonathan Bourne was senior senator and Chamberlain had been in the senate a little more than one year. He fought the repealing clause but, as a newly elected senator, his protest was not heeded while both Hawley and Ellis stood by in the house to permit the act to go through as presented in its final form.

Since that time Congressman Sinnott, in spite of his place on the irrigation committee in the house, has not been able to secure any modification of the law, while Hawley apparently has not been active in that direction. Nor has Senator McNary, as chairman of the senate committee on irrigation and reclamation of arid lands, been able to effect a change. Nor has McArthur been able to do anything.

WHY THOMPSON'S HELP
Those familiar with the history of irrigation development in Eastern Oregon are also surprised that Asa B. Thompson, mayor of Echo and formerly the paid secretary of the Paradise Irrigation project near Stanfield, should charge Senator Chamberlain with lack of interest in irrigation projects in Eastern Oregon in the face of the fact that Thompson and those associated with him in the Stanfield project openly fought the west extension of the Umatilla project and were themselves more than any other influence, responsible for the delay in the advancement of the west extension plan.

Chamberlain stood solidly behind the construction, not only of the main Umatilla project itself, but behind the west extension of that project as well, while Thompson and those associated with him in the Stanfield project fought it, and it was not until the courts had cleared the way for the progress of the reclamation department that the west extension was put under way.

FLOWERS' OBJECT APPARENT
Why Montaville Flowers has been sent into Oregon from California to defeat Chamberlain is apparent in view of the vital financial interest which the Fleischbachs and the California-Oregon Power company have in the diversion of Klamath lake for the irrigation of Modoc county lands, while Klamath county lands are yet unprovided for.

Both Senator Johnson and Senator Phelan of California are on the irrigation committee of the senate. California irrigationists would much like to see Senator Chamberlain out of the senate so that his powerful influence in that body could not be swung against the contract which Franklin K. Lane, also of California, gave to the California-Oregon Power company authorizing it to inundate 15,000 acres of valuable Klamath county lands for the purpose of irrigating California lands with Klamath lake water. Chamberlain's protests to John Barton Payne, present secretary of the interior, have resulted in his order stopping the construction of the power company's dam across the foot of the lake and the consequent submergence of a big portion of Klamath county for the benefit of Northern California. The California corporation wants to drown Oregon homebuilders out for the good of California settlers. Senator Chamberlain is opposed to the scheme, has stopped it, and now Montaville Flowers has come up from California to get him out of the way, a fact the significance of which all people interested in the powerful influence of Oregon have not been slow to grasp.

BUILDING LABORERS HEAR DR. LOVEJOY OUTLINE AIMS
Dr. Eather Pohl Lovejoy, candidate for congress from this district, Tuesday night addressed members of the Building Laborers' union in Eagles' hall. She declared herself in favor of all forms of legislation which will promote the general welfare of all the people.

"Having been a sales girl myself when I was 17 years old and being obliged because of economic necessity to engage in the labor to help get an education, I feel early in life a strong deep sympathy for the working class," said Dr. Lovejoy. "I have always been in sympathy with them and stand ready, if elected, to assist in the enactment of such measures as will promote their interests."

"I do not wish to be misunderstood concerning capital's side. I favor fair returns on investment and shall, if elected, be fair to capital, but I shall use every means within my power to see that no special interest is given privileges beyond that which is fair. I believe in property rights, but I put human rights first, as does the constitution of the United States."

Dr. Lovejoy will speak tonight at 8 o'clock at a community meeting in Linnnton. Thursday night she will speak to members of the Garment Workers' union, and at 8 p. m. to the Boiler-makers' union in the Woodmen hall, East 12th and East Alder streets.

DISILLERY WILL TEST QUALITY OF COAL IN NEHALEM

A distillery costing $300 has been installed in the Oregon building by H. M. Parks, head of the Oregon bureau of mines and geology. The apparatus will be ready to operate in a few days and one of its first uses will be in testing the quality of coal found in the Nehalem valley and other sections of the coast mountain range in Western Oregon. The apparatus consists of a gas producer, retort, condenser, gasometer and variable speed electric blower, and will be used in separating low volatile gases from lignite and other coals. The lignite found in Columbia county and other parts of Western Oregon is not adapted to use as fuel in its native state, according to Parks, and methods of processing to reduce the coal to a suitable grade will be studied out in the new laboratory.

