Northwest are denied in a statement published in the November issue of the "Four L Bulletin" and signed by managers of 23 of the largest mills and logging companies in Oregon and Washington. The Bulletin is the official organ of the Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen, an organization of employers and employes numbering approximately 40,000 members in the four North-western states. Managers of the camps and mills state that they are opposed to any movement to kill the eight hour day in the Northwest lumber industry and they urge cooperation to this end from lumber operators outside the Loyal Legion.
