First Post-War Charity Ball Tonight

By Helen Hutchison. This evening will witness the first large charity ball to be sponsored by the Junior League since pre-war days and the fact that the philanthropy for which the ball is given, a moderate priced home for employed girls, will continue to be the object for which the league will bend its future efforts is significant enough to enlist the patronage of an unusually large number of Portland folk. The ball will be the inspiration for numerous dinner parties at the homes of members of the social continent, and also a large number of party to give to the University club.

GEORGE B. WEBSTER, popular character man with the Baker Stock company this season.

George B. Webster, versatile character man who divides honors with Smith Davies in the Baker Stock company, is a humanitarian. The other day he heard a cricket blithely chirping in his dressing room and after a diligent search, located the little chap. Taking pity on the cheerful fellow, Webster caught him and took him out, after rehearsal, to the city park blocks where these days it is either sunny or rainy, but always green.

"If that cricket could be happy down there on those concrete floors," Webster philosophized, when he should be out where it is soft and green, we poor humans ought to take a few lessons from him in optimism."

tea and sewing meeting Friday afternoon at her home in East Madison street. Contributions for the work carried on by the war mothers in behalf of the families of ex-soldiers will be gratefully accepted by the committee, of which Mrs. Thomas J. Harper is chairman.

A Halloween dance will be given at B'nai B'rith hall Saturday evening. Halloween decorations and refreshments will add to the evening's pleasure.

The women of St. Francis parish will give a card party in the parish hall Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock to which the different parishes in the city are invited. Refreshments will be served and three prizes will be awarded to winners at cards. The committee on arrangements includes Mrs. M. J. Pennell, Mrs. T. B. Ford, Mrs. Ladd Fisher, Mrs. T. Sullivan, Mrs. G. J. Schmidt and Mrs. Kasper.

Miss Eleanor Gile was hostess at her home in Kearney street for a most informal tea when she called on a few friends in for the afternoon Thursday.

Mrs. Lowell Ellsworth Kern (Jean Stevens) is a visitor in the city at the home of her mother, Mrs. Jasper G. Stevens.

Miss Otella Hendrickson, a prominent member of the alumnae of Good Samaritan hospital, who is leaving soon for China, was the honor guest at a delightful luncheon given Thursday in the grill of the Hotel Portland by the members of the alumnae association. Covers were placed for 75. Miss Emily Lovelidge, superintendent of Good Samaritan hospital, gave a talk and wishes contributed with words of good wishes and farewells. Miss Ruth Emery was chairman of the committee arranging the affair.

The affair given in connection with a benefit sale for the hospital fund of the American War Mothers. Mrs. Fisher was assisted by a number of members of the organization. Mayor Baker was a guest of honor and spoke of the needs of a hospital for ex-service men. The regular meeting held Wednesday the war mothers spent the afternoon making utility bags for the veterans now under treatment in local hospitals. Mrs. T. M. Loughlin will be hostess for a benefit

"Gems of Joy" Captivates Hipp. Fans

NELL and Elsie Gilbert, with a pair of pretty voices and a lot of excellent songs and entrancing dances, fairly captured the Hippodrome audience Sunday night with their act entitled "Gems of Joy." Both are clever in the manipulation of their toes and their songs are catchy and likable.

"The Cautious Girls" is the title of a musical revue of exceptional merit. Five lively chorus girls, led by Bonnie Barr, hand out a lot of entertaining songs and character. Male assistants in the act are Edward Moore and Emil Shy as "lord" and "duke," respectively.

Nato and Rizzo have "An Act With a Kick" consisting of very good musical selections rendered with the violin and accordion. Dick Gardner and Anna Revere are a versatile pair, with a hat full of card tricks, artistic juggling and as the type face to be used. At the same time large sizes of the same face were purchased, so that there would be uniformity in all work done with this type.

The reason for the selection was the belief that it was one of the few good type faces which could be satisfactorily used on the line type. The Odd Fellow letter from Joseph W. Phinney of the American Type Foundry company, connecting the type face and the late William Dean Howells in an interesting way.

