

ROOSEVELT'S OLD HOME DEDICATED TO AMERICANISM

By Winfred Vanduzer
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

New York, Jan. 7.—In the narrow street of his birth Theodore Roosevelt lived again Thursday for a little hour.

A flag bellying down the west wind, voices from other countries lifted in praise, eyes dimming when the band played the "Star Spangled Banner" and through it all a sense of high hearted presence beloved of America in years that are gone.

Such was the laying of the cornerstone of what perhaps will be the greatest monument the world will know to the memory of Colonel Roosevelt—Roosevelt House, for the promotion of Americanism.

Several hundred men and women gathered before the new vacant building at 29 East Twentieth street, where once stood the house where Colonel Roosevelt was born in 1858 and where he lived until he was 13 years old.

Toward Broadway is a vacant place, a crevice in canyons of brick walls, where a second building has been torn away, and here the speaker's stand was erected.

JUSSEKAND SPEAKS
From here the ceremony was conducted by members of the Women's Roosevelt Memorial association, the organization raising funds and shouldering all responsibility of making possible the Americanization center. It is composed of some of the most prominent women in the country and is offered by Mrs. Leonard Wood as honorary president, Mrs. John Henry Hammond president, Mrs. Charles A. Bryan secretary and Mrs. A. Barton Hepburn treasurer.

The speakers were Jean Jules Jussekand, the French ambassador, who told something of the esteem in which his country holds the memory of the former president, and Mrs. Douglas Robinson, who spoke on "Memories of My Brother's Boyhood Home."

Little enough of that home now remains, as Mrs. Robinson saw it in recollections. Across the street and on either side are lofty and wholesale houses storing and selling yarns, curtains and fabrics. Rising all round like hills about a valley are stark walls of skyscrapers; toward the north the Metropolitan tower is thrust like an inquisitive finger into the clouds.

ALL DETAILS TO BE RESTORED
Gone are the tiny board dooryards, the ivy vines and trees under which the Roosevelt children played more than 50 years ago.

But according to the plans of the memorial association the house in which Colonel Roosevelt spent his early years will be restored outside and as nearly as possible in every detail as he would remember it.

Even the hair cloth chairs which scratched the legs of the Roosevelt children when they gathered round the dining room table will be put back.

An innovation, however, will be the "Rooseveltiana," or museum on the second floor, together with quarters for the curator. And in the space next door where another building will be put up there will be a huge auditorium where plays and lectures on good citizenship will be offered, also classrooms and a library where Americanism will be taught.

EUROPE PAYS HOMAGE
Messages from other countries today were brought by Baron de Cartier, chargé d'affaires; Senor Augusto Cochane de Alencar, ambassador from Brazil; Dr. Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, Cuban minister to this country, and Senor Don J. E. Lefevre of the legation of the republic of Panama.

Mrs. William Curtis Demoreest, vice president of the association, placed various autographed historical documents in the cornerstone. Major General Leonard Wood gave the dedicatory address.

Stirring features of the program were the concert of national airs by the police department band of this city and a salute to the flag by boy and girl scouts.

Mortality Is Light In 1920, Reports of Local Concern Show

Mortality was light among the 16,250 policy holders of the Oregon Life Insurance company during 1920, according to the annual report on the business of the company made by President A. L. Mills at the annual luncheon of officials and salesmen of the concern in the Elizabethan room of the Imperial hotel Thursday.

According to Mills' statement the company paid only $77,000 in death claims during the year, total insurance in force being approximately $24,500,000. Though the volume of insurance in force is more than $4,000,000 greater than a year ago, death claims paid for 1920 were $45,000 less than during 1919 and $16,000 less than in 1918.

Insurance written by the 50 agents of the company operating in Oregon and Idaho totaled $6,000,000 during the 12 months ending December 31, according to the official report.

C. S. Samuel, general manager, was chairman at the luncheon and Mayor Baker was the first speaker.

Following the luncheon the insurance men met at company headquarters in the Corbett building to transact the business of their fifteenth annual convention, which will continue through Friday, a program of addresses on insurance topics having been prepared.

OPERA DIRECTOR DRIVEN OUT BY WRANGLING STARS

Chicago, Jan. 7.—(I. N. S.)—Clashes of temperament that are said to have disturbed the harmonious relations of members of the Chicago Opera company ever since the opening of the present opera season, culminated today in announcement of the resignation of Gino Marinuzzi as artistic director of the company. Marinuzzi will remain as chief of conductors but will relinquish the post of maestro.

Recent reports have declared that there has been much friction in the company because of an alleged feud between Italian members and singers of other nationalities. It was charged that certain members of the company manifested a decidedly unfriendly attitude toward Charles Marshall, American tenor, whose recent debut was the sensation of the local season.

In announcing his resignation, Marinuzzi declared the work of his dual position as artistic director and chief of conductors was too heavy and that he desired to relinquish the former position.

"I cannot stand the wrangling of the stars any longer," he said. "They have given me nothing but sleepless nights."

Directors of the opera company have not accepted Marinuzzi's resignation, but have the matter under advisement.