COAL VEINS DISCOVERED
Coal veins have been discovered at various places in the Nehalem and Columbia valleys but no extensive tests have been made to determine commercial values. According to officials of the bureau, coal is found in Western Oregon points all the way from the Columbia river to the Siskiyou mountains. Outcroppings are frequent in the Nehalem valley and the product has been used for fuel to a limited extent by residents.

New interest in the coal deposits of Columbia county has been aroused by the possibility of working deposits of iron ore found in that region. If it is determined that the native coal can be used for cooking the fuel problem of the proposed smelters will have been solved. Investigations now under way by the Milton Development company and by timber companies owning extensive tracts in Columbia county will determine the feasibility of working the iron mines.

CLASSIFIED AS LIMONITE
The iron ore found is classified as limonite, or "brown hematite," according to Parks, and is of a quality suitable for steel manufacture. Whether it may be found in sufficient quantities to justify the expense of working will be shown by prospecting work under way. The principal deposits so far opened are in the neighborhood of Piggah mountain, south of Helens, and Bunker Hill on the Columbia-Washington county line.

High freight rates on manufactured steel products from eastern mills to the Columbia valley have developed a competing industry in the Northwest feasible and practical, according to men interested in the project, and with the rapid development of the territory west of the Columbia river, the output of local steel mills would be found in short hand territory.

DENTON SHOT, THEN BURIED WHILE ALIVE

The stain under the linoleum in the kitchen, at the spot where Denton fell, is somewhat characteristic. The day before he disappeared Sleeth was arrested here for reckless driving. He appeared in municipal court next day, but thereafter dropped from sight. The car which carried his grief was found five days later in a Linton road garage. The missing man's wife and child are in Portland at Mrs. Peete Sleeth, the writer's mother, at 1025 Michigan avenue.

According to evidence furnished the district attorney's office by J. Oomber, a Los Angeles grocer, a woman who said she was Mrs. Peete, telephoned June 2, an order for six bars of washing soap and a package of clothes cleaner, which were delivered to Denton's home, at 675 South Catalina street.

STAIN UNDER LINOLEUM
June 4 Coomber delivered four cans of chloride of lime to the Denton home, at the order of the woman, three cans of which were returned to his store later. June 10, the woman ordered 14 more bars of soap, which were delivered to the house and later in the day this woman paid for the soap and other groceries with a check signed "Mrs. R. C. Peete."

MRS. PEETE SHOWED NO EXCITEMENT, SAYS WOMAN
Denver, Oct. 20.—(I. N. S.)—Mrs. R. C. Peete, "enigma woman" in the Jacob C. Denton murder mystery, was calm and composed on the afternoon of June 2, the day she is reported to have said she witnessed the shooting of a Spanish girl by Denton in the Catalina street "death house" in Los Angeles, according to Mrs. Ida E. Gregory of this city. Mrs. Gregory was a guest of Mrs. Peete at the Denton house last June.

Mrs. Gregory said that Mrs. Peete explained to her, upon her arrival in Los Angeles, that Denton was taking an inventory of the household furnishings and that some repair work was also being done and requested that Mrs. Gregory remain at a hotel for a few days before going to the Denton home. "It's all right; you can come up now," Mrs. Gregory says Mrs. Peete telephoned her on the afternoon of June 2. "It is beyond my comprehension that Mrs. Peete could have witnessed the murder of Denton that morning and then chatted with my daughter and myself, apparently composed, in the afternoon," Mrs. Gregory said. "When we arrived at the Denton house about 3 in the afternoon, it was in good order. Every little detail had been arranged perfectly; there were even fresh flowers in our room."

"We had been waiting word since May 30 to come to the Denton house."

DANA SLEETH NOT MISSING; ONLY INDULGING WHIM

Working out a typical whim, Dana Sleeth, former editor of the Portland News and the Los Angeles Record, has been away from home for several weeks and although his friends are assured through a letter to John F. Logan, a neighbor, complained that he will return to Portland when he completes an "experiment" on which he is working.

In a letter received Tuesday Sleeth is in absolute confidence, told Logan of his plans, the attorney declares, and indicates, although he does not say so, that he will return to Portland when he completes an "experiment" on which he is working.