"William Dean Howells died recently. The Franklin old style was my opportunity for first meeting him. It was in the old Dickinson foundry and I must give the year 1867, on a Saturday afternoon when I was just closing the office. There was a sturdy, well-faced, rather shabby-looking chap came in, with a list of Franklin old style sorts to be cast and sent to a paper published in Ashland, Ohio. He was the editor, and created the American realistic novel. Howells never overcame his liking for moving around—never settled anywhere very long; enjoyed change, was adaptable, at home wherever he hung his hat at night. He admired the Franklin old style as a type face, insisted upon his early books being printed in it, and we were fairly intimate for many years, drifting together from time to time to discuss the printing and making of books. Old-time printing never appealed to him in those days simply because it was ancient, but he had a discriminating appreciation of what was good."

Monte Blue has just returned to New York from Kentucky where shots were taken for the Charles Maigno production of "The Kentuckians," from the novel by John Fox Jr.

Chatterer Makes Fun of Buster Bear. (Copyright, 1920, by T. W. Burgess. By Thornton W. Burgess. I must in truth confess, A lot of trouble and is bound To get folks in a row.

Chatterer the Red Squirrel more unruhly tongue than the tongue of Chatterer, the Red Squirrel. It seems that he can no more keep it still than can the Green Forest mouse. Perhaps it is because he likes the sound of his own voice. Whatever the reason, Chatterer's tongue is going a large part of the time, he is awake.

It wouldn't be so bad if no one but himself got in trouble as a result of that unruly tongue, but quite as often as not it gets other people in trouble. This is the reason that Chatterer is not loved by his neighbors. Most of them look upon him as a mischief maker, and you just know a mischief maker never is loved.

Now it just happened that Chatterer saw Buster Bear trying to dig out Whitefoot, the Wood Mouse. He was in a tree close by and saw all that happened. He saw Whitefoot dive into his little tunnel and he saw Buster Bear leap up the ground with his great claws. He saw Whitefoot dart out of another doorway and climb the tree right back of Buster and hide in a hollow in a dead branch halfway up.

It ticked Chatterer. It always does tickle him to see any one bigger than himself fooled by any one. Chatterer failed hugged himself in glee as he watched Buster Bear working so hard for nothing.

"Go it, Buster! Go it!" he shouted. "Don't let such a pinch of nothing get away from you! I've heard Whitefoot boast that you are not smart enough to catch him, and now is your chance to get him!"

Buster did go it. He made the dirt fly as he tore up the ground with his great claws. It was very exciting and Chatterer jerked his tail until it was a wonder it didn't snap off. All the time he kept shouting encouragement to Buster Bear and urging him to dig faster.

But at last Buster had torn up the ground all around without finding Whitefoot—the Wood Mouse and realized that somehow he had been fooled. He stopped digging and on his face was a decidedly foolish look. Then Chatterer grew saucy and impudent. He began to make fun of Buster Bear. His tongue fairly flew.

"Stupid! Stupid! Stupid!" he shrieked.

Buster Bear and up another tree, flitting his tail in the most impudent manner. Three times he did this and the third time Buster lost his temper. He rushed at Chatterer and he did it so under it didn't snap off. Chatterer jumped the nearest tree, which happened to be the very one Whitefoot the Wood Mouse was on. Tip the tree whisked Chatterer, and from one of the upper branches looked down and made faces at Buster Bear, all the time calling him names.

Buster Bear looked up and growled, and an ugly sounding, rumbling growl it was. Then he started to climb up that tree.

Women's Clubs

BY VELLA WINNER. Celebrating the return of their honored member, Mrs. Holbrook, from a summer sojourn with her husband, in Alaskan waters, the Highland Travel club was served at the home of Mrs. Stokes, 455 Prescott street, on Thursday last with an elaborate wild game dinner. 'Twas an occasion for a flow of wit and mirth that will long linger in the hearts of those present. Retiring from the genial hostess' dining room, the formal program was carried out, followed by an impromptu talk by Mrs. Holbrook on her summer trip that was replete with interest and information and which the members hope to have "continued in the next" for some time to come. Mrs. Oakerman then gave a brief review of the Hoosier poet's life, followed by some of his lines, which always touch and thrill the heart. November 4, the club will meet with Mrs. Holbrook, 561 Going st. Selections from Illey will be in order from each member, and the postponed initial trip to Hawaii will then be taken, as well as several new members received.
