

Cottage Will Be 'Warmed' This Evening

By Helen Hutchison
THE Anna Mann cottage, newly completed social center for women at Reed college, will enter upon its career this evening at a pretentious house-warming. Every member of the Reed community from the president of the board of regents to the dishwasher's third assistant, expected to participate in the "warming" process, and incidentally, the sum of $1 will be painlessly extracted from each guest. The affair is the first step in a campaign for a furniture fund which aims to supply $2500 for the new building.

Literata Hear Review of "Mr. Wu"

Steele at the meeting of the current literature department of the Portland Women's club, held Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. D. M. Watson, assisting hostesses being Mrs. Frank McCullis, Mrs. G. P. Eisman, Mrs. S. A. Murhard, Frank Willmet, Mrs. Allen Cutler and Mrs. H. J. Biggs. Mrs. Frederick A. Krebs contributed three songs to the pleasure of the afternoon. A number of interesting announcements concerning the activities were made. The Christmas meeting of the department, which is always happily anticipated, will be held at the home of Mrs. Wright Ernie in Laurelhurst, when a novel program will be presented.

"Scandals" Are Happy Bits Of Fun

By E. C. B.
ALTHOUGH it is a temptation to label "Duke" Rogers as the "whole show," a large Portland audience Thursday night thoroughly enjoyed the several hours of fun and frolic brought with him in the form of "Scandals of 1919," and it welcomed back to the fold his new wife, Grace Cameron, for whom an enthusiastic reception always waits.

Grace Cameron gets a thunderous hand for her effort in presenting an interpretation of "Cook-Eyed" Hogan's new play offering—a tough with a dirty face and a penchant for rolling the bones. Miss Cameron's appearances are confined to specialties. The costuming of the Scandals is a color review, cut high at the bottom and low at the top. The scenic treatment is in many cases unusual and always attractive to the eye. Of course there is no head nor tail to the Scandals, since it is a typical girl and music show, and its fun lines make rather too much of the whiskered assault on prohibition. If the offering could be improved upon generally, it would be by giving us more of Rogers and Miss Cameron. The Scandals of 1919 remain in Portland until Saturday night, with a special Saturday matinee.

Sunday Concert to Begin at 1 o'clock

The popular concert at The Auditorium will begin at 1 o'clock next Sunday afternoon, instead of 3 o'clock, the usual hour. This change is made because of the Christian Science lecture to be given in the Auditorium at 3 o'clock. Next Sunday's program includes numbers by Henry Klingfield, violinist; Mrs. Eloise Anita Cook, soprano, and Lucien E. Becker, organist. These concerts are given by the city of Portland and only a small admission fee to cover the incidental expenses is charged.

Motion Picture Ball Threatens to Be Big Mid-Winter Affair

Plans for a great mid-winter "movie ball," to be staged at The Auditorium just before the Christmas holidays were made at the meeting of the Motion Picture League of Oregon at the Benson hotel Thursday noon and Al C. Raleigh, editor of Screenland, was appointed chairman of a committee to arrange the event. The committee is already spreading a net over the motion picture colonies of the west coast to draw to Portland a star artist from every studio, and later the Eastern studios will be invited. "It will be our ambition," Raleigh announced today, "to bring to Portland the greatest assembly of motion picture stars yet gathered in one place on the Pacific coast and the program for the motion picture ball will be the brightest entertainment we are able to provide."

Peggy Marsh Returns To Fight Field Will

New York, Nov. 19.—Peggy Marsh arrived here on the battle to determine if she should be allowed to fight in the ring. Her opponent is Mandy, the champion of the world. Marsh, who comes from London, where she has just completed a long engagement with Mary Nash, announced that she would personally bring action in the American courts to secure her son's "rights."

Did Not Help Her Any

Mandy had been troubled with a toothache for some time before she tried sufficient courage to go to the dentist. The moment he touched her tooth she screamed. "What are you making such a noise for?" he demanded. "Don't you know I'm a painless dentist?" she asked. "Why do you cry?" Mandy sobbed. "My tooth is so painful, but it ain't."

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

A Little Red Spy
By Thornton W. Burgess
Nobody ever likes a spy.
—Peter Rabbit.
THAT is quite true. People with the habit of spying on other people, trying to find out what they are doing and all about them, are disliked and distrusted. Sometimes spying is necessary in a good cause, but it is only in such a case, a dishonest one, that anyone who thinks well of himself or his friends will ever spy.
One reason that Sammy Jay isn't better liked among his neighbors in the Green Forest is because he is such a spy. He is always sneaking about, trying to find out the business of his neighbors. Peter Rabbit has quite as much curiosity as anyone I know, but Peter never spies about what his neighbors are doing. He is honest and he doesn't sneak about spying.

Chatterer hid in the thick of a hemlock tree and watched Rusty.

So Chatterer hid in the thick of a hemlock tree and watched Rusty. appeared as before in the same direction, taking with him another fat hickory nut. In a few minutes he was back again.
This time Chatterer changed his hiding place so as to see behind those young hemlock trees. Pretty soon Rusty appeared with a fat hickory nut. He looked this way and that way. Then he hurriedly ran to a certain place, pulled away the leaves on the ground and put that fat hickory nut down. He was back to Chatterer, so that the latter could see just where he put that nut, but he saw him pull the dead leaves back over the place, and that was enough.
There must be a hole down there," thought Chatterer, "and he is filling it. As soon as he disappears I'll have a look. Then I'll wait until he has filled it. Some day when I know he isn't about I'll just take those fat hickory nuts over to one of my store-houses and he'll never know what has become of them."
Chatterer snickered softly to himself as he watched Rusty go another of his nuts. The instant Rusty was out of sight Chatterer whisked down from his hiding place and over to the place where Rusty had hidden that nut.
The next story: Chatterer's Great Surprise.