While a grief-stricken wife and mother waited word from Sleeth, he was communicating to Logan plans for the future and instructing the attorney to provide for the family. Logan declares the letter, undated as to time and place and written in semi-humorous vein, to be perfectly sensible and reasonable and, in fact, a typical Sleeth epistle.

"I am sure Sleeth knows what he is doing and am certain he intends to return when he completes his present work," Logan says. "His epistle is splendidly written and personally I would say the work he is doing and has described to me is an excellent undertaking. He has demanded my confidence, but for no reason that I should not should personally be willing to tell the world if I were concerned instead of Sleeth."

Information that Sleeth might still be in Portland was the result of a letter received by the Portland News today in which he said he was out "getting stories." He has not been seen for three weeks, however, and police have quietly searched in vain for him.

Sleeth, since he quit newspaper work after many years with the Scripps-McRae syndicate, has been writing free lance editorials for a newspaper syndicate and has lived on his Columbia county ranch near Scappoose.

He has always been an eccentric character, friends aver, and the present mission is somewhat characteristic. The day before he disappeared Sleeth was arrested here for reckless driving. He appeared in municipal court next day, but thereafter dropped from sight. The car which carried his grief was found five days later in a Linton road garage.

The missing man's wife and child are in Portland at Mrs. Peete Sleeth, the writer's mother, at 1025 Michigan avenue.

One Candidate in Jackson Backing Courthouse Move

Medford, Oct. 20.—The gauntlet thrown down by Colonel H. H. Sargent, leader of the opposition to the proposal to move the courthouse from Jacksonville to Medford, which will be voted on November 2, in demanding how candidates in this election who have taken up so far by but one, W. E. Phipps of Medford, a Democrat, who came out in a public statement, written to W. E. Crews, Democratic county chairman, stating that he would vote for the removal and arguing strongly for it.

The gross receipts of the Medford post office, which ended September 30, 1920, were the largest for any one year in the history of the office, totaling $34,781.37, more than $1000 in excess of the highest previous year's receipts.

Home to Care for Drunks Till They Can Steer Passage

El Paso, Texas, Oct. 20.—(U. P.)—A "home" wherein inebriated Americans may be lodged until able to navigate the river, was planned for El Paso in a trip to Juarez, it was learned today.

Heretofore foreigners whom authorities "put away until recovered," found blankets too short and an inadequate supply of cots in the place used for the purpose. A fund of $800 has been raised to remedy these defects and otherwise improve the place.

Leo A. Holmes to Face Local Trial

Leo Anderson Holmes and Dora Peterson, who were arrested in Astoria last week for alleged violation of the Mann act, will not be returned to Duluth, Minn. for trial, according to an announcement made this morning by Assistant United States Attorney Charles Reames. Holmes will be tried here on a charge of transporting the woman from Aberdeen to Portland on June 16. Holmes is said to have failed to register in the first draft call. When the second draft came Dora Peterson is said to have been in the army during the war, and thus to have won deferred classification for him.

P. Losey Detained; Man Is Suspected Of Annoying Girls

In the arrest of Percy N. Losey, 4404 Seventeenth street S. E., the police believe they have captured the man who has been bothering children recently in the Woodstock section. Assistant District Attorney Deich declared this morning after investigation of police records that Losey was sentenced May 2, 1917, to serve from one to 10 years in the Salem penitentiary on a statutory charge, to which he is said to have pleaded guilty.

Until Deich can summon to police headquarters, Woodstock children, who have recently been bothered by a man whose description is said to tally with Losey, the police in default of $5000 bond on an open charge. The detective bureau and women's protective bureau are endeavoring to learn whether or not Losey violated his parole.

Emergency police arrested Losey at his home Tuesday night after Mrs. J. K. Turner, a neighbor, complained that he had attempted to entice her 9-year-old daughter into his house. Sentiment in Woodstock against Losey is said by the police to run high. Losey is said to have moved to Portland from Amity about a year ago.

WEDDED WOMAN, THEN ATTORNEY, ASKS ANNULMENT

The marriage of a woman to a woman legal and, after such a marriage ceremony has been performed, is legal action necessary to annul it? This question bobbed up in President Judge Tazewell's court this morning in one of the most peculiar suits that has appeared in the local courts for many months.

Mrs. Flora Huntsman was suing for an annulment of her marriage with Lafayette Huntsman, an attorney of Portland. After the facts were presented, Judge Tazewell took the case under advisement. Mrs. Huntsman's story was sensational.

