

PORTLAND AERIAL WHISKEY RUNNERS ARE TRACED TO S. F.

San Francisco, Jan. 13.—(I. N. S.)—It was learned this afternoon that D. C. Smith, a Portland prohibition officer, is in San Francisco investigating the reported extension to California of a "bootlegging" ring said to have been existing in Oregon for some time which employs several airplanes to transport liquor from the Canadian border into the United States.

Smith, who is now working out of the office of Prohibition Superintendent Conside, is reported to have secured information to the effect that the organization, which has a regular initiation fee and guarantees its members "protection," plans to extend its operations along the entire coast.

According to reports to the prohibition officers, the "ring" operates seven airplanes in its liquor carrying service, has also an auto service and at times secures carload shipments of "hooch" from its Canadian connections.

Love Reverse May Have Prompted Man To Drop From Sight

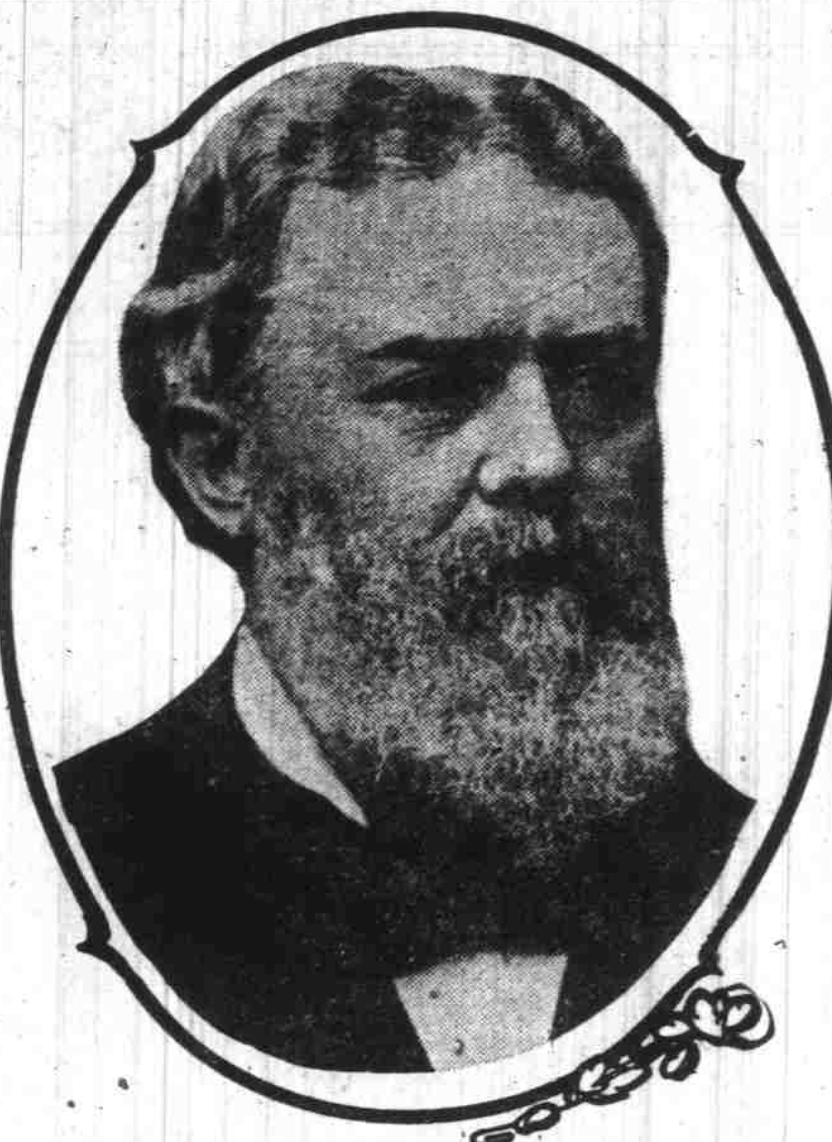

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 13.—(I. N. S.)—Joseph F. Lautner of Evanville, Ind., president of the Harvard Glee club and choir leader of the Harvard senior class, who mysteriously disappeared Monday, was located today in Denver, Colo., in care of a physician, according to a telegram received by Henry A. Yeomans of University hall, who has been conducting a nationwide search for the missing student.

Close friends of Lautner said today that he met with reverses in a love affair at a Maine summer resort last season and that he has been morose ever since and that this may be the basis for his strange disappearance.

Meeting to Boost Umatilla Power Site

Proposing formation of an effective organization to get behind and push to completion the development of the Umatilla rapids power site, a meeting of all interested has been called by the Umatilla Commercial club for January 26 at 1 p. m., according to a notice received this morning by the State Chamber of Commerce. A survey made recently at the Umatilla rapids shows that there is 120,000 potential horsepower and that the water would supply 150,000 acres of arid land.

