

WALTERS SHAKEN BY EXHIBIT OF BLOODY CLOTHES

Dramatic scenes were enacted in Circuit Judge Tucker's court room this morning during the examination of Husted A. Walters, on trial for the murder of Patrolman Jerome Palmer, November 17. Walters broke down and his convulsions of sobbing were so severe that the court adjourned for 10 minutes to allow him to recover. Twice during his testimony did Walters lose entire control of his feelings. The second time was when the bloody coat of the dead man was held before him as he was questioned about the shooting.

Walters said he was under the influence of liquor and had no clear idea of plan of what he would do if he were stopped by officers while he was out on the hold-up program with his soldier comrade, John Tillman. He said when he became aware that two patrolmen were bearing down on them his one idea was to escape, and that he fired a shot so as to scare them.

"I had no idea of shooting anybody," he said. "I thought I'd fire a shot and then get away."

"You didn't intend to hit the officer?" questioned District Attorney Evans.

"No, sir," was the response.

"And you fired right at Patrolman Palmer, shooting right at this badge, just over his heart?" continued the district attorney, reaching down and holding before Walters the bloody garment as he pointed to the hole made by the bullet.

Walters immediately collapsed, throwing his arms over the witness chair and burying his head in them as his whole frame shook with sobs. It was then the recess was taken.

THOMAS CULLEN, ACCUSED OF ROBBERY, PLEADS ALIBI

Testimony was concluded Tuesday evening in the trial of Thomas Cullen, former private detective, on the charge of robbing the home of Ding Wing, at Fourth and Salmon streets, of a safe containing nearly $2000 in money. Arguments before the jury were begun this morning in Circuit Judge Morrow's court.

Cullen has set up an alibi defense, claiming he was at home with his children at the time the robbery was committed. His wife testified that Cullen was at home when she left for her work at 5 o'clock in the evening and that he was also at home at 9:30 o'clock when she telephoned about some groceries. Cullen claims the money that was taken in his home by the officers was coin that he had received from a Mrs. Pearl Pehatty, who came to his house and asked him to give her currency for the coin. He said that the next morning, when he learned of the robbery of Ding Wing he took the money to Mrs. Pehatty's home, as he knew she was intimately acquainted with the Chinaman, and intended to turn it back and get the currency he had given in exchange, but that the door was locked and he could get no response. He then left it at the home of a friend, Clifford Ellis, but later Ellis took it back to Cullen's place and turned it over to Mrs. Cullen.

DR. SCHMIDT ORDERED TO PAY WIFE $60 A MONTH

Further airing of the domestic troubles of Dr. Adolph O. Schmidt, well known physician and surgeon of Portland, and his wife, Alta V. Schmidt, who are seeking divorce, was given in Presiding Judge Tazewell's court Tuesday, when a motion to increase the allowance as temporary alimony pending the hearing of the divorce suit was argued. The court ordered an allowance of $60 a month for Mrs. Schmidt.

It was averred that Dr. Schmidt is worth more than $15,000, while Mrs. Schmidt has to work in the basement of a department store; that he has recently bought $5000 worth of bonds from his brother, who is a banker in Albany; has purchased a new automobile of expensive make and has hired attorneys at a high price and detectives to watch Mrs. Schmidt.

It was alleged that Mrs. Schmidt has run large bills for various stores without his knowledge and that he finally had to issue orders to the stores that she was to have no further goods on his account.

Graham promptly moved for a dismissal of the charge.

SOFT DRINK MEN TO FIGHT REVOCATION

Bigelow extended that gentleman the thanks of the council for the excellent service he had rendered in apprehending and convicting bootleggers in his neighborhood.

AH SHUCKS IS READY

Before they were fully recovered from the shock caused by the policemen's unique practice in jurisprudence the councilmen received a second jolt. Lee Yuen, alias Ah Charlie, Ah Shucks, etc., 31 North Fourth street, had been summoned to defend himself in the proceedings to close his place for conducting a lottery in violation of the law. Lee Yuen's case was called and, a dapper, young Americanized Chinaman jauntily strode across the council chamber and favoring the councilmen with a plying, condescending smile, took the witness chair and announced: "You may now proceed if you like."

