HEILIG—On November 24 F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest will present at the Heilig theatre their Oriental extravaganza, "Chu Chin Chow." The great spectacle will remain until the evening of Saturday, November 27. The same cast and production complete, fresh from a second season at the Century theatre, New York, will be brought to Portland. This season the producers will show for the first time the 141 new mannequin costumes recently imported from England and exactly duplicates of the costumes now being shown in the jubilee edition of "Chu Chin Chow," during its fourth year of continuous playing at His Majesty's theatre, London, where despite air raids and the war, this attraction has survived and played to the largest receipts in the history of world theatricals.

Vaudeville

ORPHEUM—Only six performances of Orpheum vaudeville will be presented at the Heilig this week, as the Orpheum management has relinquished the usual Wednesday matinee to the Heilig Theatre company, on account of the engagement of "Chu Chin Chow." This arrangement necessitates closing of the Orpheum show with the performance Tuesday night. The regular patrons of the Orpheum matinee Wednesday will be accommodated with tickets for the Monday or Tuesday matinee, as they desire. Milroy A. Anderson, the Orpheum treasurer, having set tickets aside for this purpose.

All Show House Heads May Join Picture League

EARLY enlistment of the interest of all theatre members who are not already members is expected by the officers of the Motion Picture League of Oregon, according to expressions at the league's last meeting. The league's membership already includes most of the motion picture house managers and the film exchange folk, as well as several of the vaudeville house heads. However, the legitimate stage is not yet represented.

Jack Perrin Nearly Drowns Under Wave

Jack Perrin, who is Eva Novak's leading man in her latest Universal photoplay, "The Torrent," had a narrow escape from drowning at Balboa a few days ago. As part of the story he is stalked out on the beach by a gang of smugglers and left to drown with the rising tide. While the scene was being filmed something resembling a tidal wave washed about 40 feet ashore, drenching the company, director and camera man and almost drowning the helpless leading man before he could be released from his bonds.

'Black Beauty' Now Ready for Exhibit

Only the interior scenes remain to be filmed on "Black Beauty." David Smith, the director, took several months to make the animal continuity scenes and the other exteriors. Lillian and George Randolph Chester, who wrote the scenario, made not one single change in the story of "Black Beauty," but doctored an independent story with it to make the picture more thrilling and more potential of the human interest. The additional story tells what Black Beauty, the horse, could not have seen but doctored an independent story with it to make the picture more thrilling and more potential of the human interest.

'River's End' May Be Given to Stage

The dramatization of James Oliver Curwood's story and film, "The River's End," is being made by Julian Johnson and Ray Long. The former is well known in the film world, being the editor of one of the most prominent of the motion picture weeklies. Woods is the producer in this instance. The film version of "The River's End," was one of the most successful photoplays of last season. Another Curwood story, "The Golden Snare," is at present being picturized.

Madame Minnie Fiske

Mrs. Minnie Madern Fiske, in Portland not long ago with "Miss Nellie of N'Orleans," has been signed by Sam H. Harris in New York to star in "Wake Up, Jonathan," and will start rehearsals at once, according to Harris' announcement. Madame Fiske has shined "Miss Nellie," and will have her new offering ready for opening at Atlantic City about holiday time. "Wake Up, Jonathan," will be staged by Madame Fiske's husband, Harrison Grey Fiske. It is from the pens of