She said she was married in Baker, Or., June 28, 1904, to Ralph Clayton, whose true name was Katy Chapman, a woman. In August, 1919, she says, she conferred with Huntsman as an attorney, who said he would undertake to secure a divorce from her from "Clayton." She says to avoid publicity, Huntsman took her testimony at her home and later informed her he had had her marriage annulled. She avers that soon afterward Huntsman proposed marriage to her and they were married at Kalamazoo, Wash. Four months later, she said, she discovered that no decree had been issued in the case of the first marriage.

At today's hearing a document was presented purporting to be an annulment of the marriage with "Ralph Clayton," granted by Judge J. A. Eakin, in chambers, at Astoria, April 30, 1920. When the Huntsman annulment was before the court today, Deputy District Attorney Graham took the ground that in the previous ceremony there was no real marriage, hence a divorce was unnecessary.

Fruit Juice Brings Disaster; Two Pay Fine in U. S. Court

It is impossible to conduct a soft drink business these days and remain within the provisions of the federal prohibition laws, declared William Leahy and C. S. Cleveland in the federal court this morning. They entered pleas of guilty to having fruit juices in their store that contained more than one half of 1 per cent alcohol. Leahy was fined $100 and Cleveland $50. Both men served in the army during the war. According to their counsel both will return to their former occupations, Leahy as a civil engineer and Cleveland as a mechanic.

COMMITTEE OF 15 ANSWERS CRITICS OF ISLAND PLAN

A statement defending the Swan Island or port consolidation bill which appears on the state ballot for the November election, was issued Tuesday evening by the committee of fifteen.

In this statement the committee represents that the enactment of the bill is necessary to channel work and that without grant of the $16,500,000 bonding authority contained in the bill funds will not be available.

Objections upon which the Chamber of Commerce based its recommendation that the bill be defeated are taken up seriatim by the committee. That the project would cost $10,000,000 only is asserted, the committee explaining that this amount would pay for dredging the west channel around Swan Island, would buy 1552 acres constituting Swan Island, Macks bottom and Guilds lake district, as land upon which to deposit the spoils of dredging, and that further development has not at any time been contemplated.

Opponents of the measure have stated that the project developed with docks and railroad yards would cost $10,000,000 or more.

Girls of 14 and 15 Missing From Home Since Last Saturday

Glady Mildred Hall, 14, 153 Alberta street, and Leonora Sheehan, 15, 909 Haight street, have been missing from their homes since Saturday afternoon and in spite of splendid descriptions of the girls police search has been futile. The girls met at the Sheehan home Saturday afternoon and were heard planning a meeting with unidentified boy friends. The Hall girl, whose mother, Mrs. Evelyn Hall, lives at Astoria, was making her home with her guardian, W. C. Haldeman. Her companion lived with her parents at the Haight street address.

Sunday afternoon Opal Wilson, 14, disappeared from her home at 9233 Forty-third street, southeast, and no trace of her has been found.

Lumber Industry Faces Crisis, Due To Car Shortage

Baker, Oct. 20.—The lumber industry of Baker is facing a crisis and the possibility of a tieup due to the shortage of cars. Orders are piling up and the mills are losing a large amount of business. One mill has closed its planer and box factory, throwing about 100 men out of employment.

The Sumpter Valley passenger train and an automobile carrying six people, including a cripple on his way to St. Elizabeth hospital, collided at Dewey avenue crossing, W. L. ONLY TWO OF FIVE BODIES RECOVERED FROM SANDY RIVER

The third day of search for the bodies of men who lost their lives in the Sandy river, when an automobile went over the bank near the upper bridge Sunday night, carrying five persons with it, has resulted, so far, in the discovery of the bodies of Edward A. Hearty and M. D. McDonald.

Representatives of the sheriff's office and relatives of the missing men have been steadily working along the stream downward from the point where the automobile sank, but it is believed the current has carried the bodies well down the river and it may be several days before the three missing are found.

The funeral of Edward Hearty will be in favor of the family residence, 247 North Twenty-second street, at 4:30 o'clock Thursday morning. There will be a solemn mass of requiem in St. Patrick's church, Nineteenth and Sawyer streets, at 10 o'clock. Interment will be in Mount Calvary cemetery.

Besides the parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Hearty, he leaves two sisters, Mrs. Robert McBride and Mrs. Emmett Messenger.