Two policemen testified to arresting and convicting Lee Yuen for conducting a lottery at the address given. Whereupon the dapper young celestial blandly addressed the council. "I presume you gentlemen do not realize it, but your proceedings are utterly ridiculous," the youthful fashion plate told the councilmen. "You are trying bootleggers; this is a lottery case and, therefore, your proceedings are ridiculous."

BARBUR SNOTS, MANN GURGLES

Councilman Barbur snorted. Mann registered a strangled gurgle. He sweetly cooed, "Well, I'll be, say, what!" Chairman Bigelow gulped, took off his glasses, wiped them, then took another look at the callous youth. "Say, you are young. Are you Lee Yuen?" Bigelow demanded.

No, he was not Yuen; nor was he hired by Yuen, nor did he have an interest in Yuen's business, nor was he Yuen's lawyer, the young Chinaman informed the council. Yuen was too busy to obey the council's summons, so he had come as a friend to advise the council of its mistake, said the youth. "It was not necessary for Yuen to come; I am here, and, of course you cannot cancel his license." Yuen's license was immediately canceled by unanimous vote of the council.

DAN'S TEARS UNAVAILING

Other cases which enlivened the afternoon session were those of V. Lyles, 270 Couch street, and G. Miller, 347 1/2 Morrison street.

Attorney Dan Powers, appearing for Lyles, fairly brought tears to the eyes of the audience when he pictured the terrible plight the council would put his client in by revoking his license, "and he so innocent of wrong doing." "Every thing. Following three police witnesses' testimony to the effect that in their opinion Lyles was but a tool for Mike Alagich, whose license had been previously revoked at that address, the council unanimously voted to revoke Lyles' license.

G. Miller was charged with permitting gambling and allowing miners in his place. "The police could offer no evidence nor satisfactory testimony of his guilt, and Miller was allowed to continue in business."

OTHER HEARINGS THURSDAY

Action on the following cases ended the hearings until Thursday morning.

when the clean-up campaign will be resumed:

Borrelli & Felice, license revoked; Cardie Acipis, 55 North Sixth street, revoked; Kosta Luzaich, 373 North Second, revoked; Nick Popovich, 95 North Third, revoked; Peter Andros, 427 1/2 Washington, revoked; Charikoff & Co., 115 North Third, not revoked; George Popos, 459 Washington, not revoked; Tony Gasolia, 241 Burnside, not revoked; Ben Slavovitch, 425 Second, not revoked; Angelo Dangeles and Sam Calka, 237 Morrison, not revoked; J. W. Chandler, "Idle Hour," 145 1/2 Third, not revoked.

INSKEEP IS SUSPENDED

I have decided that Captain Inskeep alone is to blame for a packed courtroom nearly three hours, waiting on policemen under his command to appear and testify at the revocation hearings Monday morning, and will issue a formal order reprimanding that officer for negligence of duty and suspending him for 24 hours," Acting Mayor Bigelow announced prior to calling the council together at the regular Wednesday meeting this morning.

Bigelow stated he had worked out a system of handling the orders at police headquarters, and will issue a formal order reprimanding that officer for negligence in the future and would take the matter up with Chief of Police Jenkins on the chief's return today.

Bigelow's action is taken as a complete exonerated of Captain Harris and Sergeant Oelsner, who were reported Tuesday to be in line for reprimands.

CLARA HAMON HEIR, 'LOST' WILL PROVIDES

are entitled to something of what I helped make—the fortune of Jake Hamon."

SIX PATHY FOR FAMILY

If these sentences suggest a hard-hearted mercenary woman, then the writer is not fulfilling his obligations as a reporter. For the woman spoke so sweetly that she won't after she mentioned the aged father and mother, waiting, praying in their El Paso home, and her 19-year-old brother sitting beside us in the Chihuahua park.

"The will," Mr. Hamon told me, he existed before he died. I was to be left one fourth of his estate. I know that this is so. I know he drew up and signed his will just as well as I know that he loved me and that I loved him—when I was not hating him for his brutality."

