(Overheard by the Advertising Manager)

—Just a few of the scores of highly complimentary remarks relating to our Sale of Men's Clothing, made by highly pleased customers during the first day of this great event. They make a better advertisement than we could write and they express the general feeling of satisfaction evidenced by every man of the hundreds who made purchases:

—"Positively the greatest sale I ever attended."

—"The finest bargain I ever got in my life—and I'm 55 years old!"

—"Getting this Overcoat for $36 is just like having a diamond pin handed to you along with it."

—"I've bought three suits practically for the price which I have been in the habit of paying for one."

—"If ever a store had the right to advertise that it was 'giving clothing away' this is the one time."

—And we could quote scores of others, all in the same trend. Your friends have probably told you about the wonderful bargains they have obtained or you have heard from others.
