

OPEN CHANNEL IS RECOMMENDED BY ENGINEER BROWN

The North Portland industries committee will file the report of its engineer, W. G. Brown, recommending an open channel improvement of North Portland harbor with the port of Portland commission and then seek the support of the special committee on port legislation named by the Chamber of Commerce, it was announced this morning.

According to Brown an open channel will be more economical as well as more satisfactory to the industries affected. Basing his estimates on the actual costs of the Aladdin fill, Brown reported that an open channel 300 feet wide and 25 feet deep would require $212,872.

Project Engineer Gilbert of the Port of Portland estimated that a closed harbor would cost $431,832, inclusive of the sewer which would necessarily be constructed for drainage in the event that the closed harbor project should be adopted. He estimated the cost of an open harbor, the dimensions in all instances being 300 feet wide and 25 feet deep, at $339,792.

It is clear from the Brown report that if his estimates of dredging are applied to closed harbor construction as well as to the open harbor project, the latter will be the more economical as well as a more satisfactory method of procedure, even after having made the deduction for the sewer which the closed harbor would render necessary," commented Alfred A. Aya, vice president of the Peninsula Industrial company.

Portland Chapter Leads in Campaign To Help Red Cross

The fourth annual roll call of Portland chapter closed on Thursday. Though the $50,000 membership goal still is far away, the local chapter is said by H. E. Witham, campaign manager, to have outstripped other chapters of the northwest by a comfortable margin, so far as reports received here show.

The benefit auction held by Portland chapter of the American Red Cross on downtown corners last night met with a hearty response, and the stock contributed by local merchants was wiped out by the ardent bidders. D. J. Finn presided as auctioneer, and was assisted by a committee from the Kiwanis club and young women of the Red Cross chapter.

Carl Pierce Found Paralyzed in Home

Hood River, Or., Nov. 26.—After suffering a severe paralytic stroke, Carl A. Pierce, mill worker of Cascade Locks, was found lying where he had fallen in his home, two days after he was stricken. He is unable to speak or move and will probably die. Pierce, who is believed to have a brother in Kansas, was 68 years of age and had worked in the mill for many years until it was shut down two weeks ago. He was somewhat of a crank on photography and a valuable collection of photographic apparatus was found in his home.

There are now thousands of men unemployed in the United States. The falling of prices is having its usual running mate.