"BUT"—and then came one of the strange details of this strangest of stories.

"But my share in the will was conditional. At least that's what I was told, that's what I was told, just before I left Ardmore and came down here. NOTHING TO CONCEAL."

They told me—those in Ardmore I believe to be my friends—that the will said if I ever shot Mr. Hamon I was not to share in his estate. They made me believe that it was better to have the will appear to be lost until after I have been proved innocent of the killing. Then, they allowed me to believe, the will is to be 'found' and I am to be given my share."

"But I know I'm innocent now and have nothing to conceal from the world and I don't want anyone to give me anything but what is justly mine."

"As I told you I didn't pull the trigger of the gun, even if I did have it directed at Jake Hamon's head when he struck me down with that chair. The gun just went off. A blow like that naturally would make it fire, wouldn't it?"

"Well, as long as I didn't really shoot him and since I have made up my mind to conceal nothing from the world, why I'm telling this along with the rest of the story."

"But suppose," I interposed, "suppose the will remains missing? Maybe after all it never will be found."

She looked up with an expression of ingenueness that was childlike.

"Why, of course it will be found," she asserted. "I told you they said it was just being 'lost' until after I was cleared."

"Oh, if it isn't found; if I haven't placed my faith in men who are not my friends, why then—when I have to rely on in the whole big world?"

One of her two Mexican escorts bowed gravely. He is of the spiritualistic group of influential statesmen of Chihuahua which has taken the girl into its protection.

OREGON GOLD MINE SOLD FOR $150,000

Grants Pass, Or., Dec. 22.—The sale of the Boswell mine to Tom Norden and associates of Seattle, for a consideration of about $150,000, was announced Tuesday.

The mine is located in Josephine county, five miles southwest of Holland. This mine, which was discovered by R. Boswell and son in 1914, is one of the extremely rich propositions located in southern Oregon.

From the present shaft, which is but 20 feet deep, $46,000 in gold bullion has been taken.

From 1914 until 1918 Boswell and son operated the mine alone. In 1918 the younger man was drafted into the army and sent to France, where he succumbed to disease. Since 1918 the mine has been idle but under close guard. It was the scene of a daring robbery in 1918 when two men secured $600 in gold.

Increased Sum for Welfare Bureau Is Asked From County

Ben Selling, president of the Public Welfare Bureau association, and Bishop Walter Taylor, summer of the advisory board, appeared before the county commissioners this morning to express the appreciation of the bureau for the cooperation on the part of the commission during the year just closed, and to urge the importance of providing a more extensive budget appropriation for relief work during 1921.

The 1921 budget carries an item of $100,000 for this work. During the 11 months of 1920 the relief work has cost Multnomah county $52,000 and it is estimated that the total will reach $60,000 by the close of the year. The $50,000 tentative appropriation for 1921, said the speakers, would be entirely inadequate, as economic conditions make it certain that many more families would have to be given aid than during 1920, and that this is an imperative duty that the county government cannot escape. They advocated that a flat appropriation of $75,000 be made for relief work. The matter was taken under advisement.

Wolverton to Hear Protest on Sentence Of 18-Year-Old Girl

Comparison of sentences imposed last Wednesday by Federal Judge Wolverton upon Charles A. Elwell, former Jennings Lodge postmaster, and Sadie Schofield, 18-year-old Indian girl, at Tuesday's meeting of the Housewives' council, led to appointment of a committee to protest.

Elwell was sentenced to one year in the county jail and to make restitution for embezzling $2260 from the government. Miss Schofield was sentenced to six months in jail for raising a postoffice money order from $2.50 to $5.50. The housewives expressed the belief that the girl's penalty was too severe. Mrs. G. L. Williams, who brought up the matter, and Mrs. E. M. Simonton and Mrs. J. C. Othus were appointed a committee to call upon Judge Wolverton.

When informed this morning of the action of the council, Judge Wolverton said: "I shall be glad to receive the ladies and listen to their remarks. I will not, however, engage in any controversy. Matters which I attend to while on the bench should not be discussed by me while off the bench."

The property consists of 108 acres of patented mining land.