MEMORY OF JUDGE HONORED

Portrait of Judge Matthew P. Deady, presented to circuit court of Josephine county, is ordered hung in courtroom. Judge Deady held first court in Southern Oregon district of what was then the territory of Oregon.

Grants Pass, Or., Jan. 13.—A portrait of Matthew P. Deady, first circuit court judge of this district and a leading figure in early Oregon history, is to grace the local courtroom. The portrait was presented to the court by George H. Durham and ordered hung by Judge Frank M. Calkins.

"The Journal of the first term of court held by Judge Deady in Josephine county at Wadito is said to be among the records of the county, long forgotten," said Judge Durham. "Mrs. Deady, his widow, wrote that Judge Deady and two others were appointed to the supreme court of the Territory of Oregon in March, 1852, and rode the circuit when

Stricken at Work, Man Dies Later

E. T. Anderson, 1363 East Harrison street, died at the Emergency hospital early this morning from an attack of heart failure. Anderson was employed by the Olympic cafeteria and was stricken while at work, dying shortly after being admitted to the hospital. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary L. Anderson, and one brother.

LAW TAKES MAN WHO STOLE GIRL OF FEEBLE MIND

Stealing of a feeble minded girl from the state institution at Salem for immoral purposes, and then transporting her through two Northwest states as his wife, constitute the charges in main filed today against Charles J. Cameron by Assistant United States Attorney Fiegel.

The government prosecutor declared this to be one of the worst cases ever called to his attention. Over two years ago Cameron, who was then assistant engineer at the institution, is said to have had trouble with his wife, who was employed as cook at the hospital. Upon leaving the institution Cameron is said to have taken 17-year-old Mary Alvis with him. The two are said to have first visited the E. A. convention at Klamath Falls and to have later traveled by auto throughout Oregon and Washington. The specific white slave charge against Cameron is for transporting the girl from Vancouver to Salem and back again three times during August and September, 1919. The case was brought to the attention of government officials recently when the girl gave birth to a child at the Salvation Army Rescue home.

Cameron was arrested Tuesday in Centralia, Wash., and is now held in the Multnomah county jail in default of bond.

MAN HELD FOR DRY LAW VIOLATION DISCHARGED

Antone Anderson was given a directed verdict this morning by Federal Judge Wolverton on a liquor charge, when the arresting government officers failed to produce enough evidence to convict him. Before counsel for Anderson realized what the court was about the judge suggested that he file a motion for a directed verdict. Anderson was arrested at 554 Savier street, when a still was found in his possession. No evidence was found that Anderson owned the still, ever had it in his possession, or any liquor. Anderson said the still was merely being stored in his home by an acquaintance. The judge held that a man could not be convicted on such shreds of evidence.

LOCAL CHARGES AGAINST SOLDIERS ARE DISMISSED

Charges of violating the national motor vehicle law filed against three Vancouver Warracks soldiers were dismissed this morning by Federal Judge Wolverton at the request of Assistant United States Attorney Fiegel. The request was made because Foster C. Cheney and Harmon B. Jones have been returned to the military authorities for prosecution and the third man, James L. Vest, has been returned to the Monroe (Wash.) reformatory to serve out the balance of his 15 year sentence for robbing a Vancouver store. The trio was arrested on Terwilliger boulevard on December 19 by police when found riding in an automobile said to have been stolen from H. H. Classen, 815 Main street, Vancouver. Vest and Cheney are the sons of Vancouver parents, while Jones' parents reside in Aberdeen.

"SHADOW" IS CLEVER

The machine was to go 10 miles an hour because in that way no other machines could follow it without attracting attention. It was to be marked with the spotlights so that "Shadow" could tell it a mile or more down the open stretch of road.

But the police thought it necessary for more than one machine to go along. Two others were sent, too. These two machines were kept circling the first machine. They would run in front of it for half a mile, turn around and run back up the road for a spell, then turn and race back again, a kind of "fox and geese" business.

"Shadow" had picked his place with great caution. Two miles beyond East Eighty-second street is another road which crosses the Base Line road, running north and south. On the north side of the Base Line road, just a little west of the cross road, back a hundred feet from the road, is a densely wooded section. A few feet from the road on which the machine was to pass "Shadow" picked out a large thick tree, which had the additional advantage of a sign board shielding the spot from the sight of a machine coming in to the city on the Base Line road.

Behind this tree the mayor-chief found the print of a knee, encased in corduroy trousers. Here "Shadow" knelt down while he waited for the machine carrying $25,000.

