White as Snow

Ordinary washings—by hand—do not, as a rule, get the clothes clean. But the Thor does. Your finest clothes—or the heaviest fabrics—are slushed, surged—whirled in the smooth maple cylinder—rotated eight times one way—then eight times in reverse—in the foamy hot cleansing suds till they're wonderfully clean. There isn't a step in the process that can possibly harm the most fragile fabrics. And no chance of a single piece being neglected. Let us show you the

CITY TO DEFEND SHAPE OF BRIDGE INSURANCE COST

The city of Portland will continue paying its pro rata of the insurance on the bridges spanning the Willamette river within the city, City Attorney La Roche announced this morning, and that arrangement will doubtless continue as long as the present bridges stand.

"Commissioner Pler asked this department to take up the matter of the county commissioners' paying the insurance premiums on the bridges because, inasmuch as the legislature has placed the operation of these bridges with the county, and has authorized Multnomah county to rebuild them in the event of destruction, it is the logical conclusion that the commissioners, who would have to rebuild the structures were they destroyed, are the beneficiaries under the insurance policies, and not the city," La Roche said.

County Pays Later. "The county commissioners will have to take care of the insurance on all future structures built to replace any of the present bridges," the city attorney added, "but until such time I prefer to have the city pay the usual part of the insurance. The principal thing is to safely assure both county and city of payment for all losses by the insurance companies, and to safeguard both county and city a clause stipulating that the question of title of the bridges does not relieve the insurance companies of responsibility for losses by fire in the future policies, as this department had that clause inserted in the policies now in effect."

Title Dispute Cited. The city attorney cited a case in California wherein the title to certain property was clouded merely by one person holding an option on a building owned by another at the time it was destroyed by fire. The insurance company refused to pay the insurance on the ground that the title was thus doubtful and the higher courts sustained the insurance company in its position. A clause referring to the question of title in the Willamette bridges' policies forestalls any such action by the insurance companies and gives adequate protection to both city and county, La Roche stated.

PLANS FOR OPENING OF SALEM STREET ARE READY

City Engineer Laugaard has completed the plans and will file his report on the proposed opening of Salem street from Fourth to the Willamette street at the Wednesday meeting of the city council. Anti-Saloon League Joins in War Upon Dry Law Violators

The fight against the liquor traffic is a long way from being ended, W. J. Herwig, superintendent of the Oregon Anti-Saloon League, told his congregation at University Park Methodist church Sunday night. He said that the constitutionality of the law did not guarantee freedom from liquor, so long as congress retains the right to decide the legal alcoholic content. For this reason Oregon, in conjunction with other states, is organizing a force to assist peace officers in running down moonshiners and bootleggers. The league has organized a law enforcement department which is giving assistance where requested or needed.

Doheny tops the Democratic electors with 229,191.

WILD SATURNALIA OF SPENDING OVER, SAYS FARNSWORTH

C. A. Farnsworth, associate director of the government savings organization of the Twelfth federal reserve district, is in Portland on a tour of the Northwest, including Utah. He is here to confer with state savings officials on the work.

"Considering the disturbed economic and financial conditions of 1920, the treasury department and the government savings organization are glad that the Twelfth federal reserve district feel that their post-war financing work has been successful and we look to 1921 with a confidence in steadily increasing work for government securities of all classes," said Farnsworth. "I am now making a hurried trip through the Twelfth federal reserve district in connection with plans for 1921."

"The work of the government savings organization, which is under the supervision of Governor John U. Calkins, of the Federal Reserve bank of San Francisco, embraces the problem of saving with a view to government securities, the distribution of treasury certificates of indebtedness, which are issued from time to time at attractive rates of interest, and usually for short terms, and the work of the government savings organization, which has met with great success during 1920, to provide a secondary market for Liberty bonds. Besides these activities, the organization is also engaged in the sale of Thrift and Savings Stamps and treasury savings certificates."

EXTRAVAGANCE IS ENDED

"The treasury department and the government savings organization for the Twelfth federal reserve district feel that they have contributed largely by a year of incessant advocacy of thrift and sane living to the present definite trend to normal standards. It was a colossal waste of a year, with its rich and poor alike dissipating themselves in a saturnalia of spending. It seemed impossible at times to make ourselves heard. But the insistence of our appeal has had its effect and the tide has turned."

"As an instance of this, reports to the Federal Reserve bank of San Francisco from the centers of population throughout the Twelfth federal reserve district indicate that during the last five months there has been an ever increasing demand on the part, especially of small investors, for Liberty bonds at present attractive market prices, yielding as high as 6 1/2 per cent return on the investment. In addition to this, millions of treasury certificates of indebtedness have been purchased by investors in the Twelfth federal reserve district, while through the postoffices and banks of the district and in the schools we have sold millions of Thrift and Savings Stamps and treasury savings certificates."

