Whene'er the tempter comes around
To whisper in your ear,
Be deaf as any wooden post,
Be sure you do not hear.
—Chatterer the Red Squirrel.

THE Chatterer knows. He has listened to the tempter and it has caused him a lot of trouble and a lot of trouble for other people. So he has found out that it is a lot easier not to listen to your own business you would have had the tempter than it is to listen and then overcome the temptation. If you don't isten you won't be tempted. When Chatterer, peeping out from the hollow log which he was using for a storehouse, saw the hunter with his terrible gun looking up in the hickory tree he was at first simply angry. He knew that where he was he was safe. He knew, too, that he would probably be safe, even though he were up in that very tree above the hunter. He was too small to be worth a shot. So Chatterer was not afraid, but he was angry. It always makes him angry to see a hunter. It made him doubly angry because he knew that that hunter had no business there. He knew that this was Farmer Brown's land and that Farmer rown and Farmer Brown's boy didn't allow hunting there. In fact, right on that very tree was a sign forbidding it. The hunter walked all around that tree looking up, hoping to catch a glimpse of Happy Jack the Grey Squirrel. He didn't, for Happy Jack wasn't there. Chatterer grinned as he saw the It always makes him angry to see look of disappointment on that hunter's face. Then the hunter started into the Green Forest.