In front of this hiding place was a long stretch of barbed-wire fence, which skirted the road for several hundred feet in either direction.

This fence had been cut, giving a small place a few feet to one side of the tree where "Shadow" could dart out into the road, snatch up the package and slip back through the cut again.

The machine arrived. "Shadow" gave the signal, while it was still a little way down the road, then dropped the burning newspaper, which the mayor-chief found the next afternoon.

The package was thrown out. The machine ran on for a few feet, then two detives and a deputy sheriff jumped out and started for the spot. "Shadow" was gone.

When they encountered the barbed wire fence, "Shadow" was well on his way through the woods. By the time the other two machines had arrived, and detectives were running up and down the road and flashing lights throughout the fields, "Shadow" was out of the woods and had reached his hiding place.

Some of the detectives believe he had a machine hidden on the cross road, a few hundred feet back behind the clump of trees. Once in this machine, his getaway was a simple matter.

Mayor Baker today refused to allow photographs to be taken of the threatening letters. After permission from the recipients had been obtained, tantamount to waiver of whatever damage action might result, the newspapers were blocked by Captain of Inspectors Harry Circle, who insisted that the permission be given personally to him or his men.

Welfare Bureau to Renovate Cast-Off Clothes for Needy

That "waste may be turned into service and employment," the public welfare bureau Wednesday afternoon authorized its general manager, A. R. Gephart, to proceed immediately in the establishment of a plant for the renovation of old clothes.

If the directors of the Red Cross will consent, the renovation work that has been done by the Red Cross shop will be assumed by the bureau.

In any event a drive will be conducted for contribution of used garments. Handicapped persons and those affected by unemployment will be given work both in collecting the garments and in their renovation. Families in care of the public welfare bureau will be supplied and it is possible that sale of a portion of the garments will be authorized, in which event the proceeds will be used exclusively for the relief of the needy in the city.

All-Night Dances at Estacada Prohibited

Estacada, Or., Jan. 13.—The city council passed an ordinance prohibiting all night public dances at Estacada. The question had caused considerable argument and, when it was known that the city council planned to take action on the question, the American Legion circulated a petition of remonstrance. At the same time another petition was presented favoring such an ordinance. The city hall was too small to hold the crowd and the council adjourned to the high school auditorium. In the final vote all but one favored the ordinance.

Convict Who Escaped Camp to Be Returned For Perjury Trial

Federal Operative Mearns of Idaho and Guard Gibson of the state penitentiary have captured at Winnemucca, Nev., Chester K. Harness, who escaped from the penitentiary wood camp near Astoria last April 18. Harness is to appear in the federal court here Monday morning to face a charge of conspiracy to commit perjury in two homestead contest claims.

Harness was convicted on a $1500 larceny charge in Baker county and sentenced to the penitentiary on March 6, 1918. Three days after the federal grand jury in Portland had the perjury charge up for investigation Harness escaped. W. R. Bryon, chief of the Northwest federal operatives, traced Harness up to the time of his capture.

On Monday Harness, Zella Becker, Albert Glascock, Fred Graham, Nancy George, Phillips and George Harris are to stand trial in the federal court as joint conspirators on the perjury charge. Robert Logan, another co-defendant, pleaded guilty recently, and was sentenced to serve 13 months at McNeil's island.

Warrant Is Issued Here for Alleged Forger in Seattle

Seattle, Jan. 13.—(U. P.)—Alleged to have passed worthless checks amounting to $120 on the Benson and Portland hotels in Portland, while at liberty on $3000 bail on a first-degree forgery charge here, R. J. Weir, 37, was held in the city jail on an open charge this morning. He was arrested at the post-office last night by a detective.

Warrant for Weir's arrest was issued this morning by Municipal Judge Rossman on complaint of A. B. Campbell, manager of the Multnomah hotel. Other hotels are reported to have been victimized.

Weir, who was arrested through operations of the Burns agency, was wanted also on charges of passing checks at the Oregon hotel and at the Olympus hotel in Tacoma. The checks attributed to him at the Multnomah hotel aggregated $50, and three at the Oregon totalled $90.

Yeon Will Discuss State Road Program

Oregon's road program will be discussed by John B. Yeon, state highway commissioner, at a meeting of the Portland Realty board in the grill room of the Portland hotel Friday noon. Ex-City Attorney La Roche will explain the status of the railroad terminal situation and George Branch Riley, as chairman of the meeting, will tell of the favorable results of municipal advertising.

District Attorneys In Two-Day Session

The State Association of District Attorneys met today for a two days' session at the county courthouse. The subjects to be discussed are the better enforcement of prohibition and other laws and closer cooperation with federal agencies, also matters of mutual interest.