THRIFT EDUCATION WINS

"We are supported by the opinions of some leading financiers and economists of the country that no more important work is being done today in America than this thrift education, wherein, through actual saving and investment of small sums, large and large in the securities of our government, the men, women and children of America are learning the vital, practical lessons of thrift, independence and citizenship. Our public educators have recognized the importance of the teaching of thrift and are cooperating with us in the schools. In each of our seven states the federal government is public instruction is also director of thrift education by appointment from the treasury department. This itself shows the importance of carrying on the work of helping Americans to have and invest in government securities."

APOSTOLIC FAITH MISSION CENTER OF LEGAL FIGHT

Teachings and practices of the Apostolic Faith Mission, which has its headquarters in Portland, and whose head is the incorporation of Crawford and Crawford, composed of Florence L. and Raymond Crawford, mother and son, were bitterly attacked in Presiding Judge Tazwell's department of the circuit court today.

This was in the suit of Luke Thornton, in which he seeks an accounting for and restitution of properties to the extent of $10,000, which he says his former wife, Mrs. Frances Thornton, donated to a religious institution while under its dominion. The argument before the court was on a motion to strike out on the grounds that two causes of suit were erroneously united, the statutes of limitation have run and the plaintiff has been guilty of laches. The matter was taken under advisement by Judge Tazwell.

In this suit, in addition to Mrs. Thornton and the Apostolic Faith Mission and Crawford and Crawford, former State Corporation Commissioner Henry J. Schulderman has been made a defendant.

Henry Westbrook appeared for the plaintiff and Waldemar Seider for the defendants. Westbrook charged that the mission induced Mrs. Thornton to convert $8000 worth of real estate into cash and give it to the institution, and that she had also turned in to it personal property to the value of $2000, and that it then excommunicated her.

"This organization, in the way it has conducted its affairs here in Portland," said Westbrook, "ought not to be permitted to operate in the state of Oregon. Families are broken up by its teachings, husbands and wives are separated, there is teaching of child abuse, and it is not permitted in this country; they have used their religious teachings to accumulate millions of dollars and then have used that money to buy property of converts have kicked them out. The state commissioner of corporations ought to know the causes we set up in this case so that he can take action."

HOME INDUSTRY PATRONAGE LAUDED AS FINE EXAMPLE

Appreciation of the action of the county commissioners in awarding to a local concern the contract for metal fixtures in the tax department of the sheriff's office has been shown by the Twelfth federal reserve district of Oregon through a vote of this organization. This fact was stated in a letter sent to the commissioners Monday.

SLAUGHTER HOUSES ARE DENOUNCED AS HEALTH MENACES

"Slaughter houses north of Columbia boulevard in the vicinity of Slough road and Peninsula avenue, from which much of the city's meat supply is obtained, are now operated under conditions of filth and in flagrant violation of all sense of decency to an extent I could never have believed possible in a civilized community," declared Commissioner of Public Affairs C. A. Bigelow today.

On complaint of the health department, Mayor Baker appointed Commissioners Bigelow and Mann to investigate the slaughter houses and, accompanied by City Health Officer Parrish, Dr. E. E. Chas and Government Inspector Joss, the commissioners inspected the abattoirs this morning.

As a result of the investigation the city health department is preparing an ordinance to present to the city council next week declaring the slaughter houses conducted by Sterrett & Co. and Howitt Co., public nuisances and ordering their immediate abandonment. The ordinance will also regulate all slaughter houses, compelling the meat concerns to conduct them along sanitary lines.

"One of the three slaughter houses inspected was in fair condition, but the other two were in a horrible state," Dr. Parrish said. "It is vitally important that the city legislate at once to make it impossible for other institutions to become so filthy and unsanitary in the future."

Commissioner Mann said he indorsed all Commissioner Bigelow and Dr. Parrish said about the condition of these sources of meat supply and would urge the council to take immediate action not only to remedy present conditions but to govern all slaughter houses, that citizens would be assured clean meats handled under sanitary conditions.

Both commissioners and health officials favor a municipal concrete central abattoir in which all butchers would be compelled to carry on their business under close inspection.

"Get out of here or I'll cut you in two," When Mrs. L. N. Case of the Garnet hotel and J. W. Tice of the Couch building heard these menacing words, they reconsidered their plan of seizing Harry Lewis at noon today when they saw him with some clothing, not his, in a room at the hotel.

Hotly quitting the room where Lewis was swinging a bad looking razor, they called the police, while Lewis rushed to the street.

Motorcycle Patrolman Abbott found Lewis quite meek when Tice pointed him out, and the man made no use of the razor.

Lewis is being held for investigation at police headquarters. He said he lives at Spokane.
